FIRST ADVANCE BEYOND RUHR LINE IS MADE BY FRENCH

Vohwinkel, Important Junction West of Elberfeld, Is Occupied; Indications Are for Further Advance to Cut Berlin Express Trains and Traffic From Cologne

STINNES AND THYSSEN VISIT MUHLHEIM

Rumors of Conversations With French Revived — Ruhr Population Becoming Reconciled to Presence of the French.

By Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

(Copyright, 1923, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos., the New York World and the Post-Dispatch.)

ESSEN, Feb. 3.—The first French move beyond the Ruhr frontier was made late this afternoon, when Vohwinkel, an important junction west of Elberfeld, was occupied. The railroad stations at Lennep, Berg and Remscheid also were occupied. All indications are that the French intend to advance further on Barmen and Elberfeld, towards the south and east of Dortmund.

This will cut Berlin express trains and all other traffic from Cologne in the south and from Holland and northern Germany.

Neither Germany nor France have got a single carload of Ruhr coal since the blockade began. The little coke and coal reaching France and Belgium comes from the mines about Aix-la-Chapelle, not from the Ruhr.

Ruhr traffic is stagnating, with the French trying to get what coal is on the rails through to France over the militarized lines. German railway men continue to obey Berlin orders not to give the French any aid. At Duisburg, Essen, Bochum and Dortmund many Polish railway men have been chased off the trains by German workers who suspected the new arrivals came to assist French troops to untangle the traffic deadlock.

The French are stopping coal lorries on the roads and are preventing distribution of fuel within the occupied area. Beginning today, they also began prohibiting the exit of all coal by-products, ammonia, benzol and coal-tar products.

At Dorsten 180 coal cars destined for Holland are being held, although the cars are Dutch. The French continue to concentrate large forces along the frontier, especially in a northeasterly direction.

STINNES AND OTHER IRON MASTERS AT MUHLHEIM IN RUHR

By ARNO DOSCH FLEUROT,
Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

(Copyright, 1923, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos., the New York World and the Post-Dispatch.)

BERLIN, Feb. 3.—A German protest against the French seizure of the Essen hospital was handed to the Paris Ministry of Foreign Affairs, which refused to accept it. Berlin regards this refusal as an attempt to goad Germany to the point of breaking diplomatic relations.

The German view is the French would prefer to have Germany sever relations as it would then be easier to find a basis for Ruhr negotiations, and outsiders could interfere in the terms of peace.

Whatever negotiations may be proceeding at the moment are being carried on by French and German industrialists.

Hugo Stinnes has been visiting sections of the Rhineland and today appeared at Muelheim, in the Ruhr for the first time since the French came in. As Thyssen and Haniel are also there, it leads to rumors Stinnes has gone to Muhlheim to consult with other Ruhr ironmasters following conversations with French magnates.

When it was first reported several days ago that Stinnes was in Wiesbaden it was denied. Now it is admitted he was there, but did not see any Frenchmen. He went to Wies-

Cold Wave From Northwest Spreads Over the Country

Eveleth, Minn., With 45 Below, Is Coldest Spot; 25 Below at Minneapolis; Rains in the South.

By the Associated Press

CHICAGO, Feb. 3.—With the entire Central West shivering in the grip of icy blasts straight from the Arctic, a cold wave tonight was extending from the northwest toward Florida and from New York to San Francisco, rolling down the mercury to new low records.

In Chicago the mercury tumbled more than 30 degrees in 12 hours and the Weather Bureau predicted 6 degrees below zero. Eveleth, Minn., the coldest spot in the United States, reported minimum temperatures of 45 degrees below zero. In Minneapolis it was 25 degrees below, while St. Paul and Bismarck, N. D., registered 1 degree higher.

The icy wave brought new seasonal records in Iowa and Nebraska as it spread over the lower lake region, the Ohio Valley, Tennessee and the interior of the East Gulf states and reached toward the Atlantic coast. In the southlands the weather disturbances were confined to high winds and rains. At Savage, Miss., scores of persons were left homeless. As an offset to depleted coal bins, health authorities reported that the cold wave would act as a curb on the increase of the influenza and pneumonia.

No warm weather is in sight for the Central West, the Weather Bureau here announced, and predicted generally fair weather for the next few days, with temperatures below the seasonal normal. The regions for which this prediction was made included Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin, Michigan, Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, South Dakota, Montana and Wyoming.

A strong northwest wind continued to travel as advance guard of the cold wave tonight, although weather forecasts said it would become light and variable within a few hours.

Temperature Near Zero Mark in the Texas Panhandle.

DALLAS, Texas., Feb. 3.—Texas tonight was near the freezing point, and in the Panhandle, where as low as six degrees above zero early tonight was recorded at Amarillo, snow fell all day. Drops generally in the temperature average from 30 to 60 degrees in the past 24 hours. Plainview reported 10 degrees above zero.

The coldest "norther" of the season was reported from practically every section in the State. Some reports early tonight showed Dallas 28, Fort Worth 25, Houston 55, with freezing predicted; San Antonio between 24 and 28 degrees predicted; Corpus Christi wind velocity 46 miles and hour; Abilene, 21.

The Cumberland River, swollen by heavy rains, passed the flood stage of 40 feet during the day and it is believed that it will climb three feet more before Tuesday. Basements of business houses near the river bank are already flooded, and low sections of the city are filling.

COLD WAVE BOOSTS BUSINESS AT MUNICIPAL LODGING HOUSE

However, Capacity of 1000 Was Not Taxed by the 525 Men Who Obtained Free Beds.

The cold wave appreciably lengthened the guest list last night at the Municipal Lodging House, 110-12 South Twelfth street, but the influx of homeless ones did not tax the capacity of the city's free hotel. Supt. C. W. Lillybeck reported 525 men obtained beds last night, while the capacity is 1000.

During the mild weather in recent weeks from 450 to 475 men have been sleeping there each night. Continued cold weather is expected to increase the number 200 to 300.

The lodging house was reopened Nov. 1 to operate for the winter season. Every applicant may have a bed and meals without charge. If the roomer chooses to work one day of five hours, on a labor job for the city, he receives tickets for three days' meals. Those who work get more food than those who do not. The one day in three toiler gets a pair of frankfurters with bread and coffee for breakfast, while those who do not work miss the frankfurters. The menu for other meals is graded accordingly. About 200 have been eating at the "first table."

DRY AGENT SHAKEUP IN MISSOURI FORECAST

Commissioner Haynes Declines to Discuss Rumor That Gus O. Nations Is to Be Removed.

Post-Dispatch Bureau.
20 Wyatt Bldg.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.—Definite confirmation of reports from Missouri that an official inquiry into the State prohibition situation is in progress, foreshadowing important changes in the enforcement personnel, was obtained by the Post-Dispatch today from Prohibition Commissioner Roy A. Haynes.

Haynes said that he was making a thorough examination of Missouri conditions, as disclosed to him in reports, and intended to act in a manner that would be for the best interests of the service. He would do this, he said, no matter who might be affected.

It was plain from the commissioner's remarks that he was not satisfied with the results of prohibition enforcement in Missouri. He indicated that the inquiry would not be confined to any particular cases of laxity, but would deal with the entire Missouri enforcement system.

Silent on Allen Rumor.

Haynes declined to affirm or deny a report that State Prohibition Director Allen is to be displaced, nor would he in any way forecast other changes that might be expected as a result of his investigation.

Haynes said that reports relating to the spectacular raid of Gus O. Nations and his agents on the Hotel Chase New Year's eve, had reached his office, but that he had not yet had time to study them. He would not discuss a rumor that Nations was to be transferred.

Delighted With Progress.

Telling of his recent western inspection trip, Haynes said he was delighted with the evident progress that was being made in prohibition enforcement. He described his tour as having been highly inspirational. The main problem now before the enforcement bureau, he said, was to obtain effective cooperation between the State and Federal authorities under the concurrent powers given by the prohibition act.

Haynes' statement regarding the Missouri investigation tallies with reports that have been current among Missourians on Capitol Hill for some time. The belief is general among them that a change in the State prohibition directorship is impending. Senator Spencer, as has been told, already has interested himself in picking "Allen's successor."

Will Be Presented to League of Nations' Committee Friday.

BRITISH DEBT PLAN TURNED OVER TO THE PRESIDENT

Results of Negotiations Expected to Be Sent to Congress Early This Week, With Approval Expected.

ATTACK TO CENTER ON INTEREST RATES

Several Democrats in House Point Out That Rates Are Lower Than U. S. Pays on Own Obligations.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.—The plan for funding Great Britain's war-time debt to the United States was turned over to President Harding tonight by the Debt Funding Commission. Accompanying the plan was a statement by the commission suggesting methods of congressional action translating the results of the commission's negotiations into law. The statement was not made public.

While the commission in a protracted conference was formulating its views for transmission to the President, new rumblings of opposition to the plan were heard in both the House and the Senate. At the same time, Senator Lodge of Massachusetts, the Republican leader in the Senate, visited the White House to discuss the situation with President Harding and Representative Mondell of Wyoming, the House Republican leader, conferred with Representative Burton of Ohio, a member of the Funding Commission, as to ways and means of handling the settlement legislation in the House.

Administration Plans.

Present indications are for the President to send the settlement plan, together with a brief message concerning it, to Congress early next week, but this has not been definitely determined. The administration appears confident that it can muster all the strength necessary to bring action on the legislation before the end of the present session March 3, but Mr. Harding is represented as desiring to have everything done in advance that will speed a final settlement.

Increasing evidence developed today that House Democrats plan to oppose the interest rates contained in the settlement plan on the grounds that they constituted a discrimination. Several of them declared that the rates proposed to be applied on the British debt were materially lower than the United States pays on its own obligations.

Obstacles Admitted.

Members of the Funding Commission are said to have talked frankly among themselves as to the obstacles to be overcome in pushing the necessary legislation through Congress. It was generally agreed, it was said, that complicated legislation should be avoided and it appeared that the recommendations to the President urged that a complete change of the law be avoided at this time.

Administration officials, although admitting that rocks lay in the path of the debt legislation, argued insistently that the plan agreed upon and accepted by Great Britain was just and right and predicted that it would be accepted. They pointed out also that a settlement with Great Britain would be the first move toward breaking down what the British delegation to the funding conference had described as a vicious cycle of world debt.

Baldwin Pays Tribute to Fairness of American Negotiators.

By the Associated Press.

BIRMINGHAM, England, Feb. 3.—Stanley Baldwin, Chancellor of the Exchequer, speaking at the jewelers' annual dinner tonight, said that although the question of the British debt to the United States was to a certain extent sub judice if satisfactorily settled, it left the way clear for closer co-operation between the two peoples than was possible before. This settlement was a prelude to the settlement of European questions.

If the debt was not funded, arrears would roll up against Great Britain for years to come and the country might have drifted to possible default, but all that was over now, continued the Csancellor, and the people would feel with pride that they had carried through the greatest financial transaction in the history of the world.

The Chancellor paid tribute to the friendly spirit in which he had been met by the American statesmen, saying:

"When we had once acknowledged the debt, they did all they could to secure a fair bargain and stand by us. I was struck by the splendid fair-mindedness of their ministers and agents."

Doctor Drank Before Fatal Operation; Found Guilty of Manslaughter

Milwaukee Physician Admitted He Had Liquor Day He Handled Case.

By the Associated Press.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Feb. 3.—Dr. H. T. Brogan today was found guilty of manslaughter in the fourth degree.

Dr. Brogan was charged with having performed an obstetrical operation when under the influence of liquor and causing the death of his patient. He admitted on the witness stand that he had been drinking on the day of the operation but denied that he was intoxicated while performing his duties as a physician.

$35,000 IN DAMAGE SUITS RESULT OF SCRAP OVER DOG

Neighbors Charge and Counter Charge in Actions Following Fight After Protest.

Difficulty over a dog led to an encounter between Arthur Buck, 6035 Kingsbury avenue, and his neighbor, Howard Maffray, 6027 Kingsbury, and resulted in claims for damages, each charging the other with assault and battery.

Several weeks ago Buck filed suit for $10,000, alleging that on July 14 last he was assaulted in his home by Maffray, who struck him on the mouth and tore the flesh so that it was necessary to stitch the severed parts together. Yesterday Maffray filed a counter claim for $25,000 damages, alleging that in the encounter his nose was broken by Buck. A dog, which was the property of Buck, had been annoying Maffray's daughter, Maffray states, and he went to the Buck home to give warning that unless the annoyance stopped he would either apply for an injunction in court or kill the animal. Buck, it is alleged in the answer, became angry and "jabbed defendant under the chin," at which Maffray struck back. Thereupon someone locked the door and Maffray was set upon and badly beaten, his answer charges. He declares that Buck was not hurt.

DEAF, DUMB AND BLIND MEN SUGGESTED FOR HERRIN JURY

Newspaper Says Any Resident Who Has Not Formed Opinion Would Be Mentally Incompetent.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MARION, Ill., Feb. 3.—The first venire of jurors for the second Herrin massacre trial has been served and preparations are going forward for the next trial, which begins on Feb. 12. The Williamson County Miner, a weekly newspaper owned by the labor organizations of the county, says that the only way to get a jury for the next case will be to find 12 men who are "deaf, dumb and blind," because "if there is any resident of Williamson County who has not formed an opinion about Herrin by this time, his mental capacity should bar him from jury duty."

The regular Williamson County grand jury will convene next Monday, and the next will be devoted to civil cases and to passing upon naturalization applications, but will take no action in connection with the riots.

COLLECTOR FOR DRYS SAID TO HAVE GOT 20 PCT. ON $25,000

O. Bertsall Phillips Declared to Have Received 10 Per Cent on Excess—His Collections Put at $600,000.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—Books showing contributions to the Anti-Saloon League of New York were turned over to acting Prosecutor Pecora today, in connection with his inquiry into Secretary William H. Anderson's conduct of the league's financial affairs. It was stated that the records showed contributions exceeding $1,000,000 from 1917 to 1921, when O. Bertsall Phillips, who was the league's principal collector, personally collected about $600,000.

Pecora said he was interested solely in determining whether the procedure had been regular in the changing of payments originally recorded as Phillips' salary to expenses. The entire matter of compensation would have to be clarified, he declared. He understood, he said, that Phillips received 20 per cent on the first $25,000 collected annually and 10 per cent on further sums brought it.

MacReady, McCook Field pilots, will start their endurance flight Tuesday or Wednesday of the coming week, McCook Field officials announced today. The pilots will endeavor to exceed their endurance record flight of more than 35 hours, which was established in the T-2 while flying over San Diego, Cal., last October.

COUNTER TREATY PROJECT PLAN OF TURK DELEGATION

Ottoman Delegates Announce Proposal to Be Presented to Allies at Lausanne Conference.

LATEST COMPROMISE AFFECTS AMERICANS

Proposed That Complaints of Residents in Turkey Be Submitted to Especially Selected Counsellors.

By the Associated Press.

LAUSANNE, Feb. 3.—The Turkish delegation informed the Associated Press tonight that it will present a counter treaty project to the allies.

At midnight the entire Turkish delegation still was in close conference drafting the reply to be submitted to the allies tomorrow.

The allied delegations are awaiting with some anxiety the Turkish action, some of them believing that the Turks will ask for further delay, and perhaps time to refer back to Angora. Both the French and Italian delegates declared tonight that if the Turks did not sign the treaty tomorrow and the British departed, they would follow.

The Associated Press correspondent obtained a copy of the allies' latest compromise on capitulations, which was handed to Ismet Pasha today and which is of especial interest to American residents in Turkey. So as not to offend Turkish delegates, this will not be incorporated in the treaty of peace, but will stand as a declaration by the Turkish delegation.

Turkey engages to employ legal counselors chosen from a list drawn by the Permanent Court of International Justice. These counselors will participate in the preparation of legislative reforms and will be assigned to judicial districts of the courts of appeal at Constantinople and Smyrna and the ordinary courts at Samsun and Adana.

The counselors will not sit as judges, but will have the right to receive complaints from foreigners respecting the administration of the law and submit such complaints to competent Turkish authorities in order to insure strict observance of the Turkish law. Suits of foreigners must be executed in accordance with the views of the counselors while Turkey recognizes the legality of decisions in civil and commercial cases reached by outside arbitration.

The united Armenian delegation sent a protest to the conference today against what it calls the abandonment of the Armenians by the conference. It recalls promises made by the Powers regarding a national home and declares nonsettlement of the Armenian question is not conducive to peace in the Near East.

SEPARATE COMPACT BETWEEN U. S. AND TURKEY INDICATED

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

(Copyright, 1923.)

LAUSANNE, Feb. 3.—As the Lausanne conference nears its end, it seems probable a separate treaty will be concluded between the United States and Turkey. Its chief points would involve protection of American commercial, religious, scholastic and other interests in Turkey.

However, Ambassador Child, the American delegate, has advised the Turks to accept the allied draft of the treaty. He told them plainly they have, he believes, a splendid opportunity to build up a modern state and win the confidence of the civilized world under these terms.

The Post-Dispatch correspondent gathered this impression in a conversation with the American Ambassador today. He has been careful not to make it appear that Washington wished to come to a separate understanding with Turkey involving recognition of the Angora Government and resumption of diplomatic relations. He maintained

Survey Is Proposed to Determine Number of Drug Addicts in Country

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
No. 20 Wyatt Bldg.
WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.

FEDERAL narcotic officers have started a movement for a survey of the actual drug addicts in the country to replace what has always been mere guesswork in estimating the number. It is estimated that it would cost $100,000 to make the survey and agents assert it will be possible by investigating the right sources to ascertain the approximate number of drug users. At present, it was said, there is no way of telling whether there are 400,000 or 4,000,000.

The survey would accomplish no special purpose toward eliminating the evil though it would give valuable statistics which, if gathered at different periods, would show the results of enforcement of the anti-narcotic laws.

Col. L. G. Nutt, chief of the federal narcotic forces, announced today the results of an investigation of charges that narcotics are being used by high school pupils in the capital. He gave the school children a clean bill of health. School officials informed agents that because of the supervision it would hardly be possible for students to use drugs of any kind while in school without detection.

LLOYD GEORGE MAY VISIT AMERICA LATE IN YEAR

Former Premier Disapproves Withdrawal English-Speaking Soldiers From Rhine.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Feb. 3.—Former Premier Lloyd George, interviewed upon his arrival in London today after his return from Spain, said he was anxious to visit America, but that it would be late in the year, if it were possible for him to go at all.

He expressed himself as "absolutely dead against" the proposed withdrawal of the British troops from the Rhine in the present situation and said he was sorry the Americans had been withdrawn.

NEGROES LYNCHED IN GEORGIA

Shot Member of Posse Pursuing Them for Alleged Robberies.

By the Associated Press

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga., Feb. 3.—Two negroes were lynched near the line dividing Hancock and Baldwin counties today, following their shooting of Lindsay B. Gilmore, a member of a posse that was pursuing the negroes, after their alleged robberies on the outskirts of this county during the night.

The negroes are alleged to have burglarized two stores near Sparta, Ga., near here, and, besides money, to have taken a shotgun and ammunition. Bloodhounds from the State penitentiary picked up their trail early today. When the pursuing posse neared the negroes, the negroes opened fire with the stolen shotgun, and Gilmore fell, seriously wounded. Several shots were exchanged before one of the negroes was captured. His body riddled with bullets. The other negro escaped, but early tonight was overtaken and put to death. The lynched men have not been identified.

MISSISSIPPI RISING RAPIDLY

Gauge Near Flood Stage Forecast for Memphis.

By the Associated Press.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Feb. 3.—As a result of recent heavy rains along its tributaries, the Mississippi River was rising rapidly tonight with a stage of 33 feet at Memphis, two feet below flood stage, predicted for late next week.

A Weather Bureau forecast today indicated that the Mississippi would continue to rise for an indefinite period. Cold weather which prevailed today along the Ohio River, however, was expected to retard the rise in that river.

UNION HEADS ARE SENTENCED

By the Associated Press.

EL PASO, Tex., Feb. 3.—Five defendants, found guilty in the United States District Court here last week on charges of violating the Sherman anti-trust act in connection with an alleged conspiracy to damage locomotives by the use of quicksilver in the boilers, were sentenced to 10 months in prison and fined $2500 each.

Those sentenced were C. C. Hanley, general chairman of the rail machinists' union at Houston, Tex.; John B. Youcham, secretary of the union, and J. E. Williams, James L. Doak and John F. Doak, machinists.

LOSS OF LIFE AND DAMAGE TO PROPERTY IN ISLANDS

Center of Disturbance Not Determined, Observers of Seismograph Designating Points in Aleutian Islands, Alaska, and as Far South as Chile.

NUMBER OF LIVES REPORTED LOST

Boats in Island Harbors Tossed About Like Corks, Foundations of Buildings Near Shores Swept Away by Force of Water.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.—Two distinct earthquakes, one of tremendous and unusual proportions, the other of moderate intensity, occurred today, but their exact location could not be determined from the records of delicate seismographs, and scientists differed widely in their opinions as to the regions affected.

The first quake, the more severe of the two, was estimated to have been centered 5000 miles from Washington. Its tremors continued for more than three hours and before they had ended the seismographs recorded a second series of shocks estimated to be at another point between 2600 and 3700 miles from Washington.

Center Not Determined.

Seismologists were much at variance on their estimates as to the exact location of the major disturbance. Designation ranged from Alaska, the Aleutian Islands and the Arctic region on the North to Northern Argentina on the South.

On the South the range was from the bed of the Pacific Ocean at a point southwest of Lower California to the vicinity of the Marshall Islands, between Hawaii and the Philippines and in Japan.

Prompt radio communication with Japan, however, disclosed no unusual disturbances in that country.

Inasmuch as telegraphic or cable communications brought no intelligence of any earthquake in the Philippines, Alaska or the countries of South America, it is considered most probable that the disturbances were subterranean shocks or sea quakes which never could be definitely located.

First Tremors at 11:13 A. M.

The quakes began at 11:13 a. m. when the first tremors were recorded on the seismographs of Georgetown University here and the second tremors were recorded at 11:23. The maximum vibrations were at 11:40 and continued for 10 minutes during which the needles on the Georgetown seismographs were thrown off the records. The tremors were continuing when the waves of the second quake were recorded at 1:45 p. m. The secondary tremors of this quake were recorded at 2:02 p. m. It was not until about 5 p. m. that the tremors died away.

By the Associated Press.

HONOLULU, T. H., Feb. 3.—Seven tidal waves this afternoon swept Hilo Bay, Island of Hawaii. The waves reached a maximum height of 15 feet. The waves, apparently the result of intense earth shocks, brought death to a number of persons. Ships anchored in the bay or tied to the docks were tossed about like corks.

League of Nations Declares It Will Invoke Article of Covenant Permitting Blockade.

DISSENSION OVER VILNA OCCUPATION

Lithuanian Delegate Leaves Meeting After Threat of Force if League Mandate Is Obeyed.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Feb. 3.—Threats of forceful methods in resistance to decisions of the League of Nations were made today for the first time by a league member when M. Sihzikauskas, representing Lithuania, declared in a meeting of the council that Lithuania would use force to prevent the occupation by Poland of a part of the neutral zone in the region of Vilna.

Blockade Threatened.

For the first time, too, the league informed a member that if it broke the covenant by the use of force in violation of the decisions of the league, article 16 of the covenant would be invoked and a blockade of the member's territory declared.

The council had just decided that the neutral zone in the Vilna region which has been practically without a Government since the Polish-Lithuanian dispute started, must be administered by the authorities spot. It gave part of this district in temporary charge to Poland and another part to Lithuania.

Prof. Askenazy, the Polish delegate, accepted this decision, but M. Sidizkauskas rejected it on behalf of Lithuania, declaring that if Poland tried to occupy any portion of the neutral zone force would be employed to prevent it.

Viviani Cites Penalty.

Rene Viviani of France, presiding, in an outburst of indignation, asked the Lithuanian delegate if he realized what his threat meant. Then, reaching for the printed covenant of the league, he read article 16 and said:

"This is the penalty you incur if you attempt to resist decisions of the league by force."

The Lithuanian delegate calmly declared that Lithuania reserved all her rights. He then left the council room.

The league decision has no reference to the Memel territory, which still is under the authority of the council of Ambassadors, acting for the allies.

The council decided to refer to the international court of justice the questions at issue between Poland and her German colonists.

MEXICO SAID TO BE PLANNING NEW LAW RELATING TO OIL

President Obregon to Appoint Commission to Consider Famous Article 27 of Constitution.

By the Associated Press.

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 3.—President Obregon has decided to appoint a commission of five to consider every aspect of Article 27 of the Constitution, relating to petroleum, and report to Congress with the assurance that its recommendations will be accepted and incorporated into a law, substituting the famous article to which oil men in particular have taken exception.

A declaration to this effect was made tonight by a man high in the Government, who indicated that the present Congress is seriously disposed to amend Article 27 in order to meet the demands of all concerned.

WIFE FILES SMALL'S WILL

Document, Executed 20 Years Ago, Makes Her Missing Man's Sole Legatee.

By the Associated Press.

TORONTO, Ont., Feb. 3.—Mrs. Ambrose J. Small, wife of a theatrical magnate who disappeared several years ago, today offered for probate a will, executed 20 years ago, in which she was named as sole legatee and executrix of his estate of more than $1,000,000. She filed with it an affidavit setting forth her belief that Small had died shortly after his disappearance.

Two sisters of the missing man filed a caveat opposing probate of the document, declaring they believed Small had executed a later will.

Ruhr Population Gradually Becoming Reconciled to Presence of French.

By the Associated Press.

DUESSELDORF, Feb. 3.—The situation in the Ruhr is drifting back to the regular routine. The population, workers and tradesmen, are gradually becoming outwardly reconciled to the presence of the occupying forces, while the resistance of the functionaries appears to be faltering. The opposition of the industrial magnates, however, shows no signs of abating. The possibility of a general rising against the French appears remote.

Incidents of violence continue, such as the killing of a German civilian by a French sentry at Brechten last night. It is reported the Brechten civilian who was killed failed to halt when challenged.

Sixty-six barges loaded with coal, according to the official figures, have been dispatched to Strassburg and 63 more, which were confiscated were along the Rhine today, awaiting tugs to tow them up the river. The barges average about 1000 tons each. Ten tugs with French crews are now working up and down the Rhine.

The coal forwarded by rail into France is about half the amount floated; thus the total coal the French have got out of the Ruhr since the occupation is a little more than 200,000 tons, whereas under the old system they would have received 460,000 in the same period. Gen. Payot explains that the services are hampered by the necessity of replacing the strikers, insuring food supplies, and for similar reasons, but he expects to move very much larger quantities of coal daily to France, beginning next week.

The Germans are not attempting to approach the French control posts, but run the coal trains to within a few miles of the occupied eastern and southern frontiers, where they abandon them, causing much congestion. The locks are completely under French control in both the Rhine and Lippe canals. The French also control the high roads leading into unoccupied Germany.

The occupying authorities have assured the German officials and workers who have disregarded Berlin's strike orders that their salaries will be paid if they continue to discharge their duties. Many of the Germans have elected to remain.

Nine carloads of coal, ostensibly consigned to Italy, were stopped by the French at Vohwinkel until the arrival of a representative of the Italian high commissioner at Coblenz to determine whether the bills of lading were bona fide.

The strike at Mayence continues, with some further sabotage reported, tracks being torn up for 100 yards in the vicinity of Bodenheim.

Berlin's Representative in Rhineland Reported Arrested by French.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Feb. 3.—Ober-President Johannes Fuchs, Berlin's representative in the Rhineland, whose disappearance was reported Jan. 31, when it was said he was believed to have taken asylum in Cologne, was in fact arrested when entering his automobile after a visit to President Tirard of the Inter-Allied Rhineland Commission, according to a Coblenz message received today. Fuchs was taken away in the direction of Frankfort in a French automobile, accompanied by two military cars.

ALLIES REJECT NEW GERMAN PLEA FOR MORATORIUM

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Feb. 3.—The Reparations Commission today adopted a resolution sustaining its own action of Jan. 26, in refusing Germany a moratorium. The resolution passed as a reply to yesterday's protest note from Germany. The German note to the commission protesting against the recent refusal of a moratorium is regarded by a part of the French press as a forerunner of German capitulation and as a direct result of French action in the Ruhr.

Publication of the note causes commentators to remark that it represents Germany's first attempt since French occupation of the Ruhr toward resumption of exchanges with the Allies.

Britain Abstains From Voting.

France, Italy and Belgium voted for the resolution. Great Britain abstained from voting, as in recent reparation commission ballots.

Germany's note represented an effort to renew the discussion with France and reopen the reparations controversy. It protested against the Reparation Commission's decision of Jan. 26 and asked that the commission in accordance with the peace treaty, re-examine the capacity of Germany to pay.

The speed of the commission's action on this note is pointed to as emphasizing the refusal. The note was dated Thursday. It was received Friday and answered today.

Text of Resolution.

"The Reparation Commission, after noting Germany's reply of Feb. 2, maintains its decision of Jan. 26 with its consequences," the resolution read.

The Jan. 26 decision refused Germany a moratorium and put in force again the schedule of payments adopted May 5, 1921.

The commission today by the same vote passed a resolution to maintain for 1924 the schedule for deliveries of wood by Germany arranged last July.

The German Communication.

"As shown in its note of Jan. 13," the German communication says, "the German Government suspended payments in kind to France and Belgium solely because of the invasion —which was contrary to the treaty of the Ruhr—by these two Powers, and solely for the duration of this state of affairs and its consequences.

"In thus acting, the German Government exercised its unquestionable right. There cannot be a question of default, in the sense of paragraph 17, annex 2, part 8 of the treaty of Versailles."

The note then contests the conclusion that the German request for a moratorium had become null and void. It cites the Reparation Commission's decision of March 21, 1922, recognizing that the financial situation of Germany did not permit of her making the specific payments for 1922 laid down by the schedule of May 5, 1921. It cites also the commission's decision of Aug. 31, 1922, expressly recognizing the fact that Germany had lost all her credit, internal and external, in which the commission considered the question of reducing the external charges to be imposed on Germany.

"Furthermore," continues the note, "each of the principal allied Powers, in plans submitted to the Paris conference of Jan. 2, recognized the present incapacity of Germany regarding payment in kind and considered the question of the immediate grant of a moratorium of several years in addition to a reduction of the total obligations under the schedule of payments of May 5, 1921.

The Economic Situation.

"Meanwhile the financial and economic situation in Germany has grown still worse owing to the occupation of the Ruhr. The mark has fallen to one ten-thousandths of its pre-war value."

The note declares Germany considers that the Reparations Commission in returning to the schedule of payments adopted in London in 1921, is in conflict with the former attitude of both the commission and the principal allied Powers. The action of the commission, Germany contends, contravenes the provisions of the Versailles treaty, which document makes Germany's obligations depend upon her capacity for payment and sets forth that her vital needs should have preference over her reparations obligations.

"Now that French and Belgian troops have invaded the Ruhr, and the German territory on the left bank of the Rhine, as well as the Ruhr, has begun to be detached economically and financially from the remainder of the economic organization of Germany, the German Government still less than before is in a position to meet the obligations of the London schedule," the note adds. "It cannot consider the reparation commission's decision of Jan. 26 as constituting a real reply to its note of Nov. 14, 1922, and it awaits reexamination of Germany's capacity for payment in conformity with article 234 of the Treaty of Versailles."

The note was signed by Dr. Fischer, head of the German War Debt Commission.

COUNTER TREATY PROJECT PLAN OF TURK DELEGATION

this attitude during the negotiations between Ismet Pasha and the allies as otherwise the Turks might have interpreted his actions as meaning the United States was not interested in peace between Angora and Europe, but only in its own ends.

Such a course would, of course, have been resented by Great Britain, France and Italy. It would have ended Child's usefulness as a mediator and observer protecting American interests.

But now, if a split occurs between England and France, and allied solidarity toward Turkey is ended, Child will at once set about concluding a treaty with the Nationalists.

On several occasions the American representative reminded the allies the United States always will insist on the policy of the open door. The last occasion was when the French and Italians proposed to give the Ottoman debt commission the right to pass on all future concessions granted to foreign interests in Turkey. The Turks themselves also opposed this plan, which this afternoon was dropped definitely from the allied terms.

It is understood the Italians chiefly were responsible for the proposal. They felt it would compensate them for advantages they lost when the tripartite agreement was abandoned.

Silent on Mosul Question.

Child also objected strongly to removal of the Greek Patriarchate from Constantinople. He feared it would be a precedent for suppression of religious liberties for other minorities than the Greek Orthodox in Turkey.

He was silent on the question of Mosul because he did not think there was any question of that territory coming under Turkish sovereignty at least during the conference. Therefore, he did not think this was the proper time to raise any question of American interests in the oil fields. Also he has been thoroughly familiar with British policy and intentions regarding the vilayet.

The British say Child has given great service to the cause of peace in explaining to Ismet that the new Turkey must be prepared to assume the responsibilities of a sovereign state, guarantee protection of foreign interests and establish a legislative system under which foreigners can live with confidence that their lives and liberties are safeguarded.

British Foreign Secretary Curzon personally is grateful for the assistance the American Ambassador gave in urging the Turkish delegates to take a reasonable view of the fundamental allied demands. It is said Ismet's virtual acceptance of the straits convention was in great measure due to Child's personal mediation with the chief Nationalist envoys.

ARKANSAS TOWN MARSHAL HELPS FLOG A NEGRO

Barber, in Hospital Here, Declares He Was Told He Would Be Lynched if He Didn't Leave State.

In City Hospital No. 2 here lies R. S. Jordan, negro barber, 46 years old, of Osceola, Ark., suffering from internal injuries and severe abrasions on his back and abdomen that he says were inflicted Thursday night in the courthouse at Osceola by members of the Ku Klux Klan, led by Frank Conway, town Marshal, who bought him a railroad ticket to St. Louis and compelled him to leave Osceola on pain of being lynched.

At the hospital it was said that Jordan soon would be able to leave the institution.

Town Marshal Conway at Osceola last evening told the Post-Dispatch over the long distance telephone that he and other citizens of Osceola had taken Jordan from his barber shop to the courthouse and flogged him for "sweethearting with a white woman" who was deported from Osceola Friday night.

"We Sent Him Away."

"There comes a time in every community, as you people up there must understand," Conway explained, "when it becomes necessary to get shed of an undesirable character. That's what happened in Jordan's case. He was a very bad character and we just took him to the courthouse, flogged him and sent him away."

Jordan for 12 years had conducted a barber shop patronized by white trade at Osceola, a town of 1800 population in the northeastern part of the State. He is married and owns his home in Osceola, where his wife remained to sell their property.

Negro's Version of Attack.

His version of the attack on him was given by Jordan at the hospital to a Post-Dispatch reporter last evening. He said his first intimation that anything was wrong came Wednesday night when his porter, Otis McMurray, negro, was whipped and deported.

The following night, Thursday, Town Marshal Conway took him from his shop, and, without explanation, locked him in a room in the courthouse, he said, and two hours later, about 10 o'clock, returned with four other men, took him to an upstairs room, removed his clothing and laid him across a bench, four of the men holding his hands and feet.

Jordan said Conway demanded to know why he had written a letter to a white woman. Jordan denied that he had done so and challenged them to produce the letter. Then another of the men remarked, according to Jordan, "You did say that you would shoot 16 Ku Klx, didn't you?" and with that began beating him with what he believes was a leaf of an automobile spring.

Jordan recalled then, he said, that he recently had made such a remark about the Ku Klux Klan, but explained to his tormentors that he referred to the Ku Klux Klan of Civil War days and meant that he would have defended himself against tortures inflicted by that organization, of which his grandfather had told him.

Says Lynching Was Threatened.

After being beaten with the metal instrument, Jordan was taken from the courthouse to the yard below and while putting on his clothes was struck in the face with fists, he said. Then he was taken to the railroad station, where Conway bought him a ticket to St. Louis and admonished him not to leave the train in the State of Arkansas or he would be lynched, Jordan said.

Jordan also stated that Mrs. Sally Tallie, a negress, also was flogged in the courthouse that night because she refused to acknowledge that Jordan had associated with a white woman. Conway also admitted this and said that Mrs. Tally would not be deported because she "is now a good nigger."

NEW LAMP BURNS 94% AIR

Beats Electric or Gas

A new oil lamp that gives an amazingly brilliant, soft, white light, even better than gas or electricity, has been tested by the U. S. Government and 35 leading universities and found to be superior to 10 ordinary oil lamps. It burns without odor, smoke or noise —no pumping up, is simple, clean, safe. Burns 94% air and 6% common kerosene (coal oil).

The inventor, D. G. Johnson, 609 W. Lake St., Chicago, Ill., is offering to send a lamp on 10 days' FREE trial, or even to give one FREE to the first user in each locality who will help him introduce it. Write him today for full particulars. Also ask him to explain how you can get the agency, and without experience or money make $250 to $500 per month.

ISOLATION OF GERM MARKS GAIN IN WAR ON INFLUENZA

Possibility of Discovering a Cure for Malady Hailed by Physicians as a Reasonable Hope.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—The possibility of discovery in the near future of methods of prevention and cure of influenza was hailed by physicians as a reasonable hope, following the announcement by Dr. Simon Flexner of the isolation of the deadly flu germ by Drs. Frederick T. Gates and Peter K. Olitsky, bacteriologists at the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research.

Dr. Flexner's announcement, made in a radio talk broadcast from Schenectady under the direction of the State Department of Health, included a statement that reports from various sections of the United States and other countries indicate that a "secondary" wave of influenza is passing over parts of Europe and America at present. It is a milder wave, he said, than the devastating epidemic of 1918, being free from such numerous and severe complications as bronchitis and pneumonia.

Use by Drs. Gates and Olitzky of the principles worked out 10 years ago by Drs. Theobald Smith and Hideyo Noguchi, also of Rockefeller Institute, for cultivating disease germs outside the bodies of man and animals, has resulted in the discovery, Dr. Flexner said, of a previously known and very minute germ which is present in the nose and throat during the first 36 hours of influenzal infection.

"This new bacterium," he said, "found thus far only in cases of epidemic influenza in the early hours of the disease, is so small that it can pass through the pores of an earthenware filter, and when magnified 1000 times is just capable of being seen distinctly under the microscope.

"It has been given the name of Bacterium Pneumosintes, which, translated into simple English, signifies that this germ injures the lung tissue in such a way as to deprive it of the power, ordinarily possessed by it, of resisting the attacks by the common bacteria of the nose and throat.

"In health, these common bacteria are easily destroyed by the lung tissue, but as a result of the injuries induced by bacterium pneumosintes they are now enabled to lodge and multiply in the lungs, thus producing those serious inflammations to which the names of bronchitis and pneumonia are applied."

MRS. EDITH GOULD DENOUNCED BY JUDGE HEARING WAGE SUIT

She Does Not Appear and Court Says It Is Hard on Servants to Be Called on to Do Dirty Work.

(Copyright, 1923.)

LONDON, Feb. 3.—Mrs. Edith Gould, former wife of Frank Gould, was severely denounced in her absence today by Judge Tobin of the Westminster County Court. Mrs. Gould, who is in Paris, was being sued by Frank Scott, her discharged chauffeur, for $90 wages. She did not appear, but sent her maid and butler to give evidence. The Judge awarded the chauffeur's claim with costs, remarking to the maid and butler:

"It is very hard that people in humble positions should have to come here over such a case. It is also hard on a lady's maid and butler that they should be called upon to do dirty work for their rich mistress."

Scott dragged into the case the name of Fred de Courville, a well-known theatrical producer. He testified Mrs. Gould hired him, but he was told by Mrs. Gould's maid that De Courville had asked the maid to tell the chauffeur that "they" would not want his services further.

"What has De Courville to do with it?" asked the Judge, and the chauffeur's lawyer replied: "He is somehow mixed up with Mrs. Gould. I understand he paid Scott's wages as agent for Mrs. Gould." De Courville is understood to be in America now. The maid declared Mrs. Gould was in Paris on legal business, but Judge Tobin retorted that she "is wanted in this court today on legal business and is liable to a penalty from me."

The commission would be appointed by the President, without salary and would be required to report Nov. 1.

Tidal Wave Hits Hawaii; Earth Shocks Recorded

Wailoa struck the railroad bridge across the Wailuku River. The victim fell from the bridge and perished in the wreck. The body of one Japanese fisherman has been recovered. Four others are known to be missing.

How many other persons met death was not known tonight.

The damage at Hilo and Kahului, as the result of tidal waves this afternoon, is estimated at $1,500,000, according to wireless messages received this evening.

On the Island of Oahu, four waves struck Haleiwa, with secondary effects visible in Honolulu Bay, where the water rose and receded a maximum of six feet.

A section of the Cahu railroad tracks, skirting the ocean at Mokulela about four miles west of Haleiwa was washed out, as were several bridges. Persons who observed the waves said that "the whole sea seemed to rise up."

The stores on the Hilo waterfront were thrown into the streets, their foundations being swept out by the rushing waters.

Automobiles Abandoned.

Many drivers of automobiles abandoned their cars when they saw the huge waves sweeping toward them. The Standard Oil tanker Doane was in evident distress in the bay here tonight. She was believed to be on a sand bar, whistling for assistance.

On the Island of Maui, a tidal wave brought serious injury to Dr. L. C. Smith, whose automobile was hurled by the waves over a fence and overturned. Dr. Smith is suffering from a broken leg and other injuries. A number of other cars were said to have been wrecked and their occupants injured.

The high waters washed over the streets of the water front at Kahului, wrecking the wharf and destroying the freight in the pier buildings. The wharf shed virtually was demolished and the water covered the wharf office to a depth of three feet. The Kahului damage is estimated at $500,000.

Several large lumber scows were driven ashore against the boulders at Kahului. Mud covers the streets and fish of all sizes were found in the roads swept by the waves. The steamer Makaiwa tonight was attempting to recover several scows which were torn from their anchorages and drifted to sea.

EARTHQUAKE MOST SEVERE IN YEARS

An earthquake worse than any in recent years was recorded on the seismograph at St. Louis University and at other observatories all over the country yesterday. Belief was expressed at St. Louis University that the earth disturbance centered in the Pacific Ocean about 4900 miles southeast of this city, and a short distance off the coast of Chile, but likely spread over a considerable area, affecting the mainland.

Some of the observers, including Brother George E. Rueppel, in charge of the St. Louis University seismograph, expressed fear that the earthquake might have resulted in disaster comparable to the recent one in Chile, which was somewhat north of where Brother Rueppel figured yesterday's disturbance was. Observers referred to the shocks as being "tremendous," and of intensity comparable with the socks in San Francisco in 1906.

Tremors recorded on the St. Louis University seismograph extended over a period of four hours, seven minutes and six seconds, from 10:12:54 a. m. to 2:20 p. m. There were three distinctly heavy shocks, at 10:46, 10:48 and 10:50 a. m. Brother Rueppel was of the opinion that the long continued series of tremors after the heavy shocks indicated a tidal wave had followed the earthquake. He calculated the distance and direction of the disturbance from St. Louis with the assistance of prepared tables.

"There have been small seismic waves recorded for a number of days past," said Brother Rueppel, "which showed there was something going on, although these tremors apparently were not sufficient to have caused damage. If they were out in the bed of the ocean, I think it is likely quantities of water were swallowed up by the earth and, reaching the hot interior of the earth, were turned into steam—you know what would happen then; there would be a big quake."

The St. Louis University seismograph stands on a concrete base, which acts as a pendulum in sympathy with earth tremors. Two aluminum needles transmit the vibrations of the earth, when they occur, to a special paper coated with lampblack. This paper is moved steadily by clockwork to get a continuous, chronological record. A new paper is inserted about once a day and the records are preserved only when tremors are shown.

Unless there is a tremor each needle makes a straight, continuous line, but the marks away from side to side to show tremors. Sometimes a month or more will pass without the slightest disturbance being recorded. The size and character of the marks are used in computing distance, direction and intensity of the shocks. The lampblack is fixed permanently on the paper, after a record is made, by a bath of alcohol and shellac. The instrument is very sensitive to changes of temperature and nearby extraneous vibrations.

Buenos Aires Seismograph Registers Slight Tremor.

By the Associated Press.

BUENOS AIRES, Feb. 3.—The seismograph at the University of La Plata registered a light earth tremor at 12:22 o'clock this afternoon. The distance of the quake could not be calculated, but its center was believed to be to the north.

SAN JOSE, Cal., Feb. 3.—A very severe earthquake was recorded on the seismograph of Santa Clara University today between 8 and 11 a. m. The center of the disturbance was estimated as 2955 miles northwest of San Jose.

Needles Go Off Drums of Harvard Seismographs.

By the Associated Press.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Feb. 3.—An earthquake described by the staff of the Harvard Observatory as "large" was recorded here this forenoon at 11:13 o'clock. The needles went off the drums of the seismographs during the maximum motion. The distance of the earthquake was estimated at 4760 miles. Officials declined to speculate on the place of the tremors.

Earth Shock Rattles Doors and Windows at Belzoni, Miss.

By the Associated Press.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Feb. 3.—An earth shock of sufficient intensity to cause doors and windows to rattle was felt at Belzoni, Miss., 150 miles south of Memphis, at 4:05 o'clock this afternoon, according to messages received here. There is no seismograph at Belzoni. The tremor lasted but a brief period, the message said.

Disturbance 1700 Miles Away, Seattle Instrument Indicates.

By the Associated Press.

SEATTLE, Wash., Feb. 3.—A severe earth shock, centering between 1700 and 1800 miles from Seattle, was registered on the seismograph at the University of Washington here today. The opinion was expressed that the disturbance had originated in the Aleutian Islands or the Alaskan Peninsula, where severe volcanic activities have been reported recently.

Instruments at Ottawa Record Violent Earthquake.

By the Associated Press.

OTTAWA, Feb. 3.—An earthquake of great violence was registered at the Dominion observatory this morning. The preliminary tremors were felt at 11:14-32 Eastern standard time, and the distance to the epicenter was 8740 kilometers or 5427 miles. The time at the estimated point of origin was 11:02:30, Eastern standard time.

New York Seismographs Indicate Disturbance Was in Pacific.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—Revised calculations at the American Museum of Natural History placed today's earthquake 4500 miles from New York, in the Pacific Ocean off Lower California. The tremors recorded on the Museum's instrument covered a period of two hours and 50 minutes.

Fordham University also placed the quake in the Southern Pacific, estimating that the shock occurred in the vicinity of the Marshall Islands, between the Hawaiian and Philippine Islands.

J. J. Lynch, in charge of the observatory seismograph, declared that the shock was so violent that if it occurred near any land it must have caused a vast amount of damage.

By the Associated Press.

BERKELEY, Cal., Feb. 3.—An earthquake shock centering approximately 4200 miles away and severe enough to throw the pins of the recording instrument off the record repeatedly during the three hour period of the disturbance, was registered today on the seismograph of the University of California here.

Prof. John Duwalda, seismologist, said that it was impossible to determine the direction of the disturbance, as the record was "highly complicated" by the earth action. It was the probable center as either in Asia or the East Indies. The tremor began some time between 3 a. m. and 8:30 a. m., and reached its height minutes after beginning. It then began to subside irregularly.

TAXICAB IS LOST IN ONE OF 10 ROBBERIES

Machine Recovered by Chief Hoagland 45 Minutes After Theft.

A taxicab, taken from a chauffeur by an armed man at 10:15 last night, was recovered 45 minutes later on Natural Bridge avenue, just west of Goodfellow, by Chief of Detectives Hoagland and a squad of automobile night riders. Chief Hoagland, Captain of Police O'Brien and President Brockman of the Police Board have been touring the city during the evening because of the activity of bandits.

Nine robberies, in addition to the theft of the taxicab, occurred between 7:15 o'clock and midnight.

Arthur Gerlach, chauffeur for the Ever Ready Taxicab Co., 1213 North Garrison avenue, received a call to go to Jefferson and Chouteau avenues at 9:45 p. m. His passenger directed him to drive to Grand boulevard and then go north. On Dodier street the passenger struck Gerlach on the head and commanded him to drive to San Francisco and Newstead avenues, where he forced him to surrender the machine. When the machine was found the supply of gasoline was exhausted.

Two Holdups by Man in Stocking Mask Among 9 Other Robberies.

August Beyer, 5330 Greer avenue, was held up by two armed negroes at Labadie and Belt avenues at 8:30 p. m. and robbed of $65.

Henry Freise, a butcher of 1 North Twenty-second street, was robbed of $20 by two armed men who entered his shop at 16 p. m. and rifled the cash register before forcing him to go behind the ice box.

A man wearing a black stocking mask and overalls was reported to have committed two robberies within 40 minutes. The Motor Shop Garage, 4639 Delmar boulevard, was entered by a man answering this description at 7:15 p. m. He took a watch from the clerk, Thomas Schaeffer, and $12 from the cash register. At 8:25 a man similarly attired entered a Kroger grocery at 2525 North Prairie avenue and took $45 from the cash register.

Two men held up Victor Kaufmeyer, a butcher at 2715 North Eleventh street, at 8:45 and took $75 from the cash register after forcing him behind the ice box.

Frank Goacher, manager of a Kroger grocery at 1228 Hodiamont street, reported that two men robbed his store of between $100 and $175 at 8:45.

Sam Schaeffer, a grocer, at 4 Blackstone avenue, reported that two men took $25 from the cash register. Schaeffer fired three shots at the men as they left the store.

Henry Avant, a negro, was robbed of $53 by three men, who got out of an automobile and stopped him at West Belle place and Taylor avenue.

Thomas Rooney, 36, of 1325 Papin avenue, walked into the Physicians and Surgeons' Hospital at Taylor and Maffitt avenues at 11:30 and announced that he had just been held up in a vacant lot across the street by two men, who robbed him of $35 after beating him on the head. He was treated for his wounds.

RICKEY SIGNS TO MANAGE CARDINALS FOR FIVE YEARS

Davis Named President of Tennis Body

St. Louis Donor of International Trophy Unanimous Choice of Delegates at Annual Meeting.

INDIANAPOLIS TO GET CLAY COURT TOURNEY

Vote of Four Individuals Offsets Personal Ballot of 24 Men Who Favored the Mound City.

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—St. Louis lost in its fight to obtain the national clay court tennis championship for 1923, at the annual meeting of the United States Lawn Tennis Association here, today. The delegates awarded the event to the Western Association, to be played in Indianapolis.

There is an interesting story in the way the votes were cast in the contest for the clay court tournament. The total of vote was 52,225 and 30,375 were cast for the Western and 21,850 for the Missouri Valley. Indianapolis secured the event by the following votes:

New York, 18,726; Western, 9125; New England 2225; miscellaneous, 300. Total, 30,375.

The above vote was cast by four men as against 24 delegates who cast the balance of the country for the Missouri Valley application. On a popular vote of the delegates present St. Louis would have been victorious by a large majority. Sections who voted for the Missouri Valley are as follows:

Middle States (Penna), Middle Atlantic, Southern, California, Pacific Northwest, Northwestern and Southern New England.

Davis Named President.

Dwight F. Davis of St. Louis was unanimously elected president of the national association and when he took the chair the delegates stood and gave him a tremendous ovation. Other officers and delegates elected are as follows: Vice president, George W. Wightman, Boston; secretary, Paul B. Williams, Utica, N. Y.; treasurer, Louis B. Dailey, East Orange, N. J.; R. Norris Williams, Philadelphia, Samuel H. Collom, Philadelphia, and Jones Mersereau, New York, delegates at large; E. M. Gorrill, Salt Lake City, Utah, Walter A. Goss, Portland, Ore., B. M. Grant, Atlanta, J. C. Stewart, Chicago and Nathan Bunday, Norfolk, sectional delegates.

The annual session was very busy all the time it opened until the end. Almost every committee reported showed progress during the past year. All records for tournament play were broken in 1922. There were 263 events for seniors sanctioned by the association and 85 junior events were held in various parts of the country.

Davis Has Fine Record.

Mr. Davis, the new president, has been a prominent figure in the development of tennis, both in this country and abroad, for more than two decades. He was born in St. Louis in 1879, but now is a resident of Washington, where he is a director of the War Finance Corporation.

In addition to his international fame as donor of the world's team trophy bearing his name, while at Harvard, where he was graduated in 1900, Mr. Davis attracted national attention for the first time winning the intercollegiate championship in singles, and paired with Holcombe Ward, the doubles title. This combination swept all before it for several seasons, winning the Newport doubles and then the national title in 1899, defending the latter championship successfully in 1900 and 1901. Ward and Davis last summer captured the veterans' doubles title in the tournament at the Longwood Cricket Club, Boston, defeating Messrs. D. E. Jones and A. Ingraham, in the final round, 8—6, 6—3.

Mr. Davis also aided the United States in its successful defense of one of the cup against the British Isles, as the only challenger, in 1900, in 1902, the first years it was in competition.

Lawn tennis rules are the same throughout the world as a result of the formal acceptance today by the United States Lawn Tennis Association, at today's meeting, of the code adopted recently in London by the 14 principal tennis playing nations.

Universal standardization will not materially affect the American rules as most of the changes were in the wording of the code.

The association ratified the action of the Executive Committee in Cleveland and Yeatman Victors In Basket Games

Close Scores Feature Triumphs Over McKinley and Soldan High Teams.

Yeatman and Cleveland defeated Soldan and McKinley, respectively, in two of the hardest fought games of the Interscholastic Basketball League at Cleveland gymnasium yesterday. Yeatman won the afternoon game from Soldan, 19 to 16, while Cleveland triumphed in the evening over McKinley, 21 to 20.

Cleveland was without the services of one of its stars, Ray Kaiser, who was ill. The score was see-sawed during the first 10 minutes of play, and at the end of the first half the score was 13 to 7 in favor of McKinley.

Opening the second half, Cleveland swept down the floor repeatedly and piled up 7 points in a few minutes, while holding McKinley scoreless.

Syberg's misses on foul-throw opportunities robbed McKinley of a chance to retain its lead near the finish. Williams, Cleveland left guard, uncorked the sensational shot of the evening, a long toss from midfield.

The Yeatman-Soldan game furnished a pleasant surprise and if it was not the best game of the season in point of skill and technique, it certainly was one of the most thrilling. Neither team at any moment exercised a formidable advantage. The trailing team at all times was within sight of the lead.

Coach White of Soldan resorted to a pleasing bit of strategy at the opening of the second half. His team was trailing, 9 to 10. Yeatman was playing an aggressive game and was scoring the greater share of its points from the field. The Soldan regulars were roughly treated in the first half and so Coach White sent in an entire new team.

The youngsters literally swept Yeatman off its feet for a few minutes, but Yeatman rallied and regained lost ground. Then White sent his five regulars back and took the lead at 16 to 12. Stremel, Haggerman and Stremel scored for Yeatman from the field and Soldan was again trailing.

Kaiser and Champion Lynch to Be Members of Same Ring Stable

LITERATURE being broadcasted by Eddie Mead of New York, manager of Bantam Champion Joe Lynch, announces that Peewee Kaiser of St. Louis has joined the stable of which the title holder is a member. Andy Chaney and Benny Valger, well known in St. Louis, will be stable mates of Kaiser.

The circular sent out says that as soon as Peewee gets acclimated he will be sent against the best bantams of the country.

Kaiser, who for some time was under the management of Joe Levy, deserted his former manager following Peewee's defeat by Johnny Curtain in New York. On that occasion Levy was unable to be present, owing to the death of his mother in Cleveland.

Kaiser and Jack Lawler, formerly from the Levy stable, were both knocked out for the first time in the absence of their manager. Lew Tendler put Lawler away.

Levy announced recently that Benny Levy, the clever bantam, had joined his stable and would seek a match with "Peewee" Kaiser. Benny displayed great cleverness in two or three bouts here.

LAYTON OPENS NEW PARLORS; WINS AND LOSES TO HAHMAN

Johnny Layton broke even with Hahman of Cleveland in two Interstate Billiard League matches at Layton's new parlors yesterday. Layton won the afternoon game, 50 to 23, in 42 innings. He lost the evening match, 50 to 42, in 48 innings.

The matches marked the opening of the new billiard academy near Grand and Olive streets. Layton received many floral tributes from his St. Louis friends.

Tiff Denton is now leading the Interstate Three-Cushion Billiard League with 27 victories and 9 reverses. Layton is second with 26 and 10.

MISSOURI VICTOR OVER SOONERS, 38-29

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NORMAN, Ok., Feb. 3.—Missouri did the expected here tonight and handed the Sooners a second defeat this season in a hotly contested battle, which ended 38 to 29. The first half ended 17 to 12, Missouri leading.

Superior speed, more highly developed technique and the murderous accuracy of the short pass spelled doom for Oklahoma from the outset and these factors gave Missouri a lead at the start which Oklahoma was never able to overcome although she did come within four points of the Tigers several times.

Only Easy Marks Left to Face Champion Jack Dempsey, if Edict Against Harry Wills Is Upheld

Beckett, Firpo and Floyd Johnson Not Capable of Furnishing Real Opposition for the Champion — New Jersey May Not Back Up New York in Stand Against Wills.

By John E. Wray,
Sports Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Drastic enforcement of his own ideas by William Muldoon, the 70-year-old chairman of the New York State Athletic Commission, is causing the "big business" promoters of ring contests in New York something akin to the "willies."

Also, it is causing the public some annoyance. Whenever the D O P finds somebody tampering with its inalienable privilege of demonstrating that Barnum was right, it becomes incandescent under its shirt collar.

Mr. Muldoon yesterday issued an edict which cut down the crop of "logical opponents" by one more. Harry Wills, the biggest prospect in the champion's financial harvest, was the man eliminated. Muldoon opined that a match between Wills and Dempsey would be inadvisable not because he has anything against Wills, dear no. It is because of the attack of acute commercialitis which has assailed our best promoters, leading them to buzz the ear of the champion and his entourage with chatter about millions.

Dr. Muldoon wants to draw his lite lancet and slice these financial excrescences to let out some of the inflation. He feels that a little phlebotomy will reduce the feverish situation to a point where the promotor will not have to charge $50 per seat in order to shake a million dollars out of the public.

Protecting the Public.

Muldoon, in brief, thinks he will save fans a lot of pocket money which they may divert to more useful purchases—say pre-Volstead distillations and other necessities. He maintains that the fight promoter is charging so much and the fighters are making such enormous profits that the D O P can hardly find the wherewithal to keep the bootlegger from the door.

As a result of the newest move by Muldoon the following candidates have been lopped from the list of Dempsey eligibles by the State Athletic Commission:

JESS WILLARD, because he was too old.

TOM GIBBONS, because he was little.

BILL BRENNAN, because he was too often defeated.

HARRY WILLS, because he was too black (probably).

There remain in line only three candidates that have come under the public view. These are likely to be barred by Mr. Muldoon for the following reasons:

LUIS FIRPO, too green.
JOE BECKETT, too easy.
FLOYD JOHNSON, too inexperienced.

This puts the situation squarely up to Jack Dempsey, who henceforth, it appears, will be forced to forego the pleasure of dusting the resin with his rivals, and return to a few millions of dollars worth of motion picture contracts.

The Ubiquitous Ticket Scalper Could Undo All of Muldoon's Price-Cutting

Muldoon means well, but he reckons without his public. When he undertakes to bar boxing contests to save money for the purchasers he steps on their personal liberty corn. The public insists upon giving its money where it pleases. It wants to see certain bouts, regardless of the cost.

Would Benefit Scalpers Only.

Perhaps it knows, better than Muldoon, that any lowering of schedule prices will be a wonderful thing—for the ticket scalpers, not for the public.

Fight promoters have a habit of not knowing how thousands of choice tickets get into speculators' hands; but there they arrive. No matter if the title fight seats are scheduled at $15 the ticket, only friends of the promoting circle will be able to trace one of these rare ducats to its lair and surround it for a sawbuck and a half. But scalpers will sell you choice $15 seats at about the customary rate, 50 bucks with war tax.

Muldoon, it appears, is the right dog, but on the wrong track.

His gradual hewing down of the forest of Dempsey opponents will merely result in the lopping off of his own head, or the killing of the fight game in the Empire State.

Muldoon pulled a Bonehead Barry when he refused to take his commission into the National Boxing Association, composed of 18 state commissions. Alone, Muldoon cannot hope to stand. With the association behind him he might have accomplished something to the great good of an unappreciated public.

As to the remaining challengers still eligible in New York:

Joe Beckett—A 30-year-old Englishman of little merit, according to American standards, and suspected gameness. He has already been knocked out by Carpentier and may suffer the same experience when they meet again.

Floyd Johnson—Green as a gourd, but with native fighting ability. His punch failed to materialize against Brennan. He defeated a fat, superannuated mauler when he defeated Bill. That was his best showing. Critics gave him little chance against the title holder.

Luis Angel Firpo—A giant of the Pampas, Argentine, who evidently has a wallop and knows only in a crude way what to do with it. He won three battles in this country against third-rate men, much lighter than himself. He defeated Jim Tracey in Argentine. Tracey is a fourth rate Austrian. Firpo will probably wake up in dreamland one minute after shaking hands with the champion.

Still Chance for Wills.

Of course New Jersey has yet to bar Harry Wills. If the Jersey commission fails, in this instance, to work with the New York Commission as it has in the past, then the Wills match will be made and put on in the "big bowl." If it takes place, it may be the last of the truly amazing million dollar fight ventures of recent ring history.

Wills is the only fighter on the horizon able to give Dempsey an argument, as far as past performance goes. The public will demand that he be given a fight with Dempsey and it must take place somewhere, some time, Mr. Muldoon to the contrary notwithstanding.

St. Louis Dash Star Adds New Laurels to His Indoor String at Boston.

BOSTON, Feb. 3.—Loren Murchison of St. Louis, world's indoor sprint champion, added to his laurels here tonight in the annual Boston Athletic Association indoor games, when he won the 40-yard dash from a good field in 4 7-10s.

Murchison got away from the mark well, as usual, and had no great difficulty in beating the speedy Bowman of Syracuse and Carroll of Holy Cross.

Joie Ray also came through with a victory in the Hunter mile, beating Buker and Connoly in excellent time.

Willie Ritola, the Finnish distance runner, lapped every opponent in winning the three-mile run.

St. Louis Club Leader Highest Paid in League With Single Exception

Man Who Brought the Team Through War Vicissitudes Faces Hard Task During the Coming Campaign.

By Herman Wecke.

Branch Rickey, who since 1919 has been manager of the St. Louis club of the National League, has been signed to lead the Cardinals for the next five seasons. This was the announcement made by Sam Breadon, president of the club, yesterday.

In making the announcement, Breadon asserted that "Rickey would be the highest-salaried leader in the N. L. with but one exception." He did not mention the name of the exception, but without a doubt it is John McGraw of the Giants.

Rickey was signed to a new contract because his old document, which ran for three years, expired the last of December, 1922.

In signing a manager for five campaigns the president of the Cardinals is not following the procedure usually in vogue in baseball, where leaders are placed under contract for one season and at the most two.

In getting Rickey's signature to a contract for five seasons, Breadon and his fellow-owners in the Cardinals are showing explicit faith in the manager's capabilities. Breadon also stated that had Rickey wished the contract could have been made for an even longer period.

The present Cardinal manager went over to the National League in 1917, coming from the Browns, where he had acted as business manager after Phil Ball and the other Federal League owners had bought out the interests of R. L. Hedges.

The first year that Rickey was with the Cardinals, Miller Huggins was manager of the team, while the next campaign, 1918, Jack Hendricks was brought here from Indianapolis, only to make a monumental failure. The next year Rickey was in charge, and he has been at the helm ever since.

Well Up Last Two Years.

Under Hendricks in 1918 the club finished in eighth place with a percentage of .395. The next year the first with Rickey as manager the club was seventh with .394. In 1920 the outfit came home sixth with .487. Then came a big spurt and in 1921 the aggregation was third with .569, while last season, after encountering as tough breaks as any major league pennant contender has ever faced, the team was tied for third with Pittsburg at the finish with a percentage of .552.

That Rickey encountered hard knocks in 1922 is evinced by the following: Pickles Dillhoefer, catcher, and one of the best coaches in the league, died before the opening of the year; Johnny Lavan went to the bad; Heine Mueller was injured and failed to live up to expectations; Bill Doak, leading National League pitcher in 1921, after winning six straight, went bad and lost nine in a row; Austin McHenry was lost after the middle of the year.

Rickey Made Many Trades.

Right now the chances for the Cardinals in the coming National League pennant chase do not loom up any too bright. Rickey must find a short stop, some outfielders and pitchers to get anywhere. And no one realizes it any more than the Cardinal leader himself.

Rickey has made some notable trades since he has been manager of the Cardinals. He obtained Jack Fournier from the Coast League. He signed Eddie Ainsmith when the catcher was turned adrift by the Detroit Tigers. He brought Milton Stock here from the Phillies. Not one of the three players he gave the Phils in this deal, which also brought Dillhoefer and Davis here, is still in the majors. He also brought Jeff Pfeffer, the Cardinals' most effective pitcher last season, here from the Dodgers.

In fact, only four players who were members of Jack Hendricks' 1918 club are still with the club. They are Rogers Hornsby, Jack Smith, Bill Doak and Bill Sherdel.

Indoor Baseball Game Between Browns and Cardinals, February 17

AN indoor baseball game between the Browns and the Cardinals will be a feature of the Children of America Loyalty League carnival at the Coliseum Saturday evening, Feb. 17.

Rogers Hornsby will recruit and captain the Cardinals and George Sisler will boss the Browns, aided and abetted by Bobby Wallace and Jack Ryan.

Tentative lineups look like this:

Borwns—Koney Elliott, pitch; Schulte, catch; Sisler, first; Brannigan, second; Robertson and Cliff Brady, shortstop, "Red" Roche and Lee Walsh, third; Tobin, right field; Shocker, center field; Meine, left field.

Cardinals — Ainsmith, catch; Fournier, first; Blades, second; Hornsby, shortstop; Schultz, third; Mueller and Pertica, outfielders, and North, Holland, pitch.

Mrs. Nathaniel Brown, chairman of the Committee on the arrangements of the Loyalty League, has promoted the game.

Concordia Beats Billikens, 33—17

Seminary Team Shows Complete Mastery Over St. Louis U.

Concordia Seminary's crack basketball five effectually elimipated St. Louis University as a contender for local collegiate honors by defeating the Billikens at Holy Cross Hall last night, 33 to 17. Concordia had previously defeated Washington U. by an equally top-heavy score.

The Billikens played with a slightly altered lineup, Eggler taking Hannegan's place at center. Concordia had its regular team on the floor, and, as usual, Hartner, Schuessler and Buchheimer were the stars. Jungemann guarded effectively and slipped through with one field goal. There was a good crowd in attendance.

INTERCITY HANDBALL MATCHES START FEB. 23

Definite dates have been agreed upon by athletic officials of the Chicago and the St. Louis Fire Department for an intercity handball tournament. The first matches will be played at Chicago Feb. 23 and 24, and the return engagement at St. Louis March 2 and 3.

While the St. Louis team has not been finally selected, it is probable that Walter Kammann and Mike Cunningham, who recently won the city championship, will represent the Mound City.

A peculiar feature of the meet is the fact that each city will be permitted to use its favorite style of ball. The Chicagoans play almost exclusively with the "hard" ball, a small, leather-covered pellet, whereas the St. Louisans usually use the "soft" black rubber ball. Therefore, it was decided to play five matches with the hard ball and five with the soft ball in each city. In this the hard ball will be played at Louisiana Hall and the soft ball matches at the National Athletic Association gymnasium.

Kenrick Defeats Troy.

Kenrick High School basketball team handed the Troy, Missouri High team a 32-to-22 defeat at the Kenrick gymnasium yesterday afternoon. This is the second victory for Kenrick over Troy, the first game having been played at Troy on Thanksgiving Day. Ed Morris, at left forward, and George Morris at right forward were the high point getters for Kenrick. Ed scored eight field baskets and George got five.

New York Ties Bethlehem.

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Feb. 3.—Bethlehem and the New York club played an American Soccer League match here today to a draw, at three goals all. Bethlehem, however, remains at the head of the league.

As to That Willard-Dempsey Match: The Fat May Be in the Fire, but the Lard Is Still in Willard

Team Mates Will Tell Danforth to Pitch or Get Out

Freak Ball Hurler, Recalled by Browns, Must Abandon Questionable Tactics.

BAN JOHNSON A VISITOR

Conference With Browns' Owner Has No Bearing on Local Park Problems.

One of the most interesting characters in the major league baseball world came back into the fold yesterday when Dave Danforth, formerly of the Browns, sent in a signed contract to renew his obligation to pitch for Phil Ball's team next season.

Dave is the real mystery man of baseball. With a splendid assortment of natural "stuff"—that is, speed, curves and change of pace—he was practically shot out of the league because he was suspected of pitching illegitimate slants.

After a memorable instance in which he struck out a star batter, an examination of the ball resulted in his retirement from the game. Danforth was sent to Tulsa, a Brownie farm. He has always defied his detractors to produce real evidence against him and, so far as is known, they have not done so. But he did well at Tulsa last season and was reclaimed by the Browns this year. His signed contract seems to indicate that he will make another attempt to "come back" for big league honors. It was announced Danforth would go to training camp with the club.

Business Manager Bob Quinn of the Browns said last night that there was absolutely nothing against Danforth and that Dave's success this year would be welcomed by the club, if he could deliver the goods along legitimate lines.

Players May Intervene.

It has been agreed, as a plan to keep Danforth in line, that the players themselves take the matter in hand and insist that Dave adhere to all pitching rules for the good of the club. All the Browns believe that Danforth can pitch great ball, if he will.

Danforth was in a peculiar situation. An object of suspicion last year on two counts—his hurling secret and his threw to first base—he surely had no favors handed him by the umpires. This year he will be instructed to absolutely refrain from any dubious secrets of pitching, whether he thinks them legitimate or not. He will also have to hew to the line in his throws to first base.

Danforth first attracted attention through his freak ball and through his peculiar motion in catching runners off first. The members of the Browns last year maintained that he could have been a first rate hurler without resorting to either of the practices questioned by the officials.

Perry Kane of Mayfield, Ky., and Lou Kraft, last year a Beaumont pitcher, were the only other Browns to sign contracts yesterday.

A report from Kansas City, received too late for confirmation from the Browns office last night, said that Pat Collins had signed a contract for 1923 with a boost in salary.

Ban Johnson Here.

Byron Bancroft Johnson, president of the American League, who brought modern baseball to its present high plane, was a visitor in the city yesterday. Ban returned to Excelsior Springs, Mo., yesterday, after an informal talk with President Phil Ball, of the local American League club.

President Johnson had nothing of importance to communicate. He said he was not here in the interest of the construction of new stands at Sportsman's Park and added that his visit was purely informal. Mr. Ball recently returned from a trip to the Pacific Coast on business other than baseball.

Mr. Ball expressed the opinion that the opposition of the Coast League to the major league draft idea was not whole-hearted and predicted that, in any event, the majors would control the situation.

"We will never lack talent for development purposes," Ball said. "For the rest, since the argument has developed, the minor leagues can take care of themselves. Probably they will not be able to do it so successfully as some Western owners think."

Wasem to Meet Armbruster Today

Three Other Bouts Scheduled at Rock Springs Turner Hall.

The feature of a wrestling program at Rock Springs Turner Hall, 4248 Chouteau avenue, this afternoon, will be a match between Al Wasem and Carl Armbruster. There will be three other bouts.

Wasem gained a referee's decision over Armbruster in a one-fall match at the Coliseum as a preliminary to the Lewis-Zbyszko match. The fall was not at all decisive and Armbruster immediately clamored for a return engagement. Wasem is former world's lightweight champion and is now instructor of wrestling at Washington University. He has practiced on the mat several times each week through the winter and is in good shape. Armbruster is a comparative youngster.

The preliminary matches are as follows:

William Martin vs. Joe Sanderson, light-heavyweights; Chester McCormack and "Def" Pierce, welterweights: J. Sanders, 145 pounds, and Elton Easterday, 130 pounds.

DWIGHT F. DAVIS IS NAMED PRESIDENT OF NATIONAL TENNIS BODY

awarding to the West Side Tennis Club, at Forest Hills, Long Island, one of the principal tournaments for each of the next 10 years, for which the club will erect a concrete stadium seating 12,000 persons, which can be enlarged, temporarily or permanently, to care for 21,000.

The club was awarded the Davis cup challenge round for this year and the national men's singles for the next five years, beginning 1924. For the following four years the club will have option of the Davis cup challenge round or the national men's singles.

The cost of erecting the stadium, $150,000, will be met by the sale of 1500 seats at the principal tournaments for the 10-year period, at $100 each.

National Tourney Reduced.

Reducing the entry list for the national men's singles from 128 to 64 players "in order to insure a tournament of real championship caliber" was the principal action affecting playing of the game. The association also voted to limit "seeded" players in this tournament to 16—eight Americans and eight foreign.

Consideration of an invitation to join the international tennis federation was referred to a special committee, it being understood that the attitude of the association remains as it has been—not to join until the international body withdraws the awards in perpetuity to certain clubs of tournaments of international importance, particularly the "world's" grass court championship to Wimbledon, England.

The association formally awarded the following tournaments for this year:

National women's singles and doubles, West Side Tennis Club, Forest Hills, New York, Aug. 13-18; National Men's and veterans' doubles, Mixed doubles, fathers and sons junior singles and doubles, and boys' singles and doubles, Aug. 20-25, Longwood Cricket Club, Boston; Davis Cup challenger round, West Side Tennis Club, Forest Hills, New York, Aug. 31, Sept. 1-2; National Men's singles and veterans' singles, Germantown Cricket Club, Philadelphia; Sept. 7-15; National Clay Court Championships, Indianapolis.

INDIANOLA, Ia., Feb. 3.—Eleven members of the Iowa Conference will compete in the first annual basketball tournament here March 2 and 3, it was announced here today.

Floyd Johnson, an Ironworker, Likely Successor to Dempsey

Three Years Ago Floyd Won Amateur Tourney by Knocking Out All Opponents—Dempsey Groomed Him to Beat Bob Martin—Edgren Says He Has Qualities of a Champion.

By Robert Edgren.

(Copyright, 1923.)

Floyd Johnson, blond, blue-eyed and a fighting man, looks like a rival for Dempsey's ring honors within the year.

Johnson has fought his way through 10 winning battles in the East in spite of the dopesters who picked two of his opponents—Bob Martin and Bill Brennan—to beat him easily because of superior experience and boxing skill.

He won nine straight with knockouts, Brennan badly whipped, lasted 15 rounds. But Big Bill Brennan has been knocked out only by Jack Dempsey, himself, and that after 12 desperate rounds of fighting.

Bill is rugged as a big Dat Nelson, and so stubbornly game that he doesn't know when he's hurt.

Floyd Johnson was an iron worker in San Francisco when he began fighting three years ago. There was a local trades boxing tournament.

Johnson had been boxing a little with the boys during noon hours at the iron works, although without any idea of ever going into a real contest. He was surprised when he found his name on the list of contestants entered from his shop.

At first he didn't know whether to compete or not, but his friends in the iron works urged him to go through with it. He had no real objection to taking part in an entertaining scrap or two for the fun of fighting. So he trained a few days.

Knocked 'Em All Out.

In that tournament Johnson knocked out every man he met from the first preliminary to the final bout, winning the championship of the iron workers. Het met some strong men, and bigger men, and some who knew more about boxing, but none of them could stand up under his blows.

Here Alex Greggains, famous old-time fighter—the same Greggains who fought Buffalo Costello in two drawn battles of 50 and 80 rounds for the middleweight championship which both claimed—saw Johnson and became interested.

Greggains has run boxing clubs in San Francisco, and has developed several world's champions. He knows as much about fighting and fighters as any man living.

Greggains knew Johnson had the stuff to go up among the champions. He made him a proposition, took charge of his training, taught him the first principles of scientific attack and defense, and sent him into the coast four-round game.

Here Johnson made good immediately, and after a short time Greggains sent him to New York, where a man who can make good in the ring can get real money for it.

From the start Johnson made good. Matched against second rate heavies, he knocked them over one after another without any difficulty. He looked a little awkward, perhaps a little slow, but there was something effective about his hitting, and blows didn't bother him.

After a while Johnson was matched to box Fighting Bob Martin, of whom General Pershing is said to have spoken once as "The mightiest fighting man of two million fighting men."

Martin began boxing while in the army. He is a tall, splendidly built fellow. Champion of the American Expeditionary Forces, tournament winner, he beat his men with terrific right-hand punches. After the war he took up professional boxing and won many fights.

Johnson trained for the Martin fight in Stillman's Gymnasium, where Jack Dempsey was training at the same time, as he always trains to keep in shape wherever he stays for a few days.

Tutored by Dempsey.

Jack Dempsey took charge of Johnson's boxing for two days, spent hours boxing with him and coaching him, taught him the Dempsey system of hitting continuously and holding the aggressive, coached him to use his left hand to keep the other fellow on the defense, and to cross his right only when he had a good opening. He taught Floyd more in those two days than Floyd had learned in two years before that.

Dempsey had two objects in coaching Johnson. First, he had met him in the gymnasium and liked the boy, and, second, he didn't want to fight and beat Martin himself, because such a match might stir up again the old prejudices that died out so slowly after Dempsey was cleared of the "slacker charges" in a San Francisco court. If Martin had to be kept away from the championship he preferred to have someone else do it.

To avoid even the appearance of being interested in Martin's defeat, Dempsey stayed away from the bout, although he was in New York and always likes to see a good fight.

Has the Physique.

Johnson has qualities that may make him one of the best heavyweights in the trade with a little more ring experience.

He is only 22 years old.

He is 6 feet tall, and a bit over.

He weighs, stripped, 194 pounds—11 pounds more than Dempsey weighed when he won the championship.

Physical measurements aren't everything, but strength helps if the ring. Johnson is very compactly built. His legs are not too heavy. His waist is just light enough in proportion. His chest is extremely deep, denoting endurance. His shoulders are wide and his arms thick. His wrists and hands are heavy. Johnson has a short, thick neck; a round head, well-formed; a wide, strong jaw.

BENNY LEONARD TO BOX TENDLER AND WHITE IN 1923, IF PLANS MATURE

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—Negotiations are under way for two bouts next summer in which Benny Leonard would defend his title as world's lightweight boxing champion.

One would be with Lew Tendler of Philadelphia, whom Leonard defeated last year, and the other with Charlie White of Chicago, whom Leonard also has beaten. Tex Rickard is understood to be arranging the matches.

MISS BANCROFT WINS CASINO TENNIS TITLE

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—Miss Leslie Bancroft of the Longwood Cricket Club, Boston, won the indoor lawn tennis singles on the courts of the eHights Casino, Brooklyn, today, defeating Miss Lillian Scharman, seventh Regiment Tennis Club.

Both women put forth their fastest strokes.

From her side of the net, Miss Banecroft uniformly angled the ball into the corners where she forced the rallies for the points, putting a sting into her shots and overhands that frequently left Miss Scharman flatfooted, without a chance for a return.

Bambino Should Get More Home Runs at Stadium

Engineer's Figures Show Right Field Fence Is Very Attractive.

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—Babe Ruth started it.

The big hitter said the other day that he wouldn't care to play in right field at the Yankee stadium, if it were deep and full of distance.

"If a ball gets by out there it will be a home run inside the grounds," said the Babe. "There is an awful bunch of space out there."

And then the discussion began. Some of the sharps agreed with Ruth, others thought the right Grounds still to be the larger. Then the discussion drifted to home runs and whether it would be easier to make them at the new grounds or at the Brush stadium.

It all ended when Maj. Tom Jingham, engineer in charge of the Yank park, following a tip from Col. Til Huston, took his trusty measures and found the actual dimensions.

"The Yankee stadium has the larger playing field," said the Major. "There are 138,000 square feet in the new park—that is of playing space on fair ground—and 118,000 square feet at the Polo Grounds.

"In just one spot is the Yankee park smaller than the Polo Grounds—the left field foul line. The Yankee left field line, from home plate to the stands in left field, is 257.6 feet. The Giant park has a left foul line 320 feet long, or 277 feet.

"On the right field line the fences are the same—277.6 from the home plate to the stands.

Deeper in Center.

"In center field the Yankee park is the deeper. From the home plate at the Polo Grounds to the center field fence—the new center field fence that will be there next year when the present alterations are completed—there is a distance of 433 feet. At the Yankee stadium the distance along a similar line is 490 feet."

Having heard the dry statistics, Ed Barrow business manager of the Yanks declared there was nothing in the story that the Yanks purposely made their foul line short so that the home run crop turned in by Babe Ruth—or which it is hoped that he will turn in—would not be diminished.

"The engineers of the new stadium made the most of their space. While the foul line on the right field side in the new park is the same as in the Polo Grounds, and the left field line is slightly shorter it will be a harder task to hit home runs at the Yankee stadium. The left field bleecher line at the Yankee stadium slopes away from the plate more sharply than at the Polo Grounds. Except for a space of about 30 feet in right field, there is the same condition in that direction.

The Lower Wall.

"If a man can hit a ball hard and close to the lines in the Yankee stadium he may make a home run as easily as he did at the Polo Grounds—otherwise he will be out on fly. There will be a big space for the outfielders to roam in right center, center and left center at the Yankee park."

To the fan, however, it will be clear that when the Yanks bat it will be their field they didn't aim to accommodate the Babe—not to any great extent. He hits to right field, and right in the new park he has a big target staring him in the face. But there is another feature of the grounds there worth considering. That is in extreme left and right just where the foul line bends to the stands, there are low boxes above the field. Many a ball will strike fair ground, skirt the foul line and loop into the boxes for flukes that if hit hard enough. At the Polo Grounds a ball must clear a high wall to get out of the playing field, even in the short terrain in right

Koloff to Weigh 20 Pounds More Than Mat Rival

Bulgarian May Need Advantage in Londos Match, Previous Clash Shows.

A good indication that Jimmy Londos, heralded as the Greek wrestling champion, is taking his match with Dan Koloff, Bulgarian heavyweight, Thursday night seriously is in the fact that the Greek Adonis intends to spend the remainder of the time in St. Louis training for the match.

On two other occasions only has Londos arrived any length of time ahead of a match that he has had in this city—his contests with Champion Ed Lewis and Stanislaus Zbyszko, former world's title holder. For Lewis the Greek grappler trained faithfully in St. Louis a week in advance and his fine showing against the champion plainly proved the value of the earnest efforts he put forth in preparing for the Strangler. The same condition also prevailed for the bout with Zbyszko, as the Greek held his own with the big Pole for the hour that they wrestled. Lewis defeated Londos, but it was a strenuous struggle, with Londos gaining a fall.

Koloff has been in St. Louis for several weeks and apparently is in excellent condition. The Bulgarian has been training faithfully every day at Rock Springs Turner Hall and his workouts have won him a large following of wrestling fans. At the present time he is weighing about 210. This weight will give him about 25 pounds advantage over Londos.

Koloff's Defeat a "Fluke."

Koloff expects a hard battle as he has the experience of the last match to guide him. In that bout Londos gained the only fall within a couple of minutes by the use of an arm scissors, gaining the hold while the two men were coming off the ropes. Koloff claims that he was under the impression that the men were to go to the center of the ring when ordered off the ropes by the referee and he says that Londos gained the advantage through a technicality.

Regardless of the justness of Koloff's claim one thing is certain and that is that Londos was on the defense virtually the remainder of the bout, and had many close calls to save himself from being defeated.

Two other bouts are on the card for Thursday. In the semifinal it will be Stanislaus Zzyszko, former world's champion, and Wallace Duguit, a hefty Canadian grapler. Each weighs about 225 pounds, with the Canadian being several years younger than the former title holder. On Dec. 8 Duguit went 1 hour and 17 minutes with Champion Lewis. In the opening bout Boris Demetroff, a Bulgarian, meets Kozak Sanosian, an Armenian.

Sarazen Writes of His Trouble In Third Round of Title Tourney

Golf Champion Asserts He Was Holding Driver Too Near End —Going Into Last 18 Two Strokes Behind Is No Handicap to Stars.

By Gene Sarazen.
(Copyright, 1923.)

Having qualified for the championship, I then began to concentrate on the task ahead. This was my third National Open Tournament, and, although great players like Jim Barnes, Chick Evans and others have played in tournaments for years before they won, I, with the impatience of youth, felt that it was about time that I began to win if I was ever to do so.

GENE SARAZEN UNDERWOOD & UNDERWOOD

I knew that I was hitting the ball about as well as I possibly could. I had developed my stroke until I felt that it was absolutely and perfectly grooved. My victory in the Southern Open at New Orleans had given me a world of confidence. And so I stepped out on the first tee at Skokie, feeling very hopeful and confident. Everything beyond was very bright. I can see now that youth does not anticipate trouble in the climb to the top, but I am growing wiser and possibly a little sadder each day.

On my first two rounds I played with Pat O'Hara. I was hitting the ball beautifully from the tee. My iron shots were coming off nicely and I was haying my share of luck on the putting greens. In fact, I was sitting on top of the world on the first day.

My first round was a 73. My second was a 72. That, to my way of thinking, was practically perfect golf, considering that I had not got down any long putts. My total of 145 for the first day left me in third place. Three shots back of old John Black, who was leading the field, and one shot back of William Melhorn, one of the finest young golfers in the country.

Did Plenty of Thinking.

Bobby Jones, Walter Hagen, Jock Hutchison, Jim Barnes, George Duncan, Abe Mitchell, Chick Evans, Johnny Farrell and all the rest of the field were trailing me. I could hardly realize what a golden opportunity I had—it was all like a dream.

You can well imagine that I did plenty of thinking and visualizing after these first two rounds. A thousand thoughts ran through my head. "Only two men to beat to achieve my ambition—the winning of the National Open Championship." To Leo Diegel, with whom I chummed during the tournament, I said: "Leo, I am hitting the ball beautifully. If I can keep going the way I did today, I'll win this tournament sure."

"Don't you figure any of the rest of us are going to be up there too?" replied Diegel. I smiled, and said, "Yes." But frankly, because of my success of the first day, I felt that I was going to win. It was hard for me to admit even to myself that anybody was going to beat me.

In the first place, I was in a fine position for the third round, which is the most important round of any tournament. It is on this round that a man is made or broken. Moreover, being three shots behind, gave me something to fight for. You've really got to have that as an incentive in order to win.

You have often heard golfers say they would prefer to be a couple of shots behind going into the last round. That is the truth, because there is a psychological handicap in being out in front. The tendency is to play safe in order to hold the lead, whereas, when one is behind, he feels free to go for everything and is more apt to play his own game better than to play in natural form.

Trouble on Third Round.

On the first two rounds, as I have stated, I was playing as well as I possibly could—better golf, in fact, than I did on the last round, when I had a 68. But that is golf. There are days when one is hitting the ball well and yet is unable to score—which, incidentally, is what I am doing right now on my tour with Jock Hutchison—and there are other days when one is not hitting the ball so well and yet is making good scores.

On the first day I was generally down in two shots from the edge of each and every green. I had putts on several greens for birdies. In short, I was scoring easily.

But then came the third round, which nearly proved my undoing. Starting at the very first hole, I began hooking my tee shots. I tried everything I knew in golf to get away from this terrible malady. I reached the turn in 40 strokes and was fortunate that I hadn't taken more. I was beginning to worry and to fret. I saw my chance for the title slipping from my grasp. Johnny Farrell was playing with me on this round.

As he stepped up to make his drive on the tenth tee, I noticed that he was gripping the club several inches from the end. Right then and there I saw where I had been making my mistake. I had been gripping my driver too near the end of the club. I immediately took a shorter grip and at once got better control of my shot. Everyone of my drives on this last nine were perfect. Getting back my drive also helped the rest of my game, and I came back in 35, giving me 75 for the round.

I was feeling happy again and with only John Black, Bobby Jones and William Melhorn leading me, I felt I still had a good chance of winning. I was playing as well on the last nine holes as I had on the previous day. I had got back my drive, which was the most important thing, and I was in about the position I wished to be for the last and final round. That was the most eventful thing that had happened in golf for me.

Vespers to Play Scullins, Today

Victory Will Put McCarthy's Men in First Place in Soccer League Race.

The Scullins, leaders in the St. Louis Soccer League by a one-point margin, will oppose the Vespers, their closest competitors, in the second and feature contest of the regular double-header at High School Field today. The Ben Millers and Hoovers battle in the first game, starting at 2 o'clock.

Paul Murphy and Bill Bascom will handle the first game, while "Butch" Amman and "Red" Roche have been named for the second.

The clash will be the fifth between the Scullins and Vespers. The Scullins own two victories by scores of 1—0 and 3—2, while the other two clashes resulted in 0—0 ties. Brady today will probably be without the services of Charley Bechtold, outside right, who suffered an injury to his knee last Sunday. There is a possibility that Nolan and Bentley will be back.

The clash between the Millers and Hoovers, in which both managers will employ their best talent, also should be a hard-fought affair.

Victories for the Vespers and Millers today would put all four Sievens in the running for the championship.

High Cost of Baseball Comes Down in Chicago

CHICAGO, Feb. 3.
By the Associated Press.

A REDUCTION in prices of admittance to baseball games at the Chicago National League Park in 1923, was announced tonight by President William L. Veek. The reduction relieves the fans from payment of war tax which the club will assume. The new scale of prices will be:

Box seats—$1.50, which formerly cost $1.65.
Grand Stand seats—$1.00, instead of $1.10.
Bleachers—50 cents instead of 55 cents.

President Veeck said he believed that the baseball fan should be relieved of some of the war-time responsibility.

ADMINISTRATION OF STATE OFFICES TO BE INVESTIGATED

Farris to Be Chairman of Committee Provided for in Legislation Decided on at Caucus of Democrats.

TO SEARCH FOR WASTE AND EXTRAVAGANCE

Stamp Accounts Will Be Looked Into and Efforts Made to Detect Fraudulent Schemes, if Any.

By CURTIS A. BETTS,
Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Feb. 3.—Preparation of the resolution for a legislative investigation of the administaration of all elective state offices, except that of the Governor, and of many of the departments headed by appointive officials, is under way, and probably will be introduced in the Senate Tuesday by Senator Farris of Rolla. Farris will be chairman of the investigating committee.

The definite decision for the inquiry was reached at the caucus of Democratic Senators Thursday night. It was stated by an informed Senator that the earlier prospect of the investigation being confined largely to the office of State Auditor Hackmann had broadened and that it was now the intention to go into nearly every administrative department.

It is known that the caucus was in possession of reports from more or less authentic sources, that several employes had attempted fraudulent schemes to obtain money from the State, in one or two cases the report being that the schemes were successful, and in others that they had been detected and prevented.

Search Will Be for Waste.

While there are several leads of this character for the committee to follow, the investigation probably will be largely an inquiry into waste and extravagence in expenditures, winked at irregularities, the classification of some employes higher than their actual employment that they might draw higher salaries, and general neglect of economical administration.

The postage stamp account of the various departments will be gone into, the statement being made in the caucus that there was a loss of probably from $15,000 to $20,000 a year in stamps due in some cases to theft, but largely due to the use by State employes of State postage for personal mail.

It was pointed out by one Senator that if the 2000 State employes averaged four stamps a week for personal use the total would run more than $10,000 a year, and that it was a generally known fact that it was quite a general custom of State employes to have their personal mail stamped in the office in which they were employed.

Cost of Auto Licenses.

Attention also was directed in the caucus to the administrative expense of the automobile license department, it being estimated from the requested appropriations for 1923 and 1924 that the cost of getting each set of automobile license plates to the owner of the automobile is 75 cents. This, some Senators said, they considered far out of reason, and it was decided there would be close scrutiny of the expenditure in the hope that a survey would indicate some means of reducing the expense.

The Secretary of State has requested a total appropriation of $579,140 for the automobile license department of his office for the biennial period. In addition the State Treasurer has requested approximately $25,000 for the expense of his office in connection with handling the license collections and disbursements to the road fund. On the basis of 400,000 automobiles in the State, this would be an expense of almost exactly 75 cents a car, or set of plates. It includes salaries of employes, cost of plates, postage, traveling expenses of inspectors and all expenses of the issuance of licenses and the keeping of the records.

It is understood Senator Painter, President pro tem., will be ready to name Senator Farris' associates on the committee immediately after the adoption of Farris' resolution which probably will be on Tuesday, and that the inquiry will be begun immediately.

WIDOW OF JAKE HAMON HAS DIVORCE SET ASIDE

Tells Court Oil Operator's Estate Is Insolvent and She Needs Alimony.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Feb. 3.—The decree of divorce recently granted Mrs. Jake Hamon, widow of the politician and oil operator, killed in Oklahoma, was set aside today at her request. Fourteen months ago she married W. L. Rohrer, millionaire art collector. The Hamon estate is not solvent, Mrs. Rohrer testified. She had expected to receive from that source money enough to keep her comfortable.

"Instead," she told Judge Steffen, "I find myself in middle age, compelled to earn my own living. I never was taught to earn. My only way of earning now is by giving piano lessons." Pupils have been few, she said, and the income irregular. "The truth is," she told the Court, "that I'm not able to support myself. I need alimony."

Administrator of Hamon Estate Files Notice of Resignation.

By the Associated Press.

ARDMORE, Ok., Feb. 3.—Notice of his resignation as administrator of the estate of the late Jake L. Hamon of Ardmore has been filed in County Court here by Frank L. Ketch, it became known today.

Ketch, who was Hamon's business manager, asked a hearing to make a final accounting of his administratorship up to Jan. 23, 1923. Hearing on the application has been set for Feb. 15 before Judge Millard F. Winfrey.

The Hamon estate was held to be insolvent at a hearing before Judge Winfrey on Jan. 23. The Court held that the Federal Revenue Department had no claim of $42,000 in inheritance tax, as alleged to be due from the widow, Mrs. Georgia Hamon Rohrer of Chicago.

Figures on the condition of the estate were not available today. Ketch was in Oklahoma City. He refused to discuss his application to resign his administratorship. He declared that he would have nothing to do with Mrs. Hamon or any of her statements.

40,000 SUN TROOPS MARCH ON CANTON

Business Houses Barricaded; Foreign Warships Anchor in River to Protect Interest.

By the Associated Press.

CANTON, Feb. 3.—With 40,000 troops under Gen. Hsu Tsung-Chi marching on Canton to reclaim the southern capital for Sun Yat Sen and a battle imminent, foreign warships anchored in the river today to protect the interests of nationals. Conditions in the city are chaotic. All business houses are closed and barricaded.

The American cruiser Helena, a French and an Italian gunboat, together with four British gunboats, is standing by in the event of hostilities which are expected at any time. Gen. Hsu and his army are coming from Swatow, according to reports, with the intention of ousting the troops from Yunnan and Kwangsi provinces that occupy the southern Capitol.

The provincial forces recently took Canton from Sun Yat Sen's enemy, Gen. Chen Chiung-Ming, who had ousted Dr. Sun last June as President of the South China republic. Since taking the city, these forces have revolted.

Ten thousand Cantonese troops that were driven from Canton by the provincial forces after their commander, Gen. Wei Pang Ping, had been imprisoned, are waiting outside the Capitol to join Gen Hsu's army in the attempt to recapture Canton.

Suffering Is Extreme.

While Canton is in complete possession of the invaders it is believed the advancing forces favorable to Dr. Sun will be able to force them to evacuate. There is the gravest danger from looting and it is probable there will be heavy loss of life if the invaders retreat in disorder. The foreign warships are determined to prevent harm to their nationals.

The foreign merchants are situated principally on Shameen Island, which is under the British and French flags, but a number of missionaries in other areas are exposed.

Pending the outcome of the expected battle, Canton, which has been experiencing continuous war for the last 12 months, is suffering extremely from the closing up of business houses. The million or more persons of the city's population is existing in miserable circumstances as the result of the military occupation.

Epidemic Threatening.

The Yunnan and Kwangsi troops here number approximately 28,000. Most of the soldiers are youths who, armed with revolvers and guns, continually parade the streets. The police, sympathetic with the harassed population, have been ousted by the troops.

While practically all the shops are barricaded, gambling is rampant and is encouraged by the militarists who are deriving a large revenue from permitting its operation.

The youthful soldiers, brandishing their weapons at all times and marching about the streets day and night, have confiscated much property and buildings in many parts of the city have been taken over for military purposes.

As a result of the suspension of the civil Government of the capital, the sanitary system has been disrupted to such an extent that an epidemic is threatening unless conditions are improved before summer.

FIVE PERSONS FINED BY FARIS ON LIQUOR CHARGES

$500 Fine Substituted for Two Months' Jail Sentence in One Case.

Five persons were fined a total of $1740 yesterday by Federal Judge Faris for violation of the Volstead act.

One, Charles Grzesiowski, 1901 North Ninth street, was charged with sale of liquor. It has been the Judge's custom to impose jail sentences for sale of liquor, but the man's attorney pleaded for leniency on the grounds that he had quit the saloon business and had four small children.

Upon learning that the man was earning 60 cents an hour in a steel plant, Judge Faris imposed a jail sentence of two months because, he said, he believed the man could not pay $500, which was the fine he would impose. The attorney pleaded anew for a fine and a fine of $500 was substituted.

Fines of $340 were imposed upon John Wezeanak, 1957 North Broadway; David E. Evans, 1001 North Broadway, and Peter Schwerb, 2282 Olive street, all proprietors; and $240 upon James McKeough, a bartender at 813 North Garrison avenue.

Man Who Shot Officer Gets Bail.

Fred Severs of 2941 Easton avenue, a worker in the Pullman shops, who Friday night shot and seriously wounded Detective-Sergeant John P. Sippel, mistaking him, he said, for a robber, was released yesterday under two $1000 bonds. One was for a charge of carrying concealed weapons, the other for one of assault to kill. Sergt. Sippel was shot in the left side and right hand, at Garrison avenue and Morgan street, as he approached Severs to search him. He said he warned Severs that he was a police officer.

Banker's Wife Cuts Throat.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Feb. 3.—After revealing the whereabouts of her husband, Eugene Braslawsky, missing president of the closed International State Bank, who was arrested in New Orleans, Mrs. Braslawsky cut her throat with a safety razor blade today. Her condition is said to be serious.

KRUEGER FILES FOR ALDERMAN

Elmer E. Walter, Defeated in Last Election, Also Will Be Candidate.

Chauncey J. Krueger, Republican, Alderman from the Twenty-fourth Ward, yesterday filed with the Election Board his declaration of candidacy for the Republican nomination to succeed himself, in the primary election March 9. Elmer E. Walter, an attorney, of 5217 Nottingham avenue, who opposed Krueger in the last primary election, also filed yesterday for the Republican nomination in the Twenty-fourth Ward. Krueger was elected last November to serve out the unexpired term of the late Charles A. Groeschel.

Ralph Eilers, Alderman from the Twenty-sixth Ward, who filed recently for the Republican nomination to succeed himself, is the only other aldermanic candidate who has filed thus far. Terms of 14 Aldermen and President Aloe expire April 3, the date of the aldermanic election. They are from the even numbered wards. Luke Hart, Twenty-eighth Ward, has announced he will not seek re-election.

LANGUAGE LAW UPHELD

Demurrer to Japanese School's Injunction in Hawaii Overruled, However.

By the Associated Press.

HONOLULU, Feb. 3.—United States District Judge J. J. Banks today overruled the demurrer filed by the territory to the injunction obtained by the Japanese language schools restraining the school department from enforcing the regulations providing for the elimination of foreign language from the first and second grades and the substitution of English. The Court modified the injunction, however, and held that the school law was constitutional and not a violation of the treaty between the United States and Japan.

FORD SHOALS OFFER INDORSED BY MADDEN

Chairman of House Committee Says He Studied Proposition From Business Angle.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
20 Wyatt Bldg.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.—Henry Ford's offer for Muscle Shoals today received the indorsement of Chairman Madden, Republican, Illinois, of the Appropriations Committee, one of the most influential of House leaders. A few days ago Bernard M. Baruch made known his approval of the offer in a letter submitted to the Committee on Agriculture by the American Farm Bureau Federation.

Heretofore Republican leaders have blocked consideration of the matter. Madden's course indicates favorable action in the lower branch of Congress before adjournment, although there is small change in the Senate this session. He reached his conclusion, he said, after a careful study of the proposition from a business angle, and after finding it would be cheaper for the Government to get out of the business of producing nitrates and horsepower than to stay in.

Madden revealed that the late James R. Mann had planned to develop the matter before the House, his brother, Frank I. Mann of Illinois, a farmer, having solicited his interest.

The appropriations chairman found that the total outlay by the Government in construction and maintenance of Muscle Shoals was $107,337,710 on June 30, 1922. Improvements to make it a going plant would require $84,000,000 additional, bringing the total cost to $191,000,000. The added amount would be necessary before the Government could function on an economical business basis, excluding any return whatever on the investment. Then there would be $25,000,000 for another dam.

"I seriously doubt," Madden said, "if under Government operation we could even include in the selling price of the fertilizer other usual items of overhead and keep the price at a figure which the farmers could afford to pay. What is the alternative? We can't stop. We owe it to the nation to see the thing through. The farmer needs nitrates and the very life of the nation may at some time hinge upon our ability to supply this necessary munitions ingredient to the army and navy. The answer is to go ahead at all hazards, or should I say in spite of all hazards, or to let private enterprises step in and do the job for us?"

Madden said Ford's offer "is not a bad proposition at all."

PANAMA WANTS ORIGINAL RIGHTS IN NEW TREATY

Will Insist on Continuance of Right to Supervise Foreign Commerce in Canal.

By the Associated Press.

WASINGTON, Feb. 3. — The State Department has been informed by the Panama Government that in forthcoming negotiations for a new treaty to supplant the Taft agreement covering zone canal relationship, the right of the Panama Government under the original treaty over foreign commerce in the canal zone will be reasserted.

The point has been made by the Panama authorities that assurances were given by President Roosevelt that the United States had no intention of making the zone an independent colony in the middle of the Republic of Panama. The representations of the State Department are understood to declare plainly that the Government of Panama would be unable to accept any new agreement which might bring about such a result.

SHIP BEACHED AFTER COLLISION

Craft in Crash Near Mouth of the Mississippi.

By the Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 3.—Beaching of the German steamship Arfeld, in the south pass, near the mouth of the Mississippi River last night, after a collision with the British tanker Lacuna, was reported today from Pilot Town. The Arfeld was inbound from a German port, while the tanker was bound to sea with 6560 tons of fuel oil for London. The vessels came together in a heavy fog, the Lacuna tearing a great hole in the side of the German ship.

A tug is standing by the Arfeld and the Lacuna will return to port for a survey.

ARMY INTELLIGENCE ACTIVITIES ATTACKED

Alabama Congressman Takes Exception to Action Taken in Northwest.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.—Activities of the Intelligence Department of the army were attacked in the House today by Representative Huddleston, Democrat, Alabama, who charged that if present methods were continued congressional committees soon would be under surveillance.

Huddleston read a newspaper article dealing with political and other conditions in the Northwest, which quoted a letter purporting to have been written to Sheriffs and other peace officers by Lieut. W. D. Long of Vancouver Barracks, Washington. The letter mentioned, among others, the American Federation of Labor, certain railroad unions, a world war veterans' organization and the I. W. W.

"This typifies the military mind," said Huddleston, adding that he supposed Congress would be next in the "beneficent protection of the War Department.

Representative Blanton, Democrat, Texas, replying to Huddleston, said if he were Secretary of War he "would not stop until this young Lieutenant had been made a Brigadier-General."

Conditions in the Northwest, Blanton said, had developed a situation where a man running for office ran either as a "radical" or a "conservative."

Lieut. Long, Blanton contended, should be commended for keeping his eyes open to anything which might threaten the American theory of Government.

Declaring the American Federation of Labor and the Big Four railroad brotherhoods contained some of the most patriotic men in the country, Representative Linberger asked if Blanton included them in his remarks. The Texas representative replied that Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, condemned the Harrison, Ark., lynching of a railroad worker, but had failed to ask for punishment of those who engaged in the killings at Herrin, Ill. He added, however, that it might have been an "inadvertent" act which caused the labor organization to be included in the list, and that he was concerned mostly with the activities of the I. W. W.

Representative London, Socialist, New York, joined in the debate by declaring that interference by the military authorities in civil affairs threatened the whole structure of the American form of government.

L. ERT SLACK, FEDERAL COAL STRIKE INVESTIGATOR, RESIGNS

Special Assistant Attorney-General Says Action Followed Letter From Daugherty.

By the Associated Press.

INDIANAPOLIS, Feb. 3.—Slack, appointed special assistant attorney general of the United States in charge of the Government's anti-conspiracy cases more than two years ago, admitted here today that he had resigned following receipt of a letter from Attorney-General Daugherty. He declined to discuss the letter further than to say it contained no information regarding disposition of the conspiracy case. He said any information regarding his resignation should come from Washington.

Slack conducted the Government's investigation during the coal strike of November 1919. Indictments were returned Feb. 25, 1920, against 225 bituminous coal operators and corporations and members of the United Mine Workers of America, charging violation of the Sherman Antitrust law.

Slack early last year was instructed by the Attorney-General to discontinue until further orders the pressing of removal proceedings instituted to bring some of the indicted persons into the jurisdiction of the Federal District Court. Since then he had been authorized to take no action in the cases. Homer Elliott, United States District Attorney, said he had received all the records from Slack, but would take no action without receiving instructions from the Attorney-General.

PLANS TO COMBAT FINAL PROPAGANDA ATTACKS OF ANTI-BOND FORCES MADE

Reports Current That Circulars Giving Arguments based on Unauthentic Figures Are to Be Circulated Before Election.

Plans to combat any misleading propaganda against the municipal bond issue have been made by the General Council on Civic Needs, which is conducting the campaign for the bonds, following reports that anti-bond circulars and posters are to be distributed in the closing days before the election Friday.

Arguments based on class and racial prejudice, and on unauthentic figures are being used against the bond issue in some quarters, the Bond Issue Campaign Committee says, in an effort to turn voters against the bond proposals. Figures on rents and taxations costs are being distorted, it is said.

To meet such attacks, the facts concerning taxation and rents under the bond issue, worked out by experts and formally approved by the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange, will be spread broadcast.

The Real Estate Exchange, in a formal statement indorsing the bond issue, pointed out there was no justification for increased rents if the bond issue passed. On the contrary, it was stated, if the bonds are not passed rents probably will be increased, as property will be burdened with higher taxes and special assessments to pay for necessary improvements that must be built at once, out of current revenue or by special tax bills—improvements that would be built under the bond issue with the cost distributed over a period of 20 years.

Efforts to Get Full Vote.

Efforts of the Bond Issue Campaign Committee are being centered on getting out a large vote Friday. Campaign leaders hold the belief that the success of the bond issue program depends upon the casting of a full vote.

"It is assumed that a certain number of adverse votes, pretty well known in advance, because they oppose all public improvements, will be cast," the committee stated. To offset each of these negative votes two affirmative votes must be cast.

Each of the 21 proposals in the $88,372,500 program will be voted upon separately and a two-thirds majority of the vote cast for an item is necessary to approve that item.

"Vote Yes 21 Times."

A slogan of "Vote Yes 21 Times" is being urged for voters favorable to any of the items. Different groups especially interested in a few of the items, have been urged to support the entire program, in order to obtain support of other groups for their own projects, W. Frank Carter, chairman of the general council, said yesterday.

Favorable replies are being received to the suggestion that business firms and other employers adopt late opening, or early closing hours on election day to give employes ample opportunity to vote.

The Union Electric Light & Power Co. arranged to allow its employes to vote, and sent each of them the following letter:

"As a loyal citizen of St. Louis, interested in the future growth and welfare of our city, you are urged to vote favorably upon the bond issue on Feb. 9.

"Your vote is needed for the future progress of our city. We were the fourth largest city in the United States; we are now the seventh. VOTE 'YES,' and give our city the things she needs to regain her position. See that the qualified members of your family, also your friends vote."

Mass Meeting Tomorrow.

A mass meeting for the bond issue will be held tomorrow night at Central High School, 1030 North Grand boulevard, under the auspices of the St. Louis Medical Society, co-operating with the St. Louis Tubercular Society, Missouri Welfare League and General Council on Civic Needs. The speakers will be Dr. William H. Vogt, W. Frank Carter, Health Commissioner Starkloff, Dr. John W. Day and Paul V. Bunn.

The 138th Infantry Post, American Legion, which has announced it is 100 per cent for the bond issue, distributed bulletins urging all their friends to vote for all the bond items, at a reunion dance given by the 138th Infantry last night at Moolah Temple.

Additional indorsements of the bond issue were received at the bond-issue headquarters yesterday from the Southampton Development League and the St. Louis Chapter, American Institute of Architects.

21 Bond Issue Meetings Set for Today and Tomorrow.

Twenty-one bond issue meetings are scheduled for today and tomorrow. The St. Louis Community Forum will meet at 8 p. m. today at Sheldon Memorial and the following meetings have been arranged for today under the auspices of the Missouri Negro Republican League: 11 a. m., Fairfax Baptist Church, 3900 Fairfax avenue; 7:30 p. m., Morning Star Church, Eleventh and Carr streets; 8:15 p. m., New Morning Star Church, Twenty-first and O'Fallon streets; 9 p. m., Bethel Mission Church, Fourteenth and Poplar streets; 9 p. m., Rising Sun Church, 1435 Morgan street; 9:15 p. m., Fifth Baptist Church, 4139 Papin street; 9:30 p. m., Galilee Baptist Church, 2820 Adams street; 9:45 p. m., Shiloh Baptist Church, 4239 Papin street.

Only Three Persons Appear for Anti-Bond Issue Meeting.

A mass meeting against the municipal bond issue, called for last night at the Barr Branch Public Library, Jefferson and Lafayette avenues, fell through as the "mass" was absent.

Three opponents of the bond issue and two reporters kept a vigil for some time, waiting for those who did not come, and then gave it up. The meeting was called under the auspices of the Mutual Assurance Association, which last week asked the Board of Election Commissioners for authority to place watchers at the polls in the election Friday, to keep watch on the balloting on the $88,372,500 bond issue program. The request was not granted, the Election Commissioners explaining such watchers were designated only by the chairmen of the city committees of the various political parties.

Cantata to Be Sung.

Maunder's Cantata, "Penitence, Pardon and Peace," will be sung by the choir of St. Peter's Episcopal Church, Lindell boulevard and Spring avenue, at its monthly song service at 4:30 this afternoon under the direction of Charles Galloway, organist.

For the blank space behind the davenport.
There are a dozen and one places you can use one of them to advantage.

We have determined that our Table stocks must be reduced—the space is needed badly. To move them in a hurry we have marked them ridiculously low. We advise making early selections tomorrow.

2 AUTO DRIVERS HELD AFTER WOMAN'S DEATH

Thomas Potter, Who Took Accident Victim to Hospital, Says She Was Struck by Truck.

Thomas Potter, 29 years old, of 4245A Evans avenue, an awning maker was arrested yesterday for the Coroner, and his niece, Miss Dollie Owen, 19, was held as a witness, as a result of further inquiry into the death Friday night of Miss Jennie Doyle, 70, of 3122 School street, who was fatally injured on Easton near Cardinal avenue Friday night by an automobile. Potter and his niece were released last night on $1000 bonds.

Potter used his Ford coupe to carry Miss Doyle to a physician's office, then to the city hospital, where it was found that Miss Doyle was dead. He related at the time that she had been struck by a truck, the driver of which accompanied him to the physician's office and the Baptist hospital, disappearing there.

Miss Owen made a signed statement to the police yesterday in which she said that her uncle exclaimed as they were driving on Easton at about the point where Miss Doyle lay: "Oh, Doll," and stopped the car quickly. When they alighted, she said, Miss Doyle was lying beneath the coupe. She added that she could not say that the coupe had struck Miss Doyle.

Denies Coupe Struck Woman.

Potter said last night that his coupe did not strike Miss Doyle. He said that as he approached the spot he observed through his rain-blurred windshield what seemed to be an obstruction or hole in the street. At a distance of about 15 feet, he said, he saw that it was a human form and stopped. When he alighted, he said, Miss Doyle was lying lengthwise, with her feet and her body about to the waist beneath his car. The wheels had not come in contact with the body, he said.

He said that a motor truck with chicken coops was standing at the curb and that the chauffeur had alighted and was approaching the spot where Miss Doyle lay. He reiterated his statement that the chauffeur of the truck departed after arrival at the Baptist Hospital. Miss Owen corroborated the trip of the truck driver to the hospital.

At the hospital, she said, the driver reminded Potter that he did not have anything to do with the accident except to help place the woman in Potter's machine.

Carl Layne of 3041 Easton avenue told the police that when he first saw Miss Doyle she was lying under Potter's machine.

Potter's machine was examined and police say the left front fender and the license plate were bent. Potter said they were bent when he bought the machine a few months ago.

Truck Driver Arrested.

Policeman Goodard of the Carr Street District, when he learned of the accident, remembered that Herman Mestman, 24, of 4947A Maple avenue, a driver for the Hoffman Commission Co., 1012 North Broadway, had told him Friday night about being delayed by an accident. He arrested Mestman, who admitted that he was the truck driver mentioned by Potter. He said he was driving east on Easton avenue, with a Ford coupe about half a block in front of him. He saw a woman crossing from the north to the south. The coupe stopped and when Mestman came up he saw there had been an accident and pulled into the curb and helped Potter get the woman from under his car and place her in it. He was released on bond.

SENATE APPROVES PERSONNEL PROVISIONS OF ARMY BILL

No Move Made to Reduce Force From Its Present Strength of 125,000 Men.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.—Many of the most important provisions of the annual army bill, including the provision for a personnel of 125,000 men and 12,000 officers were approved today by the Senate within a few hours after consideration of the measure was begun.

No move to reduce the personnel figures, which will keep the army at its present strength was made from any quarter. Committee amendments increasing appropriations for the army's recognized reserves and civilian training camp activities also were approved, but no action was taken on the Muscle Shoals and Rivers and Harbors sections.

The House provision withholding retired pay to Major General Harbord, former Deputy Chief of Staff, who has accepted a position with a radio concern, also went over until next week after Senator Glass, Democrat, Virginia, and Chairman Wadsworth of the Military Committee, had made speeches attacking it. Senator Wadsworth said that Gen. Harbord's radio company had just $60 worth of business with the Government last month.

"We are asked by this provision to distrust all retired army officers," added the New York Senator and deny them the right to pick up some modest employment to eke out their very small retired pay in middle and old age."

Drug Laws Futile With World Producing 1500 Tons of Opium and Needing Only 3½

UNITED STATES BY FAR THE HEAVIEST USER OF NARCOTICS

International Action, With a World-Wide Survey of Poppy Cultivation and Steps to Limit Production to the Actual Needs, Is the Only Solution of the Problem, Says Woman Secretary of Subcommittee of the Foreign Policy Association.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.

THE United States is the heaviest user of narcotic drugs in the world. Seventeen times as much "dope" is consumed per capita in this country as in China, conventionally regarded as the homeland of the opium fiend. According to an article by Dr. Alexander Lambert in the Journal of the American Medical Association, 12 to 72 times as much opium is consumed here per capita as in other white nations. "The amount consumed in the United States per annum is sufficient to furnish 36 doses for every man, woman and child," Dr. Lambert writes.

This is an appalling situation. What is the United States going to do about it?

Medical authorities state that three and one-half tons of opium a year would fill the needs of the entire world for all the medicinal preparations known as opium derivatives. It is estimated that 1500 tons of opium are produced every year. It is almost impossible to visualize this quantity. A grain of any of the white powders known as opium alkaloids constitutes a dose of "dope." A grain—and 1,500 tons! One ton would be more than sufficient to drug the entire population of the United States. And the yearly production of opium is about 1469 1-2 tons. Where does this amount go to? It goes to the perpetuation of the drug evil—to supply the opium smoker and chewer in the Far East—to provide the drug addict, and to produce new addicts, in the United States and elsewhere—but chiefly in the United States.

This country has the best antidrug laws in the world—the Harrison antinarcotic act, above all, which differs from some other well-known Federal statutes in that it is efficiently administered by a host of trained officials. It controls with almost stringency the importation of raw opium and the manufacture and sale of its derivatives for medicinal and scientific purposes. It prohibits altogether the importation of derivatives. But it cannot prevent smuggling.

The other day Judge Cornelius F. Collins of General Sessions Court said there were in the city of New York 50,000 drug addicts. The number of addicts in the nation is conservatively estimated at 1,000,000. And this number is steadily growing, for it is an established fact that each addict recruits several new victims. Only an infinitely small proportion of these 1,000,000 addicts are provided with "dope" by misuse of legitimate medical prescriptions. The overwhelming majority is supplied with "snow," as dope is called by insiders, by the illicit trade based on smuggling business, with yearly profits running into millions of dollars. The material damage it causes to the nation in various ways runs equally into millions. The moral damages wrought by it cannot be expressed in dollars and cents.

Spread of Drug Evil Unchecked.

Apparently national measures have failed to put a stop to the spread of the drug evil.

"International action is the only way to solve the opium problem," says Mrs. Helen Howell Moorhead, secretary of the subcommittee on narcotics of the Foreign Policy Association. "No nation can end the dope evil by individual measures. For the crux of the whole matter is that as long as there is an overproduction of raw opium amounting to nearly 1500 tons a year there will be an illicit trade in opium derivatives; for that trade, with all its risks, is one of the most profitable occupations in the world. The only way to eliminate the drug evil is to stamp it out at the source—to stop the growing of the poppy. And that can be done only by international action."

The subcommittee on narcotics of the Foreign Policy Association is one of several organizations engaged in the present nation-wide campaign against dope. The other day the Chicago League of Women Voters passed a resolution calling the attention of President Harding to the drug situation. In New York City a similar resolution, adopted by a conference of prominent women and social workers at the Hotel McAlpin, asked the President to set aside a national antidope week. The committee of which Mrs. Moorhead is secretary is trying to co-ordinate the efforts of the various bodies lined up against dope and plans to call, in the near future, a meeting of all the bodies interested.

At present there is an international organization whose working schedule includes the fight against dope. It is the League of Nations. The league has an opium committee on which all the member Governments are represented. There are three "assessors," or nongovernmental experts, one of whom is an American, Mrs. Hamilton Wright. And the other day Secretary of State Hughes appointed former Surgeon-General Dr. Rupert Blue to serve with the committee as unofficial observer. On this occasion, the Post-Dispatch correspondent asked Mrs. Moorhead to explain just what the League of Nations had to do with opium; what, on the whole, were the international implications of the opium situation.

"The initiative to curb the drug evil by international co-operation has come from the United States," Mrs. Moorhead said. "Our Government first became interested in the question after our occupation of the Philippines. In 1909 the first international opium conference took place at Shanghai. It was followed by another in 1912 at The Hague. Both were attended by representatives of all the countries concerned in the production, distribution and consumption of opium and its derivatives. Very useful measures were proposed, and some of them have been carried out since. But the business of these conferences remained unfinished. It was taken up by the treaty of Versailles. The League of Nations thus fell heir to the estate of the two international opium conferences.

"As a result of these conferences all the enlightened countries of the world have enacted laws prohibiting the importation into their territory of all derivatives of opium—chief among which are morphine and heroin. However, because of the tremendous profits involved there is a great amount of illicit trade—of smuggling. To control the situation it is necessary to tackle its problems at three points: At the center of production, the center of manufacture and at the point of consumption.

Produced in Four Countries.

"Raw opium is produced in four countries. The largest quantity is raised in India. Next comes China. The best grade is grown in Persia and Asia Minor. The most important centers of manufacturing opium derivatives are Germany, Japan, the United States, and, since the war, Switzerland. Smoking and chewing opium is practiced largely in India and China. The chief market of derivatives is the United States. France is concerned because of her colonies in Indo-China. Portugal is interested because her Chinese possession, Macao, is the very plague spot of the trade. All these countries are virtually involved in the opium problem.

"Now, the futility of expecting to suppress the drug evil by controlling the points of manufacture and consumption without controlling the centers which produce the raw opium has been amply demonstrated by the experiences of our own Government and that of China.

"Our own antinarcotic laws lay down the principle that the importation of opium derivatives is altogether prohibited, while the importation of raw opium is possible under certain conditions. If you are a drug manufacturer and want to import raw opium to be converted into drugs for legitimate medicinal use, you must report your requirements to the Government and render full account as to what the raw opium to be imported by you will be used for. At the end of the year you must render an itemized statement of your output and sales. Under no circumstances are you permitted to sell opium or its derivatives to anyone not a licensed dealer in this country, or to any dealer in another country that has no stringent antidrug laws.

"In view of these rules the illicit trade in the United States is supplied nearly exclusively by smuggling. Not opium, but the derivatives—the little white powders, morphine and heroin—are being smuggled into the country from Germany, Switzerland and Japan via Canada, the gulf ports, New York, Seattle and the Mexican border. Sometimes the powders are concealed in the folds of linen collars, in hatbands, linings, shoe heels, etc. But only small quantities are brought in this way. The wholesale smugglers have more ingenious methods. To mention just one instance: Not long ago a shipload of dried fish arrived at the port of New York from Barcelona, Spain. There was nothing suspicious about the cargo, and the ship was being unloaded when one of the stevadores fell on the slippery pavement of the quay and dropped a case of fish. The case burst open and revealed to the eyes of an astonished revenue agent who happened to be standing by, packages imbedded among the layers of dried fish. One of the packages was examined and found to contain heroin powder. The ship carried enough dope to drug the inhabitants of a whole city.

"Once the powders are safely in, the function of the retail distributer, the 'peddler,' begins. There are peddlers for all classes of addicts, and there is no fixed price for the drug. Rather, the peddler levies a tax on the earning capacity of his customer. If an addict earns $25 a week, the peddler will supply him with 'snow' for $20 a week, allowing him only enough to keep a roof over his head and thus out of the policeman's way. Drug addicts require very little food, and the peddler sees to it that they get less. If the addict has a wife and children to support, that is none of the peddler's business; he takes the addict's income just the same. And so upward on the social ladder. The highest type peddled is the disreputable doctor who establishes himself in sumptuous offices and supplies 'legitimate' prescriptions for drugs to wealthy addicts.

Big Profit Is the Incentive.

"As long as there is big money in smuggling and peddling opium derivatives there will be people willing to take a chance. Students of the dope situation in this country and of the opium situation in the Far East agree in the conclusion that the only really effective way of ending the traffic is to limit the growing of the raw material—the cultivation of the poppy—to the amount covering the medicinal and scientific needs of the world. And it is at this point that the problem assumes its gravest aspect and becomes a serious international complication. For by far the largest amount of opium is produced under the auspices of the Imperial Government of India, one-fifth of whose revenue is yielded by the opium monopoly.

"When, about 1860, the British Government took over the administration of the East India Company it inherited with the rest of the estate the opium monopoly. This originated when the company assumed control of territories formerly ruled by the native Princes. The tax on opium grown by the peasants formed an important item of the income of these Princes. The company, which was a purely commercial concern, developed this revenue by advancing methods of production and by stimulating consumption in the principal opium market, China.

"The British Government continued the opium policy of the company. Today the British Government subsidizes poppy planting in India. It provides the growers with loans that bear no interest; with a good grade of seeds; with labor if necessary. It assists in irrigating poppy lands and instructs the cultivators in methods of producing the greatest amount and best quality of raw opium from the poppy. The raw opium is collected by Government agents and taken to Government depots. It is then weighed and put up in sealed wrappers. A certain proportion of the crop is reserved every year in Government warehouses to prevent cornering the supply. The rest is divided into two classes: 'provision' opium for consumption in India, and 'excise' opium for export abroad. This excise opium is sold in the open market at Calcutta, Bombay and other places.

"Now what is the use of having elaborate laws to control the importation, manufacture and sale of opium and its derivatives if the smugglers or their agents may purchase any amount of the stuff in the open market from the warehouses of the Imperial Indian Government? The Indian Government sells opium to anyone without asking questions. All the machinery in the United States and elsewhere to check up 'legitimate' sale and prevent the illicit trade is merely a palliative as long as there is no control at the producing end.

"The story of opium in China contains a lesson for the rest of the world. Contrary to popular belief, opium smoking is not indigenous to China. It was introduced there by the Dutch traders from Java. It was a money-making proposition from the outset. The Chinese Government never favored the traffic, and in several instances attempted to stamp it out. But the Indian opium monopoly was stronger than the Chinese Government.

"In 1912, under the provision of The Hague agreement, the Chinese Government undertook to

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.

IT cannot be denied that for Great Britain to surrender the opium monopoly would involve an unparalleled fiscal sacrifice. Yet one of the proud boasts of England, one that has always been borne out by her history is that however entrenched a privilege, however deeply connected with the interests of her ruling class any abuse may be, there have always arisen from among that very class leaders to wage a ruthless fight against the evil, wherefrom their group profited.

"The international campaign against opium is to be waged under the auspices of the League of Nations Opium Committee. Its program provides first of all for a world wide survey of poppy cultivation. Then the exact amount of opium required to fill the scientific, medicinal needs of the world must be ascertained. Several contested points will have to be cleared up—thus, the question of whether there is such a thing as a 'legitimate' use of smoking and chewing opium; then, the use of raw opium as a preventive of malaria. Then the committee will endeavor to have heroin declared an illegal drug. It is the most dangerous—the most generally preferred of all forms of dope—it is asserted that 96 per cent of all the drug cases handled by the New York police involve heroin. In the opinion of the majority of medical men heroin is utterly unnecessary—its employment was a mistake from the outset and it should be removed from the pharmacopeia.

"Under and above these technical problems the principal task in the struggle against the drug evil is to awaken public conscience and line up all the civilized nations of the world against one of the most terrible and insidious of the evils preying upon human progress."

Lloyd George Discusses Funding of British Debt

"If We Had Defied Foreign Creditors Instead of Paying Them, We Might Have Fostered an Artificial Prosperity by Means of Discredited Currency. But British Credit Would Have Disappeared Beyond Recovery, and British Trade Would Soon Have Followed."

War-Time Premier of Great Britain.

BY WIRELESS ON BOARD SHIP, OFF THE COAST OF SPAIN, Feb. 3.

AS I roll homeward along the coast of Spain, a wireless message announces the British Government has accepted the American debt terms.

It is clear the British Government have made a genuine effort to arrive at an arrangement in their decision to take all necessary steps to repay the debt.

The Government represent the real sentiment of the nation as a whole. The British taxpayer is no doubt fully alive to the fact that this heavy debt incurred by him during the war was in the main in order to finance American supplies to our allies. We could have paid for all the supplies we required for our own use without resort to any loan from the American Government. Nevertheless, the money was advanced by the lender on our credit and our signature.

Our credit as a nation, therefore, demands that we should pay. Whether we can collect enough money from our own debtors to meet this charge becomes increasingly doubtful as it is becoming more increasingly needful.

Britain is alone in thinking she is under any moral obligation to pay external liabilities incurred for the effective prosecution of the war. The attitude of the late and present Government is identical in this respect.

Why Britain Stands Alone.

Why have the British public taken a different view of their national obligations towards external war debts from that adopted by other allies? In giving the answer I do not wish to dwell on the obvious ethical considerations which you must weigh whenever you consider whether you will carry out an engagement which you have entered into with another who has already performed his part of the engagement on the strength of your promise.

These ought to be conclusive, but to urge them might be deemed an unworthy reflection on the honor of those who take a different view of their national duty.

I have no desire to offer censure or criticism upon their decision. They no doubt have their reasons for the course they are adopting. We have certainly overwhelming reasons for the policy which the British Government are now pursuing.

The settling up of accounts is always an unpleasant business, especially amongst friends. Strangers expect it and prepare for it—and there is no resentment when the bill arrives. But a man hates reminding his friend at the end of business in which both have been engaged in warm amity that there is "a little balance" to be paid up.

He has been expecting his friend to mention the matter to him, so he puts off introducing the unpleasant topic from year to year. But the friend disappoints his expectations. Not a hint comes from that quarter of any realization that there is anything due. It soon looks as if it had been forgotten altogether.

The friend is most insistent on collecting business accounts due to himself. He is angry at all delays in the payment of his own bills, but his conscience is blind on the side of the debts he himself owes.

It is not an uncommon experience, and we are suffering from it today. The war left us a creditor nation to the extent of over 2,000,000,000,000 pounds, and a debtor nation to the extent of about half that amount. We readily accepted an invitation from our creditor to discuss repayment of the debt we owe. Our debtors displayed an invincible reluctance to enter a similar discussion with us.

That ought not to influence our action. Britain is the greatest of all international traders, and her credit rests on the reputation she well earned—that her bond is a sacred trust which her people always honor and redeem without counting the cost in toil and treasure.

Signature Made Paper Good.

I remember when war broke out the panic which seized bankers and brokers as they contemplated the obligations incurred by British firms, with their support, to finance world trade. These liabilities ran into a hundred millions sterling and the only security for repayment was represented by a bundle of flimsy paper crisscrossed with the signatures of men, most of whom no British banker had ever seen, many of them dwelling in countries with whom we were actually at war.

There was one signature, however, on each paper which was known to the bankers and carried with it the good name of Britain throughout the world, and it was that of some well-known British firm.

Traders in far distant lands parted with their produce on the credit of that signature and of the country with which it was associated.

It is true that the Government had no responsibility for any of these transactions, but the honor of Britain was involved in seeing that foreign merchants should not suffer ruin because they put their trust in British commercial integrity. For that reason the British Government of the day shouldered the burden and took all the risk, and although it meant a liability between 405,000,000,000 sterling not a voice was raised in protest.

The action then taken, though quite unprecedented, was not only honorable. It was wise. It saved British pride from reproach—it also saved British credit from a blow from which it would not recover for a generation. During that generation this lucrative business would have passed into other hands.

As soon as the war was over the people of Britain, with an instinctive impulse that required no persuasion to stimulate its activity, set about the task of restoring war-battered credit.

The Government, bankers, merchants, brokers, manufacturers and workers of all kinds were of one mind. Borrowing must come to an end. Britain must pay her way—whatever the sacrifices.

Expenditure was ruthlessly cut down. The army and navy were reduced below pre-war dimensions. Other services were curtailed. Heavy taxation was imposed—taxation such as no other country bears. The budget at home must balance. Debts to other countries must be paid off.

Already large sums have been paid abroad. It required courage and constancy to pursue such a policy, but the endurance of the nation was beyond praise. It is now calmly facing liquidation of this heavy debt to the United States. But no party has yet arisen, or is likely to arise, to demand that the hand of the negotiators should be arrested. Britain means to pay the last of her debts without murmur.

We are already reaping some of the reward. The purchasing value of our currency already has risen under its burdens and as a consequence the cost of living has fallen steadily while other countries who pursued a different policy find the cost of living for their people ascending month by month.

Chose to Protect Credit.

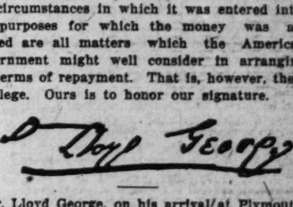
A short time ago we were taunted in the French Chamber of Deputies by the president of the Council that our unsound financial policy had been responsible for our unemployment. It is true that if we had gone on borrowing instead of paying our way—if we had defied our foreign creditors instead of paying them—we also, like many other European countries, might have fostered an artificial prosperity by means of discredited currency.

But British credit would have rapidly disappeared beyond recovery and British trade would soon have followed. Meanwhile the cost of living in Great Britain would have been double what it is today.

We therefore dismissed that policy from our minds without paying it the tribute of discussion. Trust is the only soil in which credit flourishes. Had that trust been forfeited British buyers, and consequently British consumers, would today have been paying more for their wheat, their meat, their cotton and their wool.

The burden of repayment to the United States will be infinitely less than that of the indirect burden involved in large purchases with a discredited currency.

The Government is therefore right in arranging with the American Treasury without loss of time for the liquidation of a debt incurred by this country. Why it was incurred, the circumstances in which it was entered into, the purposes for which the money was advanced are all matters which the American Government might well consider in arranging the terms of repayment. That is, however, their privilege. Ours is to honor our signature.



Mr. Lloyd George, on his arrival at Plymouth, England, yesterday, made a statement regarding the terms for funding the debt. His statement, as told in yesterday's editions of the Post-Dispatch, was as follows:

"The terms seem very stiff to me, especially when the money was borrowed for our allies."

After reflecting a moment he continued, with a smile:

"Well, it is a good thing the matter is settled.

"I have not yet given up hope of the allied debts owing to England and their funding. This can be done if the allies meet their responsibilities, and I am loath to believe that they are less honest or incapable of paying the debts they owe to England. After all, England suffered as much, if not more, than any other country."

Lloyd George, in response to a question as to the outlook for British trade, said:

"Our prospects are not good. For a year past there has been a slight and gradual improvement which is likely to continue, but it will be a long time before normal conditions are restored. It is possible the Government will be able to do something to help, but we cannot trust the Government to restore trade lost through war."

Total Cash Advances of U. S. Made to Britain Amount to $4,277,000,000

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
20 Wyatt Bldg.
WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.

THE total cash advances of the United States Government to Great Britain for war purposes were $4,277,000,000.

Great Britain has repaid on the principal $141,181,641.56.

On the obligations of Great Britain held by the United States the Treasury regards $122,017,633.57 as having been given for purposes of silver under the Pittman act. Remaining unpaid under this head is $61,000,000 which is already covered by a funding arrangement providing for the payment of one-half next spring and one-half in the spring of 1924.

The amount of principal involved in the present funding negotiations is the remainder after deduction of $141,181,641.56 and $61,000,000 from the total of the cash advances. This remainder is $4,074,818,358.44.

Including interest on the Pittman silver, Great Britain has paid in interest to date $351,657,185.50.

Interest accrued and unpaid as of April 15 and May 15, 1922, amounts to $611,044,201.85 on the present 5 per cent basis. If figured at 4¼ per cent, it would amount to approximately $528,600,000.

Under the American interest and amortization proposals, it is estimated that the debt would be extinguished in 62 years. The new interest rate on the funded principal debt would be fixed at 3 per cent for the first 10 years and 3½ per cent thereafter.

All the Government loans to Great Britain were made after the entrance of the United States into the war. The Treasury records contain the following estimates of British war loans previously floated in the United States by J. P. Morgan & Co.:

$500,000,000, of which one-half was for Great Britain; maturity Oct. 15, 1920.
$250,000,000 maturing Sept. 1, 1918.
$150,000,000 maturing Nov. 1, 1919.
$129,046,000 maturing Nov. 1, 1921.
$150,000,000 maturing Feb. 1, 1919.
$143,587,000 maturing Feb. 1, 1937.

Issued in exchange for maturing obligations, $100,000,000, maturing Feb. 1, 1918.

The total of these Morgan loans to Great Britain, according to the Treasury estimates, is approximately $1,000,000,000.

In addition, the Morgan house handled a post-war loan for Great Britain amounting to $250,000,000, dated Nov. 1, 1919, and maturing Nov. 1, 1922, and Aug. 1, 1919.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Shupp, the Lawmaker.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

EXPRESSING his reaction to the theft of records and papers from the office of the Missouri Anti-Saloon League, Dr. Shupp says: "I think I'll go to Jefferson City and give them a little more drastic laws than I had counted on, in answer." These are not the lines of some comedy, staged to amuse a "free" people who proclaim themselves the masters of their affairs, but are the serious words of a man swollen to arrogance through the fact that there are men in the State's lawmaking body who are at his beck and call.

The American people have arrived upon the day when they are ordered by their masters as no ruler of a monarchy has dared address his subjects, during the past hundred years. It is possible that there is even one member of the Legislature who will not resent this man's boasted authority in the forming of State laws?

Between the words of Shupp and the words of Skipwith, exalted cyclops of the K. K. K., Mer Rouge, La., there is no difference. Both impose upon a community their personal prejudices and standards of conduct. The threats of Skipwith are matched by the threats of Shupp. The former is modest enough to rule a rural community, the latter aspires to dominate a great commonwealth. The people of Louisiana hope to escape the menace through government; Shupp declares that he will make government the instrument through which his ends will be effected.

Free Government! The shame of it at such a time! Let this be said in passing; men who seek to destroy the happiness and rights of a people, often also seek safety in flight; and those who goad a people to desperation may, through their infamy, loosen a force that will grind them to pieces. J. S. A.

Tell It to Mer Rouge.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

J. L. JR. seems not to understand the meaning of the words, civil and religious. Also, he misconstrues the word, liberty; still, he seems to know that the three combined are the essence of American freedom. Not, to the knowledge of J. L., has the klan ever interfered with any religious or civil liberties of Americans. Does that liberty entitle us to riotous and lawless living? With that only, the klan seems to deal, and if the laws of each community were enforced, I daresay there would be no such organization. It may be true that efforts to proscribe certain ones, on account of both race and religion, have been in progress; but if so, they were a drawback, if not a menace, to law-abiding citizens. A nuisance becomes an infringement on liberty and freedom, regardless of whether civil or religious. Any active individual, group or society, regardless of their opinions or their method, would be openly denounced, if it were possible for J. L. and his class of citizens to pry behind the screen of secrecy and gaze upon the stealth and mystery, in which they themselves could never hope to take part.

Pistol Carrying.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THE legislative session just opened offers our State solons an opportunity which should not be neglected. I refer to the necessity of repealing or amending the "concealed weapons" law now on the statutes and which has fallen so far short of accomplishing its purpose. About 20 years have elapsed since its enactment, and in respect to enforcement it has proved a "dead letter." If a single "pistol toter" is now in the penitentiary for violation of that law, the writer is not aware of it. Plainly speaking, the present law is a grim joke; it places the law-observing citizen at the mercy of the criminal element and affords protection to the latter, instead of placing them in jeopardy. Knowing that their intended victim, through his compliance with the law, is unarmed, they incur no danger in robbing him. In this way the present statute defeats the very purpose for which it was framed. Its impracticability and its unpopularity are evidenced by the difficulty in securing convictions; an overwhelming majority of the public realize its injustice and its ineffectiveness.

Occasionally one of the "hold-up" gentry tackles the wrong man, finds him armed and is worsted in the encounter. This discloses the fact that the man attacked was armed, and, per se, a lawbreaker. But under such circumstances the law is never invoked against him. Could any stronger evidence be adduced as indicating popular sentiment on this subject?

A common-sense course would be to allow any person of proven good character and reputation to carry a weapon under permit issued by the proper authorities. His fitness for this privilege could easily be ascertained by a rigid questionnaire, indorsed by reputable citizens. No reasonable person can doubt that the number of thefts, highway robberies and murders would be greatly reduced by such a law as that here suggested. If the bandits knew, beyond a reasonable doubt, that their intended victim was prepared for them, and that their depredations carried a deadly risk to themselves, there would be an immediate falling off in that class of crime.

A FATUOUS CRY OF PORK.

The cry of "pork" has been raised against the House appropriation of $56,590,000 for river and harbor improvements. An effort to get the Senate to reduce it will be supported by Director Lord of the Budget Bureau, influential members of the House and the President himself.

A formidable force, therefore, is arrayed against the appropriation. Recognizing this fact the river bloc has appealed to the Mississippi Valley Association to arouse the business and agricultural interests of the Mississippi Valley to urge the Senate to stand by the House bill.

In behalf of the House appropriation it is explained that the sum asked for was not determined by the guesswork, or avarice, or log-rolling of politicians. The amount was fixed by United States army engineers as necessary for the protection of waterway development already started and projects contemplated.

Those army engineers have nothing to do with "pork." Their judgment as to river requirements is that of experts. Against such judgment the mere impression of the budget director, who, admittedly, is not familiar with the subject, should not prevail, nor should the chagrin of congressional leaders who, having fought the bill in the House and lost, are not good enough losers to accept defeat.

Of course, the plea of economy can be invoked for a reduction of this appropriation and the argument can be made that if a budget bureau is to be efficient its recommendations must be followed. All that is plausible, but superficial. The truth is that an inadequate appropriation, instead of being an economy, would be the grossest sort of extravagance. If improvements already started are to be impaired or destroyed for lack of means to complete them, the money already invested will obviously be lost. So with projects contemplated and necessary for the carrying out of a constructive program of river development. If those must be abandoned the maximum utility of our rivers is postponed and an incalculable loss imposed upon the shipping and consuming public.

Moreover, the sum of $56,000,000 for such a purpose cannot be accounted extravagant for wealthy America, in view of what the impoverished or debt-ridden nations of Europe are undertaking. Germany, for example, has voted two billion gold marks for a vast canalization scheme to unite the Rhine and the Danube and thus attract the trade from New York to the mouth of the Elbe at Hamburg. In answer to the German program England is agitating the construction of a waterway to link up the Forth and the Clyde, the cost of which is estimated at 50,000,000 pounds.

Can England spend pounds to our dollars and Germany spend dollars to our dimes on waterway development?

Representative Upshaw of Georgia, a dry, is on the trail of the House bootlegger. Has he stopped to consider that, with the bootlegger influence removed, the House might go wet?

NO DEFENSE FOR THE KLAN.

When the business of enforcing the law is taken over by private individuals or unofficial bodies, the result is plain anarchy. Failure to recognize this axiomatic principle is responsible for such statements as that appearing in the letter signed "C. S. O.," and printed on this page today. Defending the Ku Klux Klan against the charge of interference with religious and civil liberty, the writer asks: "Does that liberty entitle us to riotous and lawless living?" and adds: "With that, only, the klan seems to deal, and if the laws of each community were enforced, I dare say there would be no such organization."

No good citizen defends lawlessness; all good citizens want the laws enforced. But they must be enforced by legally constituted authority, in a legally prescribed manner, and when the proper officials fail to enforce them the cure consists in turning out those officials, by way of impeachment or election, and installing others who will. When such organizations as the klan assume the function of enforcing the laws, they themselves are guilty of a form of lawlessness far worse than that which they essay to suppress, because they violate the very foundation principle of government by law.

In addition to that, experience has shown that the usurpation of authority by private organizations, particularly when the membership is secret, invariably leads to ghastly injustices. Not only are innocent persons punished—the inevitable result of disregarding the proper processes for establishing guilt—but from behind the screen of secrecy personal vendettas are carried on and private vengeances glutted. How any thoughtful person can fail to recognize these facts, especially in view of recent history, is almost inconceivable.

THE NEW TURK.

An important fact which is dawning on the Western mind is that the modern Turk is a person quite distinct from the indolent and cruel sybarite who played villain on the stage of world politics for so many centuries. We are beginning to realize that the nationalist movement led by Kemal is not a mere patriotic rally against foreign enemies. The really significant thing is that the military force that defied the treaty of Sevres and defeated the Greeks was the political force that deposed the Sultan and established a democratic form of government.

Kemal undoubtedly is the soul of this movement. It is impossible not to admire the purity of this man's love for his country, a purity that revolted, not only against foreign aggression, but quite as fiercely against the corruption and incapacity of the court at Constantinople. His military genius has been demonstrated. If his capacity for internal reconstruction proves equally great, he may truly be said to have achieved his ambition to become the George Washington of Turkey.

Turkey's past crimes have been the crimes of the court rather than of the people. As Americans, looking at France, saw the bohemianism of Paris and failed to discern the thrifty, industrious and moral farmers who compose the real France, so all the Occident, gazing eastward, saw the vice, fanaticism, graft and intrigue in Constantinople, and knew nothing of the hospitable, hardy peasants of Anatolia. But the Anatolian peasant is behind the Government at Angora, and it was he who beat the Greek.

A new culture and a new nationalism are in prospect for Turkey. It could never be an Occidental culture: it would always be colored by the Oriental love of beauty—Kemal in private life is an epicure and a connoisseur of the arts. Such a culture would have an elevated place in civilization. Western greed is the chief obstacle to its development.

BARBARITY IN ARKANSAS.

Few chapters from the Dark Ages will furnish a more grewsome scene than that enacted in the Arkansas penitentiary Friday, when the twitching body of a man was taken from his coffin, propped up in the electric chair and electrocuted a second time. Capital punishment, which, under our present penal system is simply an act of reprisal, is barbarous enough when it is carried out smoothly. If society must insist on the grim law of an eye for an eye, it should at least manage to kill its victims without bungling the job.

France is now considering long occupation of the Ruhr as a means of national security. Mars, it seems never tires of an old joke.

AN HISTORIC CHURCH DECISION.

Bishop William T. Manning, in his letter to Dr. Percy Stickney Grant, is invincible in the position that the real issue raised by Dr. Grant is "whether you believe that Jesus Christ is Lord and God, for if you do not so believe, it is plain that you cannot with self-respect or with freedom to express your real conviction continue to hold your place as a minister of a church whose whole life and teaching is founded on this belief."

The conclusion of Bishop Manning, however, is surprising and sets a precedent of historic significance. The fundamental doctrine of the church has been challenged by one of its ministers and not recanted when the opportunity to do so and to avoid a heresy trial was offered. Therefore, the position of Grant remains where it was established by the utterance which brought the episcopal rebuke. The Bishop, instead of putting into motion the machinery of the church that must have resulted in Grant's discharge, appealed the issue to Grant's personal honor.

This marks a considerable recession of church dogmatism. It was the apparent purpose of the Bishop to avoid a heresy trial which might have become an instrument in the hands of the critics of the church. But in avoiding the issue has not the church let down the bars to further attacks upon its creed from within?

Dr. Frederick Cook has been arrested for having liquor in his possession. Most people thought he used it all up when he told that good one about the North Pole.

PANETELA.

YES, Luella,
Tutankhamen
Slept a long way Underground;
Thirty centuries
Concealed him.
Ere his hiding
Place was found.
What though science
Knew about him
And the riches
Of his day,
Science still Has always wondered Where they put
The king away.

Thus it stood,
My little girlie,
Until just
A bit ago:
All the Pharaohs
Of Egypt
Stand in London
In a row.
Everyone
From the beginning.
Each according To his rank,
Saving only
And because of Wealth conspicuously Tank.

Then it was
The learned people
Hit upon
A nimble scheme:
Why leave Tank
And all his treasure
Thus inviolate
To dream?
Why not send
And get a Yankee,
Who, though just
A little cold
As to scientific ardor,
Still would know
The scent of gold?

So it was,
My sweet Luella,
On a day
Beside the Nile,
Walked they down
The royal valley
In what's known
As single file.
First the Yankee,
Softly sniffing
That which might
The breeze anoint.
And the others
At a distance
Watching closely
For the point.

Thus they came To Tutankhamen
When the Yankee Cocked his ear
And with merely Pointing downward
Shouted confidently
"Here!"
Something, true,
That any Yankee
Could have done,
But all the same
Winning from Begrudging betters
For us quite
A little fame.

The wild animals of Africa as they seem to one seeking their lives are one thing, and to one going to them as friends they are quite another. After reading the books of some of the great hunters, let us turn to that written by Mrs. Herbert E. Bradley of Chicago, who with her husband and little daughter recently went into the African wilderness with Carl Akely. Mrs. Bradley thus describes three gorillas which the party suddenly came upon in a meadow: "One of them was the very gentleman we had come so far to interview. 'Now,' I said, 'we shall know.' The big male looked around straight up at us, rising as he did so. It was an uncannily human face that he turned up at us, but there was none of Du Chaillu's demon horror about it. I got an impression of a wary interest that did not intend to tolerate any intrusion, but there was not a flash of menace." She says the gorilla is the only animal in Africa which never has a flea or a tick, though even lions abound with these parasites. It has soft hair, is clean and free from disease, and eats only vegetables and fruits. It sleeps on a bed, and not in a tree. Altogether another impression of the gorilla than we have had—one strengthening us in our feeling that the gorilla ought to have the sanctuary proposed for him by Mr. Akely and given another chance.

The central fact of Hinduism, however, is cow protection. Cow protection is to me one of the most wonderful phenomena in human evolution. It takes the human being beyond his species. The cow to me means the entire subhuman world. Man, through the cow, is enjoined to realize his identity with all that lives. Why the cow was selected for apotheosis is obvious to me. The cow was in India the best companion. She was the giver of plenty. Not only did she give milk, but she also made agriculture possible. The cow is a poem of pity. One reads pity in the gentle animal. She is the mother of millions of Indian mankind. Protection of the cow means protection of the whole dumb creation of God. The ancient seer, whosoever he is, began with the cow. The appeal of the lower order of creation is all the more forcible because it is speechless. Cow protection is the gift of Hinduism to the world. And Hinduism will live as long as there are Hindus to protect the cow.

The way to protect is to die for her. It is a denial of Hinduism to kill a human being to protect a cow. Hindus are enjoined to protect the cow by self-purification, by self-sacrifice. The present-day cow protection has degenerated into a perpetual feud with the Mussulmans, whereas cow protection means conquering the Mussulman by our love.—Mahatma Gandhi.

"THE MOVIES."

WELL, Dad, there's a good show tonight!"
I hear my boy say now and then;
No matter if the day's been tight
In trying to make end meet end.

"I know there is, my boy," I say,
"And I should certainly like to go,
But my few pennies jingle 'nay'
Though I have worked hard 'mid the woe."

And then I see his head hang low,
And sometimes his lips pucker up
And when he speaks a quiver slow
I think I notice as we sup.

And then I think and think and think
And scrape and scrape and scrape and scrape;
And soon I see a little twink
For well he knows he will escape.

Off to the movies with the boys.
I hear their merry chatter down
Upon the street—the joyous noise—
And I'm the richest man in town.

AMERICAN LIBERTY.

From the Chicago Tribune.

LAWS which invade the private right of action in matters of private conscience and conduct are a step to the whip and stake of the rider. They are the preliminary of the system of popular self-government, for the negation of the spirit of self-government American democracy must realize that the system of government of law and not of men to survive, the proper limits of public law and individual liberty must be understood and respected. American liberty today is the laughing stock of the world because it is rapidly disappearing. It is disappearing because American laws made under special pressures are confusing and hampering upon the proper limits of public order in defiance of our fundamental principles of liberty are invading the domain of private conduct. This breeds and ought to breed a profound and unconquerable revolt, for it is a new tyranny, the less endurable for appearing in the guise of self-government which it abuses and betrays. It also passes far beyond the region of formal law and expresses itself in the private tyranny of moralistic vigilantes, which has no bounds but the limits of its own irresponsible force. The spirit and mentality which produces these evils—the disposition to compel by force the conduct and conscience of others, to order their thoughts, their sentiment, their private habit, their personal amusement—is the gravest evil which has arisen in the experience of our democracy and is today demoralizing our social character and shaking our institutions to their foundation. It is our greatest peril and if we have light for understanding we shall attack it as our chief and highest duty. If it persists, it will destroy the American we cherish.

SMALL CITY HOTELS.

From the Louisville Courier-Journal.

ONE of the western counties, its leading paper says, will have completed by the end of 1923 some of the best roads in Kentucky. The result will be increased business. "What," asks the newspaper, "should we do with the added opportunity good roads will create?" The answer in part as follows: "We should have a campaign to promote courtesy to all who come this way. * * * Princeton should not allow anyone to leave the city and leave without a desire to return. * * * His going away dissatisfied will be against his sending another here." Largely will depend greatly upon the quality of their hotels' popularity. The hotels are not municipal enterprises. They are, if good, assets of the community. If they are inadequate in size or in equipment and if the fare they offer is not up to reasonable requirements, the city suffers severely in reputation. The village tavern which was like a private home accommodating wayfarers has, in the county capitals, given place to a hotel in which there is no visible effort to live up to commercial standards of kitchen management and housekeeping supervision. The result is that travelers who, in "drumming" for mercantile establishments or touring for pleasure, are little attracted to the old-town hotels. Small towns and cities cannot compete with large cities in the size and the luxurious splendor of their hotels. There should be comfort in that direction. Better a modest hotel, decently equipped, and a table the guest will remember and compliment, than a pretentious hotel built at ruinous cost, operated at a loss to the stockholders whose investment reflects civic pride, poor business judgment, and giving the guest nothing to enjoy or recall but indifferent imitations of city hotels.

"MORALITY BY STATUTE" CAUSING LAWLESSNESS, SAYS NICHOLAS MURRAY BUTLER

Asserts Contempt for Law Is Fruit of Measures Like Eighteenth Amendment by Which Government Interferes With Private Conduct.

A unparalleled reign of lawlessness in the United States, a widespread contempt for constituted authority, and political conditions which would make Thomas Jefferson rise in his grave if he could know them are some of the fruits of Government interference with the personal life and private conduct of American citizens through such measures as the Eighteenth Amendment, according to the belief of Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, persident of Columbia University, who recently defined his sentiments in an address on "The Widening Tide of Lawlessness" before the Ohio State Bar Association at Columbus.

Crime in Dr. Butler's picture of America's future if that future is to depend for its morality upon the enforcement of statutes, if the conduct of its citizenship must be guided by the Prussian "Verboten" sign instead of constructive education. On every side, he declares, there is resistance to law, and the most disquieting form of it is that which arises from intelligent and highminded persons on grounds of morals and fundamental principles of some provision of the law.

"It is a sorry outcome," he asserts, for our century and a half of existence as an independent nation promising to the world the best possible method of providing for liberty under law that we should now be obliged to as the law-breaking nation par excellence of the world."

Entering his attack upon the theory that public morals can be improved by statute, he points to the futility of attempts being made to enforce measures which fundamentally constitute tyrannical infringements upon private rights of individuals and declares that the common sense will take care of our development in far better fashion than will statutes in all except a small minority of cases. The influence of a good education and a true religion, he asserts, if really believed in, instead of being merely talked about, would in time build up a spirit of obedience to the law which no possible system of law enforcement could bring about.

Even Prussia Outdone.

"Through centuries a habit of obedience to the Ten Commandments may be built up," he asserts, "but the Ten Commandments cannot be enforced by all the governments and armies in Christendom."

The maze of restrictions placed upon human conduct are assailed as constituting a bureaucracy in the United States which is quite as bad as that of Prussia ever was, without being so efficient.

"It was not so many years ago," he continues, "that Americans used to laugh at Prussia's bureaucracy and point with scorn to the Verboten signs that were to be seen on every side in Prussia. Now we have a dozen Verboten signs in America to every one that Prussia can show. Not a few of the printed forms addressed to citizens by various bureaus of the national and state governments are rude and peremptory to the point of insolence and are justly resented by the self-respecting citizen. The multiplication of petty crimes has gone on until the list includes scores of innocent departures from the conventional and scores of perfectly harmless infractions of good manners and good conduct. No longer do the legislators stop with defining those acts as misdemeanors, but infrequently they are elevated to the rank of felonies. Is it any wonder, then, that an intelligent and self-respecting public revolts at that sort of official treatment?"

Dr. Butler places the blame for such conditions chiefly upon the type of politicians who constitute to a marked degree the law-making bodies of the country.

"Constant Appeal to Force."

"Our Legislatures, both state and national," he says, "and our various administrative boards and bureaus are largely made up of those whom Thomas Jefferson wittily described as demi-lawyers. Their ruling passion is a statute or an administrative order. Their constant appeal is to force, to what has come to be known as the police power of the state, and they exercise it with a ruthlessness and a ferocity from which kings and emperors have ben accustomed to draw back.

"Shortly before retiring from public life, former Senator Thomas of Colorado, himself a learned lawyer of high type, made a speech in the course of which he pointed out that within a relatively short period of time we Americans had some 70,000 statutes, state and national, passed for our guidance and government. To state this fact is to name a powerful force making for the spread of lawlessness. I well know that it is the opinion of lawyers that whatever enactments are duly made by a Legislature and upheld by a competent court are part of the law. But that is an illusion. They are only part of the law if general public opinion supports and upholds them. There is a silent referendum in the hearts and minds of men on every important enactment by a Legislature and every important decision by a court which involves a fundamental principle of civil liberty. Without a possible issue in that referendum, the statute and the decision alike are written in water. It must not be forgotten that law is but one form or mode of social control."

Blames Two Amendments.

Of the two measures which have been done most likely to make for lawlessness in the United States and which seems most likely to encourage it in the future, Dr. Butler lays certain emphasis upon the fifteenth amendment, proclaimed in force and the eighteenth amendment adopted in 1919. Although the American people as a whole cannot escape responsibility for these two influences, they are in part due, he says, to what Walt Whitman described as the "never ending audacity of elected persons."

"In form and fact, and judged by all the usual tests and standards, these two amendments," he declares, "are part of the organic law of the United States, with all the rights and authority which attach thereto. Nevertheless they are not obeyed by large numbers of highly intelligent and morally sensitive people and there is no likelihood that they can ever be enforced, no matter at what expenditure of money or effort, or at what cost of infringement or neglect of other equally valid provisions of the same Constitution. The purpose of those who advocated and secured the adoption of these two amendments was excellent, but they did not stop to deal with the realities of politics and of public morals.

Outgrowth of Passion.

"When the thirteenth amendment, abolished slavery, and when the fourteenth amendment provided for the reduction of the representation in Congress from any state which bridged the right of any citizen to vote, except for participation in rebellion or other crime, the matter might well have rested there. All that was needed was the courage and the public opinion to enforce the fourteenth amendment, and speedily the several states would have made provision for their own protection by which the intelligent colored man would have been permitted to vote. Gen. Robert E. Lee himself testified in this spirit before the Reconstruction Committee of the Congress. The Civil War had just ended, however, and passion ran high. Therefore, the fifteenth amendment was proposed and ratified, and the right of suffrage was given a national basis and protected by a national guaranty.

"What has been the result?

"After a half century the colored man votes in those states where he voted when the fifteenth amendment was passed, but he rarely votes, and certainly does not freely participate in public life, in those states where he did not vote then. Every attempt to enforce the fourteenth or fifteenth amendment has been denounced as a force bill. Oddly enough, it has been so denounced by those very Senators and Representatives who will go to any length to enforce the provisions of the eighteenth amendment.

Results Known to All.

"The practical question is not whether or not the colored man should vote in the Southern States, but whether the American people will frankly face the problem presented by the nullification throughout a large part of the land of a most important provision of the Constitution of the United States. Every one knows what political results follow from the failure to enforce the provisions of the fourteenth amendment and from the skilful measures which have been enacted to escape its provisions without actually violating it. All this is a matter of history. No one in his senses wishes to overturn white government in the Southern States; but everyone with the American spirit in his heart wishes fair play and a fair chance for the colored man and the removal of any continuing cause of lawlessness which has its foundation in the organic law itself.

"It is elementary that an individual or a community may not defy law in one respect without developing a habit of disregard for all law. If the American people stand idly by and see the fifteenth amendment unenforced and unenforceable because it runs counter to the intelligence and moral sense of large elements of the population, must they not either remove the offending cause from the law or leave off bewailing the lawlessness to which its presence naturally leads?

The Eighteenth Amendment.

The situation with regard to the eighteenth amendment is even worse, Dr. Butler declares, because the revolt is not confined to men and women of intelligence and moral sensitiveness in one section alone, but is nation-wide. It will not do, he believes, to attempt to silence these persons by abuse or by catch phrases, for they dissent entirely from the grounds upon which the case for the eighteenth amendment was rested and they regard its provisions and those of the statutes based upon it as "a forcible, an immoral and a tyrannical invasion of their private life and personal conduct.

"They have no possible interest in the liquor traffic," he continues, "and they are without exception opposed to the saloon. But they are equally opposed to making the Constitution of the United States the vehicle of a police regulation affecting the entire country, and dealing not alone with matters of public interest and public reference, but with the most intimate details of personal and private life, including food, drink and medical treatment. The moral sense, as well as the common sense, of very many people is affronted by a policy which will expend millions of dollars and use the methods of Czarist Russia and of the Spanish Inquisition to enforce one provision of law, while others of far greater significance and public importance are accorded conventional treatment or less.

"It will startle many excellent people to hear the following sentences from the recent book of Outspoken Essays: Second Series, written by the dean of St. Paul's Cathedral, London. The author, Dr. Inge, is one of the most learned and most eminent of English churchmen. Suppose, says Dean Inge, that the state has exceeded its rights by prohibiting some harmless act, such as the consumption of alcohol. Is smuggling, in such a case, morally justifiable? I should say yes; the interference of the state in such matters is a mere impertinence.

Statement by Grand Jury.

"Or if one crosses the Atlantic, he may find with increasing frequency expresions like these unanimously adopted by a recent grand jury in Kings County, New York, whose limits are identical with those of the community which has long been known as the City of Churches. Referring to the existing laws for the enforcement of the eighteenth amendment, this grand jury expressed itself as follows:

"'Whatever may be our individual ideas upon the subject of temperance and prohibition, we believe that there can be no doubt but that this law tends to debauch and corrupt the police force. It interferes with the liberty and private life of moral, law-abiding citizens. It even goes so far as to brand good men felons, because in their own conscience they desire to indulge in personal habits in which they find no harm. It has not checked the misuse of intoxicating liquors, but it has seriously hampered their proper use. We feel that it can never be enforced, because it lays down rules of private conduct which are contrary to the intelligence and general morality of the community. It is an attempt by a body of our citizenship, thinking one way, to interfere with the private conduct of another body, thinking another way.'

"These are not expressions of a spirit of lawlessness. They are a simple declaration of the fact that lawlessness is certain to follow from some types of law. The answer which is made is instant and resounding. We are told that the eighteenth amendment was adopted in accordance with the provisions of the Constitution itself, and that its validity as an amendment has been affirmed by the United States Supreme Court. We are told then that all that those who disagree with its principles and purposes have to do is to accept defeat, to recognize themselves as in the minority, and to obey the law. Perhaps this ought to be the case, but it is not, and I greatly doubt if it ever will be, at least within the lifetime of any man now living. The majority is not always right, nor is its verdict final. The Old Testament records a leading case in which 450 prophets of Baal were wcrated single-handed by the prophet Elijah, who had God and right on his side. Four hundred and fifty to one is a very unusual majority, but it was not enough.

Not Optimistic as to Remedy.

As for remedying in the near future the unfortunate conditions thus brought about by these two amendments, Dr. Butler is far from optimistic. No one familiar with the workings of our political system, he says, would expect either the fifteenth or the eighteenth amendment to be repealed within measurable time, and, so far as one can see, we are confined to the alternative of their attempted enforcement by soldiers and police and detectives and special agents and spies, or to their abrogation over a great part of the land by local initiative and common consent. Either alternative, he declares, is humiliating and degrading.

"If our people have taken untenable and harmful positions in respect of securing suffrage for the colored man, and in respect of promoting the cause of temperance and total abstinence and in removing the abuse and the nuisance of the public bar," he says, "they should be willing to retrace those steps and start toward their wise and splendid goals by other and more practicable paths. I know of no one who dares to hope for any such fortunate outcome of the unhappy conditions that now confront us.

"There can be no more distressing and no more disintegrating form of lawlessness than that which arises from the resistance of intelligent and high-minded people, on grounds of morals and fundamental principle, to some particular provision of law."

Dr. Butler concludes as follows:

"The American people must learn to think of these things, and to give up that unwillingness which seems so characteristic, to discuss or to deal with the disputed and the disagreeable.

"We have almost got to a point where public men, and those who should be leaders of opinion hesitate to speak until they know what others are likely to say, and how what they say will probably be received by the press and the public.

"There are not so many as there should be who are willing to take the risk of being unpopular for the sake of being right."

restrict cultivation of the poppy till it had completely ceased. The Indian Government agreed to limit the importation of opium into China in proportion with the decrease in Chinese production. For several years the Chinese Government lived up to its pledge. By 1917 the poppy fields had practically disappeared from the Chinese landscape. All the while the importation of Indian opium into China dropped precipitately. But the Japanese Government enforces antiopium rules as rigidly as any European nation. The Indian opium, instead of flowing directly into China, was imported to Japan, and thence resold to China. This proves clearly that as long as there is opium in excess of the scientific, medicinal need, there will be opium traffic, too. You cannot 'regulate' opium. You must stamp it out—or face the consequences.

"Nevertheless, owing to the efforts of the Chinese Government, opium smoking as a mass vice, if it has not completely disappeared, has at least been materially reduced in China. It has, in fact, become a rich man's dissipation. But white civilization does not make it any too easy for the Chinese to rid themselves of the dope evil. White and Japanese traders have introduced morphine and heroin to supplant the opium pipe.

"A superficial observer might suggest that the drugs have found their way into China because the unfulfilled craving for opium must needs find a substitute. That's sheer nonsense. No heroin is manufactured in China and the Chinese coolie cannot go over to the United States to learn the delights of the hypodermic needle; but the European, American or Japanese peddler can, and does, go to China. Opium derivatives have been introduced into China as a cool business proposition, just as opium was originally introduced.

"Today the coolie in a Chinese town may go to a hole in a wall in a dark alley, deposit his pennies and thrust his arm into the hole. When he withdraws it he has received an injection. He never even sees the peddler. This is only an advance over our American methods. We have not yet brought down the traffic to a slot machine efficiency basis.

"No, the proper front to attack the world-wide drug evil is to attack it at the source—the British opium monopoly in India. The Indian Government tries to vindicate its course by asserting that subsidizing poppy cultivators is the only method to check up the extent of land used in growing opium. It is also argued that even if opium-growing were stopped in India it would still go on in Persia and Turkey, where no regulation whatsoever is enforced. Further, it is stated that a large number of the Indian population makes its livelihood by raising opium and has been trained in it for four or five generations. Forcing these millions of peasants to abandon poppy-growing over night would be equivalent to their starvation, and the Government would have to provide food for them in a period of transition out of a public revenue diminished by one-fifth. In brief, the defenders of the opium monopoly maintain that its abandonment would cause fiscal collapse and social revolution in India. Finally, the claim is made that for the East Indian a moderate amount of chewing opium is a legitimate need, no more harmful than the Westerner's tobacco.

"It is possible to admit that these arguments carry a certain validity and still maintain that the opium monopoly is a disgrace on civilization and its abolition a duty that the British Government owes to mankind.

"That abolition can be brought about only by the pressure of enlightened world opinion upon the British Government, and still more by the awakening of British conscience itself."

DEVICE TO PREVENT COLLISIONS.

St. Louis Inventor Also Patents Automatic Crossing Gates.

Joseph Kiss, a mechanical engineer and inventor of 1806 Kennett place, has patented an invention for automatic gates at railroad crossings; and one for automatic stops which, he claims, will prevent head-on and rear-end collisions of trains.

The gates are equipped with danger lights and bells and are closed by the train's approach, while the stops are made by arms, magnetically moved, which throttle the steam valve of the locomotive. Kiss invented these appliances after two brothers had been killed in a railroad wreck a few years ago.

RIGHT TO SELL REALTY SOUGHT BY SON OF MRS. RICHARD KERENS

Other Heirs of Mother's Estate Named as Defendants in Suit.

Suit for authority to sell two parcels of real estate belonging to the estate of Mrs. Richard C. Kerens, wife of the former United States Ambassador to Austria-Hungary, is pending in Circuit Judge Landwehr's court. It was filed by Vincent Kerens, a son, who named as defendants the other heirs, including his brother, Richard, and sisters, Mrs. Madeline McKenna and Mrs. Gladys Colket.

One of the pieces of realty is the former home of the Kerens family at 36 Vandeventer place, which has not been occupied except by a caretaker since the death of Mrs. Kerens more than seven years ago. The house consists of 32 rooms and in its present condition is an expense to the estate. When built it cost approximately $100,000, John S. Leahy, attorney for the plaintiff, said. Title to the home was in the name of Mrs. Kerens, who died before her husband.

The other parcel is a lot on Enright avenue, near the family residence, on which stands a stable formerly used by the Kerens family. Because of a claim by the Bizzell Real Estate Co. to a one-thirty-sixth interest in the Enright lot, it was necessary to make that company a co-defendant in the suit. This claim is based on a Spanish land grant title running back to 1770 and which was held by August Conde. The company obtained title through Mrs. Lydia M. Bizzell of New Boston, Tex., a direct heir of Conde, who died in 1776.

John A. Gilliam, attorney for the Bizzell company, said yesterday he had offered to give the Kerens estate a quitclaim deed for $100, but the offer was not accepted.

CARNIVAL FOR MEMORIAL FOUTAINS TO OPEN FEB. 12

Queen of Youth to Be Selected Tomorrow—Baby Show One of Features.

A carnival of youth will be given Feb. 12 to 17 at the Coliseum by the Children of American Loyalty League and the Daughters of American Colonists, to erect two memorial fountains in commemoration of the work of St. Louis women in the world war.

The Auditing Committee, M. L. Wilkinson, Festus J. Wade, J. A. Baer, David May, Louis B. Woodward, Louis P. Aloe, John G. Lonsdale, Jackson Johnson and J. B. Taussig, stipulated that should there be any surplus it will be given to some St. Louis charity.

The fountain of the Loyalty League children will be put on Government Hill in Forest Park. It will cost about $15,000. The other fountain will be smaller and less costly. The intention is to erect it in the proposed Memorial Plaza.

The Queen of Youth, to reign over the carvinal, will be crowned the opening night. A contest has been in progress. Forty-two girls have entered. The jury of award will meet tomorrow to make a choice.

There will be a baby show. Prizes will be given for the healthiest, the prettiest, the largest and the smallest child and the best pair of twin babies. Entries may be made all this week at carnival headquarters on the ninth floor of the Victoria Building.

EGG LAID AT ROCKBRIDGE, ILL., SAID TO BE WORLD'S LARGEST

Circumference of 8.87 Inches Lengthwise and 6.87 Crosswise—Weight Is 4¾ Ounces.

An egg on exhibition in a store at Rockbridge, Ill., is said by residents of the town to be the largest hen's egg ever produced. They base their contention on a photograph and measurements of a California egg published in the current issue of Popular Mechanics. The California egg is said by the magazine to have been the largest ever laid.

Fred F. Fewter, principal of Rockbridge High School, who measured the Rockbridge egg, using an ordinary tapeline, declares its measurements are approximately as follows. Lengthwise circumference, 8.87 inches; crosswise circumference, 6.87 inches; lengthwise diameter, 2.82 inches; crosswise diameter, 2.18 inches. Its weight is given as 4¾ ounces.

The measurements of the California egg, as published in the magazine, were: Lengthwise circumference, 7.87 inches; crosswise circumference, 6.75 inches; lengthwise diameter, 2.81 inches; crosswise diameter, 2.15 inches; weight, 4¼ ounces.

The Rockbridge egg was laid Jan. 21 by a single comb rhode island red hen owned by Mrs. N. I. Dawson of Rockbridge. The hen will be two years old in April, and heretofore had laid only ordinary-sized eggs.

DEMURRER IN ACCIDENT CASE

Board of Education Lays Claim to Exemption in Damake Suit.

A demurrer of the Board of Education to the $25,000 damage suit of Miss Gertrude Krueger, 6120 West Park avenue, growing out of injury to her right hand, which was caught in an electric food chopper, April 25 last, in the lunchroom of the Grover Cleveland High School, where she was employed, was taken under advisement yesterday by Circuit Judge Hall. The demurrer is based on the theory that the Board of Education is exempt in a suit for damages, Robert Burkham, attorney for the board, arguing that the courts have so held.

Miss Krueger's lawyer, Charles A. Lich, asserted that the rule did not apply in her case because it was not a function of the board to conduct lunchrooms in public schools. Burkham replied that meals were served to teachers and pupils at cost and no profit accrued; furthermore, there was a statutory provision for such service.

STANDARD OF THE WORLD

Announcing

A National Standard of Costs for Cadillac Service Parts

Effective February 1st, 1923, service parts for Cadillac cars will be sold throughout the United States at a uniform rate, without war tax, freight or handling charges.

This means that Cadillac service parts can be purchased in Maine or California, or anywhere in the country, for identically the same amount.

As no advance is made in the catalog prices of parts, the removal of tax and shipping charges represents a clear reduction, and a material saving to Cadillac owners.

The creation of this national standard of costs for service parts marks still another step in this Company's avowed policy of giving to its clientele maximum value in every phase of fine car ownership.

APPROVAL OF BOND ISSUE TO SOLVE MANY PROBLEMS FAVORED BY GRAND JURY

Members of Panel Say They Found Conditions at City Institutions That Can Be Remedied Only by Increased Facilities.

Approval of the municipal bond issue as a means of solving serious problems of the city, and providing facilities for development was urged by the grand jury in its report for the December term, submitted yesterday.

Inspections of the various institutions convinced the jurors that excellent work is being done with the facilities available, the report stated, but a great deal more could be accomplished with additional and more modern facilities, needed for many years.

"The survey of conditions now prevailing in the city of St. Louis presents a serious problem," it was stated, "and it is our earnest conviction that the way to solve this is for the citizens to approve the proposed bond issue."

The 21 bond-issue proposals for public improvements, a total of $88,-115,000 will be voted on Friday.

Visited City Institutions.

Members of the grand jury visited all of the city hospitals and institutions and inspected public works.

"The present city sewers are totally inadequate," the report states. "Many of the sewers are old and some of them are obsolete and must be repaired, replaced and enlarged." Proposition six of the bond issue would provide $5,000,000 for reconstruction and extension of sewers.

Condition of the present waterworks at Chain of Rocks was commended in the report, but it was pointed out that the capacity of this plant would be reached soon and the growth of the city would demand an increased output. "It is evident," it was stated, "that provision must be made for additional water supply."

Proposition 21 would provide $12,-000,000 for a new plant on the Missouri River, the bonds to be retired from Water Department revenues, and not by taxation.

View of Koch Hospital.

Referring to Robert Koch Hospital, for tubercular patients, the jurors reported, "We feel especially good work is being done at this institution, but it is our opinion that adequate facilities have not been provided, thus limiting the field of endeavor."

An item of $500,000 is included in proposition 12 for extension and equipment of Koch Hospital.

A deplorable condition of overcrowding at the city sanitarium was stressed by the jurors. Proposition 12 includes $760,000 for extension of this institution. "In this building 2770 patients were being housed," the jurors stated, "although we were informed it originally was designed to accommodate 1700. The process of doubling up has continued until the maximum has been reached. Immediate relief should be provided for these unfortunates.

"Conditions prevailing at the city hospital are similar to those at the city sanitariums. In a great many instances this results in patients being required to leave the institution before their condition really warrants it." This was necessary, it was said, to make room for new patients. Proposition 12 would provide $1,-000,000 for extension and equipment of the city hospital.

Scott Farm Commended.

The jurors commended the effort being made at the St. Louis training school for the Feeble Minded (Scott Farm) to restore patients to health and train them in useful occupations. The farm is being developed into an excellent truck farm, the report stated, furnishing a food supply for the patients there and at other city institutions.

In developing this project, it was pointed out, the feeble minded patients will have the benefit of outdoor work and fresh air, while being trained for return to useful pursuits. Proposition 12 would provide $500,000 for extension and equipment of the training school.

MODEL HEALTH UNIT FOR ST. LOUIS COUNTY PLANNED

Welfare Associations Indorse Program Calling for the Expenditure of About $15,000.

To establish in St. Louis County the model health unit of Missouri is the plan which yesterday was indorsed by the St. Louis County Health Committee of the Tuberculosis Society of St. Louis, composed of representatives from the St. Louis County Welfare Association, Kirkwood Welfare Association, Webster Groves Chapter Red Cross, Wellston Health Center (St. Louis Chapter Red Cross) Visiting Nurse Association and Tuberculosis Society of St. Louis.

The new County Judges are cooperating and already have appropriated $10,000 with which to carry out the plan. The Tuberculosis Society is pledged to spend every dollar it raises in the county in public health work in that territory, and for the last several years has been doing this.

Dr. Thomas Parran of the United States Public Health Service and the Rockefeller Foundation has been investigating the health conditions of the country. Dr. George H. Jones, for eight years Secretary of the State Board of Health and for the last three years in charge of the health work of the Southwestern Division of the American Red Cross, also has been making a survey. According to Dr. Parran, $15,000 should be the minimum amount for an efficient department.

Seizure of Ruhr by the French Threatens Period of Barbarism In Europe, Maximilian Harden Says

German Publicist Says French Do Not Realize How Much Hatred Their Course in Using Force Is Inspiring.

BY MAXIMILIAN HARDEN,
The Noted German Publicist.
Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright, 1923.)

BERLIN, Feb. 3.—The "giant coke war" still is raging, but the League of Nations seems still unwilling to regard the situation as a "threat of war" which, according to Article 11 of the Covenant enables the assembly or the council to exercise a friendly right and give warning to the disputants.

Equally there are no signs of the growth of a French party ashamed of the clumsy militarist's policy, brutal arrests and scandalous expulsions and ready to protest against the abuse of power which shames the victory ostensibly gained to produce "just and honorable relations between nations.

Paris supports as an urgent necessity the Ruhr invasion. It argued that the German Government allowed some German mine owners to withhold payment of taxes. But at first the sum was placed at only nineteen billion paper marks. Then it was said to be thirty or more.

Object Was to Prevent Crisis.

The facts are that the first figures were right and seventeen billion have already been paid. The object was not to keep from paying reparations, but to aid in tiding over a crisis in the coal industry.

If France could compel payment of even two billion gold marks to apply on reparations she would rob the coal mines of their working capital. This would be no more advantageous to Germany's creditors than would be the destruction of her merchant marine by taking the money designed to construct ships to take the place of those surrendered to the allies.

The boom on the German Stock Exchange is no proof that Germany is richer than she says she is. The so-called boom is merely an effort to adjust values in the face of the steadily falling mark. When the dollar equals 50,000 marks, a pound of coffee costs 18,000 as compared with a prewar quotation of at the most four marks. Therefore a share which nominally has risen 50,000 per cent at Bourse prices really has not advanced to exceed ninetyfold and is available to anyone who possesses three 26-mark gold coins.

Flurry Result of Fear.

The hunt for stable securities is the result of fear by the man who has saved paper marks that he will be dragged into Germany's bankruptcy and with his family will starve, owing to the unparalleled rise in prices. This fear causes people to exchange state securities and paper money for pound shares and not, as suspicious creditors believe, to an insane desire to share in the fabulous profits of German industry.

Only one of the French arguments is valid. France needs money to gild the pill of a 20 per cent increase in taxation for the sorely tried peasant, renter, the middle classes and the like to prevent them being driven into the dangerously radical political camp at the next election. At the same time she needs coke to keep the Lorraine blast furnaces going.

France believes the only means to secure both is through the application of force. The Ruhr so far as Belgium is concerned is a subsidiary matter and a means for diverting attention from the old language struggle between the Flemish and Walloon schools which has blazed up afresh over the University of Ghent. At the same time it affords a means to give France definite proof on the part of the Belgian Government that they have escaped from British tutelage and are determiend to save what is possible from the promises made in the treaty of Versailles.

The French are forgetting their traditional generosity which hitherto has been their pride. They also do not realize how much hatred their course is inspiring by the imposinf force of arms on a previously disarmed people, especially in a zone from which even German troops were excluded by Article 42 of the treaty, and by expelling families from their homes in a time of the most severe house shortage because the head of the house refuses to obey an obviously illegal military order.

The result only can be fresh encouragement to the monarchist agitation and drive the discouraged Socialists into the arms of the German Fascists. France controls the Saar area, the greater part of Upper Silesia, has the overhand in Poland and now prohibits the importation of coal or coke into Germany.

This will bring further unemployment to the utterly impoverished masses. Does the conscience of France as a civilized nation not tremble before this result? The Paris Government says it has been compelled to adopt measures of extreme harshness owing to the obstinate resistance of the "Westphalia Iron Heads," and also is determined to attain its get goal at any price even if a march on Berlin has to be ordered.

Woe be to him who was responsible for unloosening this "coke war." It threatens to throw Europe back into that period of barbarism when the creditor believed himself entitled to enslave his defaulting debtor and utilize his corpse as an asset.

Five Trucks of Grain for Germany.

Five truck loads of grain, consisting of 17,200 pounds of wheat and corn in sacks, was brought to St. Louis last week by farmer members of the Eden Evangelical Church at Edwardsville, for shipment to Germany, to relieve want. In addition to the grain $138.75 was donated by the congregation to pay the freight to New York and the ocean transportation to Hamburg. The church previously sent $1900 to Germany for relief of the destitute.

KING TO ENLARGE BUILDING

Emmanuel Donates 1,000,000 Lire to Agricultural Institute.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, Feb. 3.—King Victor Emmanuel has set aside 1,000,000 lire from his private purse for enlargement of the building of the International Institute of Agriculture, which was constructed in 1906 at his expense.

The idea of the institute originated with the late David Lubin of California, but the King was the founder and promoter.

Voluntary Letters Prove That Americans Possess the Great Virtue—GRATITUDE

Mayor Writes

Three-Page Letter of Praise —Read This Brief Extract.

Mr. Andrew Lastine, five times Mayor of Marne, Iowa: "I have been troubled with coughing spells for fifteen years. I tried nearly every known medicine without any relief. Then about three years ago I bought Mentho-Laxene. The first dose gave me relief. I now am able to rest and sleep, and always have a supply on hand."

New Jersey Folks

Beatrice M. Coulson, 275 Bergen st., Newark, N. J.—"My father had suffered with a bad bronchial cough—Mentho-Laxene is relieving him wonderfully."

Maine Father Writes

"My wife, my 14-months-old baby and myself all had severe colds with bad coughs, too. We took about a bottle and our colds and coughs were well. It is the best I have ever had." E. H. Mulligan, 197 Lincoln st., Bath, Maine.

California Woman Writes

"For one year and three months I coughed and nothing would relieve me. I tried doctor's prescriptions, and medicines—at least $50.00 worth—in vain. I began then to use Mentho-Laxene, and just as truly as I am living, in two weeks' time my cough was absolutely cured." Mrs. Maud Neelon, 104 Harrison av., Venice, Calif.

Tried All Kinds—No Good

TEXAS MAN WRITES—"I was suffering with a cough for several months. I tried all kinds of syrups and cough medicines, but they did me no good. A friend told me of Mentho-Laxene—which gave great relief." A. L. Zeinaga, 627 Delgado st., San Antonio, Texas.

You, too, must know of this cough and cold medicine that millions of people have found to be quicker and better than the old style ones, in breaking up any annoying, dangerous cold and cough!

It is so inexpensive too! Why, one bottle saves any family about $3.00—and the very first dose usually brings wonderful surprising relief, although it does not contain chloroform or opiates.

It is so refreshingly pure that its soothing, healing, laxative tonic action just drives the worst colds and coughs right out—the sneezing, snuffling, clogged nostrils, and the tickling, strangling, smothering cough is conquered, and blessed restful sleep can be enjoyed.

Ordinary head, throat and chest colds are subdued, often in 24 hours or less! Old chronic cases of from two to 20 years standing—chronic bronchitis—seem to yield in a few day to this most successful of all cough medicines—Mentho-Laxene. There is none like it—none so good—none so quick—none so inexpensive!

REWARD: The Blackburn Products Company, Dayton, Ohio, hereby offer a Reward of $1000 if every letter published is not the genuine unsolicited expression of the users of their medicine, given without pay of any kind.

Sleep Impossible

WISCONSIN—"My husband had influenza and pneumonia, which left him with a stubborn cough—worse at night—sleep became impossible—doctored and tried many so-called cough remedies to no avail. He has taken Mentho-Laxene three weeks and is entirely relieved. I can surely say it is the supreme cough medicine in quantity and quality." Mrs. Monroe Zwoster, R. No. 4, Box 160, West Allis, Wis.

Child—Like Dead!

OHIO—"My little girl, two years old, had a bad case of bronchial trouble—doctor's medicine seemed to do no good—the child was just like a dead baby. I hurried and got a bottle of Mentho-Laxene—gave her one dose only until she got up and did not have to worry about her any longer." Mrs. Daisy La Bella, 773 Summer st., Akron, O.

Coughed All Winter

MISSOURI—"My husband always had a bronchial cough all winter, but since taking Mentho-Laxene, he is never troubled any more." Mrs. E. Snedmeyer, 4307 N. 20th st., St. Louis, Mo.

Doctors Failed to Help

INDIANA—"The doctors said I had bronchitis. I doctored with three doctors and they didn't seem to help me much, so I tried your Mentho-Laxene and it has helped me more than anything I have ever used." Iana Stanley, 237 E. Minnesota st., Indianapolis, Ind.

Cough Took Vitality

TEXAS—"Have been troubled with a bad cough and asthma for over forty years—had to cough so much it had taken all my vitality—but since taking Mentho-Laxene cough medicine I am gaining strength and feel so much better. I have taken one bottle and my cough is very much relieved." Mary E. Walker, 912 Virginia av., Graham, Tex.

Helped Boy—Whole Family

PENNSYLVANIA—"My boy had pneumonia, which left him with a stubborn cough all summer—we were awake so many nights with him. Mentho-Laxene not only helped my boy, but all of us, when we have a cold." Mrs. Geo. Derringer, 18 Sherman st., Millvale, Pa.

A thoughtful nurse writes:

Almost magical results are secured in acute and stubborn Coughs and Colds.

"The very first dose tends to stop the sneezing and snuffling, check the 'tickle' or spasm that causes severe coughing, loosen the catarrhal phlegm, and stop the 'running' secretions of nostrils and eyes."

Broke Cold First Day!

NEBRASKA.—"Would cough so hard and continually would get no rest at night — Mentho-Laxene broke my cold first day. It worked such wonders in my case that eight or ten people have tried it, etc." Muriel M. Goodrich, 2705 S. 24th st., Omaha, Nebraska.

Quickly Astonished

WISCONSIN. — "Had suffered with a very bad cough for about three months and could not get rid of it—with numerous cough medicines—a friend advised Mentho-Laxene and I was quickly astonished to find my cough gone after doctoring so long in vain." Theresa Meyer, R. R. No. 1, Box 67, Fredonia, Wis.

A PLEA FOR THE POOR FISH

In an "argument" opposing the proposed bond issue, published yesterday in the Argus, a negro newspaper, Charles Turpin, a negro Conservationist, said:

"Why imprison a lot of fish in an aquarium in Forest Park for $400,000? Propagate them in our lakes, and distribute them in our ponds and rivers and let us catch 'em and eat 'em.

MASS MEETING IN COUNTY TODAY ON REGISTRATION OF VOTERS

Fee System for Paying Some County Officers Also May Be Discussed.

A mass meeting for citizens of St. Louis County and representatives of county organizations, to consider efforts to get a law for registration of voters in the county, will be held at 2:30 p. m. today in the courthouse at Clayton.

J. Porter Henry, chairman of the Executive Committee of the Clean Election League, said that an effort had been made by certain interests to make the State Legislature think county residents did not want registration. He said the meeting was called to correct that impression.

Among other subjects likely to be discussed is the fee system of paying some county officers. An effort to abolish this is being made in the Legislature.

JEWETT SIX

Built to Dominate the $1,000 Class

20,000 Cars Sold in First Seven Months!

IN volume of sales, as in demonstrated performance, the Paige-built Jewett has passed the predicted impossible—in seven short months! Today no car in its class enjoys an equal degree of public approval. Yet, a year ago no Jewett existed! What is the secret of this startling success, achieved in one of the world's most competitive industries?

Simply this: That Jewett, named after H. M. Jewett, president of the Paige Company, is a car of finer, abler performance and with a sturdier, stouter chassis, than was ever before obtainable around a thousand dollars.

A Joy to Men!

Jewett is a car that does outrank and out-perform any other car in its class. Let your test be what it will: snappy acceleration, powerful braking, happy disregard of traffic tangles, strenuous hill-pulling, smooth clutch-work, or cold-weather starting. In all points, Jewett is a joy to drive. It is the best-tempered car you ever introduced to the rough-and-tumble of long-distance touring.

To appreciate this fifty-horsepower leader in the thousand-dollar field, sit at the Jewett wheel. Accelerate from 5 to 25 miles per hour in seven seconds. Shift from high to second at 30 miles per hour. Prove Jewett's everyday high-gear range of 2 to 60 miles per hour.

Realize for the first time what a free-and-easy clutch means. Learn the pleasure of finger-touch gear-shifting with a bare 3-inch movement. Gauge the sturdy six-inch Jewett frame with its four cross-members and in-built corner-braces by what you know of chassis layout in other cars!

For Jewett gives you strength wedded to power. Its motor delivers full fifty horsepower—more than any car within $200 of its price. More power for weight than any car its size gives the sturdy Jewett its masterful performance.

A high-pressure lubrication system forces 3 gallons of oil per minute through all main and connecting rod bearings at 20 to 40 pounds pressure. The universal joints have oil-tight, sealed-in lubrication good for 15,000 miles.

A Delight to Women!

The new Jewett non-spin clutch, with its six springs instead of one, engages smoothly and releases under the gentlest foot-pressure. It makes the gears almost seem to anticipate the hand that shifts them. Ball bearings in the steering spindles give touch guidance, and this combines with flexibility of clutch and control to make Jewett a car the frailest woman can handle with assurance.

Remember, too, the rugged Paige-Timken axles; the ninety inches of spring suspension under the car; the absolute beauty of line and color; the typical Jewett completeness of appointment. Refinements that reflect this fact, of special importance to critical buyers: Jewett is throughout a car of Paige standards, built by Paige engineers!

Jewett's present record-breaking sales will outstrip themselves in 1923. Already phenomenal in its country-wide popularity, the Jewett, on merit alone, will speedily be foremost in its field.

Full 50-Horsepower Motor
Cylinders 3¾x5 inches give more power than any car within $200 of its price. Wonderful acceleration, due to most power for its weight; great smoothness; delightful flexibility. Built of the finest motor materials and workmanship. For typical Jewett motor performance, see text.

High-Pressure Oiling doubles the life of a motor. Jewett is ideally oiled at all speeds. Three gallons per minute forced through all main and connecting rod bearings at 20 to 40 pounds pressure. Enduring silence and smoothness are certain.

Rugged Strength
Frame full six inches deep. Integral gussets reinforce front ends; four cross members make a unit of rigid foundation. Body has all-metal paneling with closed and welded joints over triple-fastened and metal-braced hardwood framing.

Smooth Handling
A touch of the foot, and the clutch answers instantly. Powerful brakes always meet the emergency. Finger touch shifting of gears leaves you unfired and unworried after long driving. Jewett is notably popular with women for driving convenience and pleasure.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE IMPROVES AS BRITISH ACCEPT DEBT FUNDING PLAN

MOST OF MARKETS QUIETLY STEADY DURING THE WEEK

Scant Attention Given to Alarmist Reports of European Difficulties—Debt Funding Developments Encouraging.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted weekly financial review, says:

"Continuing to pay scant attention to the alarmist reports of European difficulties, most of our markets remained quietly steady during the past week. At London the situation was somewhat different, the French note to Turkey and anxieties over the American debt negotiations adding to the confusion created by the Ruhr crisis. Even there, however, the reactions were not serious, and the announcement of the British Cabinet's acceptance of the American terms started a rally which was strengthened by more optimistic rumors concerning the chances of a Turkish treaty. British observers consider that the comparative steadiness of their markets testifies to an intrinsically sound position and that the shake-out of the past week was beneficial. A similar conclusion with regard to our own situation appears to be justified. We are, of course, less dependent on continental developments and our domestic business is going forward to a remarkably satisfactory basis.

Debt-Funding Plan.

"One important influence in restraining bearish activity is realization of the fact that profits are becoming more prevalent. Despite the marked and persistent upswing in industrial activity during the greater part of 12 months, earning ability remained rather poor until near the close of the year. Now, however, there are many signs that profits are becoming general. At first glance it would seem that the Steel Corporation's earnings during the last quarter, which, as in previous quarters failed quite to cover dividend requirements, are inconsistent with the claim of improvement. It must be remembered, however, that the Steel Corporation situation is in several respects a special one. The corporation's policy of stabilizing prices implies a certain sluggishness of response to changes in the condition of the industry. Reports from a number of other industrial companies meanwhile are favorable and the December railroad earnings promise to run about 5 per cent on valuation.

"Much case for encouragement is afforded by the British Cabinet's unequivocal acceptance of the American Commission's terms for funding the British debt. Despite their extraordinarily high level of taxation, the indifferent character of their trade, and the obscure nature of the continental outlook, the British have assumed an added and heavy burden. Alone among this country's debtors they have signified their intention of paying in full; have asked only that the terms be set on a practicable basis, and have accepted terms which they regard is seriously burdensome and which embrace a rate of interest above which they believe will prevail during a greater part of the life of the loan. They have done this partly to maintain British credit, unsurpassed, partly to avoid the possibilities of misunderstandings with this country, and partly to start the process of clearing up the international finance wreckage created by the war.

The German Situation.

"Developments in the Ruhr have been somewhat reassuring. Disorders have diminished and the French have shown a disposition to deal tactfully with the population. It seems to be easily established that France has no intention of extending the occupied area, but that she will hold fast to what she has until Germany makes a satisfactory offer. Time will be required to develop the situation, but there are some signs that Germany may wish to negotiate and that France will not turn a deaf ear when she considers that a real offer is in prospect.

"Strength which extended to practically all groups of stocks characterized an active short session on the Stock Exchange. Reports that President Harding would give his approval to the plan of the Debt Funding Commission and more reassuring advices realtive to the situation in the Ruhr were doubtless favorable influences. There was a decided lack of bear pressure and such profit-taking as occurred, principally among the industrial stocks was well absorbed. Some groups were under the stimulus of special influences, such as the expectation of a rise in steel prices next week, the continuation of crude oil price advances and reports of European buying of sugar on a large scale. Gains of over a point were common in the industrial list. Bonds were active and firmer.

Exchange Rates Up.

"The foreign exchange market followed closely the course of rates at London, where trading ended before the opening here. At London the improvement in the European political situation through good buying of practically all currencies resulted in advance all along the line. Trading here was active with a brisk demand for sterling and French francs. The latter moved up to 6.41¼ points in the first hour of trading, a net gain of 17½ points over yesterday's close. At London the net gain amounted to 25½ points. Sterling at $4.64¾ was ¼ cent higher. Italian lire and Belgian francs closely followed French francs, and German marks moved up from .0007½ to .0025½ of a cent. Other continentals were firmer.

"A decrease of $20,354,630 in the surplus of the Clearing House members resulted in a deficit at the end o fthe week of $5,730,110. Loans and discounts showed an increase of $14,193,000 and time and net demand deposits combined an increase of $11,913,000. The reserve of member banks in the Federal Reserve Bank decreased $19,422,946.

Dry Goods Market Review.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—Prices for print cloths and sheetings were firm today, but traders still were cautious in making commitments over the week end and the volume of sales was not large. Some mills are refusing to accept offers at present quotations, being well sold up, it was said. Sateens, twills and voiles continued to record fair sales at firm prices.

DEBT FUNDING AND POSSIBLE EFFECT ON STERLING RATE

Pointed Out That Attention Should Be Given to New Influence Introduced Into the Foreign Exchange Market — View of General Conditions.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York Evening Post.

LONDON, Feb. 3.—Arthur W. Kiddy, editor of Bankers' Magazine and financial editor of the London Morning Post, in financial review today says:

"The obscurity of the European outlook emphasizes the one bright spot, namely, the hopes for an early settlement of our debt to you. There is one aspect of the settlement, however, which both sides of the Atlantic will do well to recognize that is, the fresh disturbing influence introduced into the foreign exchange market. During the course of the international position as expressed through the exchanges was obscured by the absence of freedom of trade. Similarly, the full effect of the international debts as yet has been unrevealed because hitherto no payments have been made, while the fact that our recent remittances have been so small to create some little disturbance cannot be regarded as establishing a precedent one way or the other. Incidentally, at the recent meeting of the National Provincial and Union Bank the chairman expressed the financial district's general satisfaction over our Government's decision to accept the American terms.

Conditions in Market.

"Although outwardly there is no relief in the tension of the European situation, good quarters assert that Turkey will give way shortly. Practically all the annual bank meetings are now concluded and the general consensus of opinion expressed at all the meetings is that no general revival in international trade is possible until the European outlook becomes clearer. Contrary to Reginald McKenna's warnings about the effects of deflation, most of the bankers congratulate the Government upon the conversion of the floating debt which was secured during the year and upon the souader currency position, maintaining that lower costs of production are necessary for any revival in business.

"The slowness of our markets to fall in the face of recent political alarms and American debt anxieties indicates intrinsically sound conditions. Given an improvement in the political outlook, a further gain in industrial securities is anticipated. Moreover, if the dollar declines further, there will be some disposition to inquire for the best class of American securities. Money rates will be steadier during the next six weeks owing to the ingathering of taxes, but his condition will be followed by a renewal of ease in April.

"The Government's financial year conceivably may yield a considerable surplus for debt redemption, but this can be taken as no criterion for the new budget, since the latter will be adversely affected by the effect upon income tax receipts of recent bad years in trade, by the absence of any material fresh amounts from sales of war stores and by the provision for service of the American debt.

Foreign Loan Problems.

"Talk of impending foreign loans here is much exaggerated, since the first of our commencing service on our debt to you must necessarily curtail our opportunities for making foreign advances. Whereas in the old days the temporary adverse movements in the exchanges which followed our big loans abroad mattered little in view of our having no external debt, conditions will be different in the future. Unless, therefore, America later should lend freely, the important factor is to be remembered in considering the trade outlook. By reason of our free trade principles we never imposed conditions as to where the proceeds of our loans were to be spent, consequently, although London was the lender, the proceeds flowed to all parts of the world."

Foreign Exchange

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—The evening Post, in its copyrighted weekly foreign exchange review today, says:

"Periods of strength and weakness in the foreign exchange market were distinctly divided by a change in market conditions on Wednesday as a direct result of the announcement that Great Britain had accepted the offer for settlement of the war debt of England to the United States. Before that announcement was made many of the continental exchanges were in a condition of absolute collapse, but after the announcement was made there was an abrupt check to the declines and advances and rallies were quickly to order. The most important movements were those in the first half of the week that carried many rates down in the lowest levels period being the crisis resulting from the French occupation of the Ruhr district and the acute tension caused by this move. The market was in its weakest stage on Wednesday, when French checks dropped to 5.77, the lowest rate touched since the low record of 5.70 was established on Nov. 11, 1920. German exchange crumbled away, marks, checks and cables selling on Wednesday at .0020, the lowest in history. Central European changes also broke badly, Austrian marks falling to .0028, another new low record, and Rumanian leu yielded to a new low of .38. A new low record was also made by Jugo-Slavia dinares dropping to .0028.

"South American exchanges showed a downward movement, Uruguay being especially heavy. Indian exchange held steady after its reaction to 32. Italian exchange moved in a narrow groove, the market for lire being well controlled by the Italian banking agencies. Scandinavian exchanges became weak yesterday after holding fairly well during the preceding part of the week, and crowns then dropped from above 19 cents to 18.63, selling at the same level on Norwegian crowns, although for a long time previous Danish was held materially above Norwegian exchange. Dutch exchange was weak for a time, guilders falling to 39.10. Sterling, except for a short period at the beginning of the week, held a position entirely independent of other exchanges. On Monday demand sterling sold as low as $4.62¾ in London and $4.63 in this market, but after the early sales started a steady upward movement. After the English debt settlement was announced there was a buying inquiry for sterling, which at once rose over a cent and made further substantial gains, leading the entire market on a general upward movement. On the two following days sterling demand sold above $4.67, the German mark moved up and French exchange rallied to 6.23.

"The foreign exchange market closely the course of rates at London, where trading ended before the opening here. At London the improvement in the German political situation through good buying of practically all currencies resulted in advances all along the line. Trading here started with a brisk demand for sterling and French francs. The latter moved up from .0274 to .0414 points in the first hour of trading, a gain of 17½ points over yesterday's close. At London the net gain amounts to 25½ points. Sterling at 4.68¾ was 1¼ higher. Italian lire and Belgian francs closely followed French francs, and German marks moved up from .0027½ to .0028½ of a cent. Other continentals were firmer.

July wheat showed the best tone on the Merchants' Exchange at the week-end session, other futures finishing about unchanged. The improvement in exchange rates helped the market, as did the apprehension aroused over the cold wave, which followed wheat trend. The export situation was a check on the bulls. Further rain in Argentina was reported. Reported selling off in wheat receipts was mentioned.

In the local cash grain market Saturday sound soft milling grades of wheat were steady with demand fair. The No. 4s were somewhat firmer but there was not much demand for flinty descriptions or damaged No. 3 wheat. Local mills were the chief buyers. Scattered sales were placed by dealers. Offerings pretty well cleaned up. Hard wheat was quiet, although little offered. No. 2 hard had $1.16 bid. Yellow hard was offered at that. Off grades fairly steady. Cash corn was steady to 1c higher on mixed and yellow, but white corn was unchanged. There was good general demand. Mills and shippers took the yellow. Elevators sought other grades, too.

Cash oats were steady to ⅛c higher. There was a shipping demand.

The early range of prices was narrow. July wheat alone showing even fair advance. The old wave with fear of possible harm to winter wheat was a factor. Liverpool closed unchanged after opening ¼d to ¼d lower.

Special to the Post-Dispatch

CHICAGO, Feb. 3.—Wheat did not show much change today. The stubbornness on the part of May came as a surprise to some in the trade, the belief prevailing that the passage of the Lenroot bill without a rider providing for foreign credits would greatly weaken the bull position. The buying power, however, was ever present and it took much selling to break May through $1.18. After a substantial break below that level the market exhibited ability to come back. The new crop months were firm from the start. The crop condition being endangered by the zero temperatures where there is lack of snow covering. There was little disposition to sell, but shorts were inclined to cover. The foreign situation is improving if the advancing rates of exchange are any criterion and this is encouraging to the bulls. Longs also were cheered by the reported attitude of England in trying to effect a settlement of difficulties between Continental European countries now that she has moved to settle her debt problem. Milling demand for wheat was quiet. Half Saturday's session did not present any improvement in foreign offerings. Arrivals were 300 cars, a year ago, the first time in months. Market closed unchanged to ⅛c higher. May, 118¼; July, $1.13@1.13¼. September, $1.10.

The action of the corn market was disappointing to its friends. The market seemed unable to move very far in an upward direction in spite of extremely much selling and toward the last pressure of realising sales was felt. Cables reported rains over the southern part of Argentina and this caused some selling, but there was a little pressure from cash houses that might be hedging. Country offerings to arrive around 73c for May were reported liberal. Exporters were bidding the country direct for corn it was said. Market closed unchanged to ¼c lower. May 74⅞@74¼c; July 74½@74⅝c. September 74½c.

Oats were neglected. A little Eastern selling was the only feature. Market closed unchanged to ⅜c up. May 44¾c, July 42¾c and September 41⅝@41¾c.

Commission houses bought provisions and packers sold. Lard closed 2½@5c lower and ribs unchanged.

Hogs, higher the fore-part of the week at the St. Louis National Stock Yards, closed with practically all of the advance lost. Sheep and lambs finished the week about steady, while cattle showed material decline. Light receipts of cattle did not offset the limited demand which was attributed largely to light beef consumption caused by unseasonable weather. Losses in beef steers, butcher yearlings and butcher cows amounted to 25c to 50c, while the depreciation in stocker and feeder steers amounted to 50c to 75c. Bulls dropped 15c to 25c and canners and cutters closed steady to possibly 10c to 15c higher on canners. Veal calves material- a 75c to $1 break. The top price paid for cattle was $10 per cwt. for a drove of 1202-lb. steers and also for a short load of light weight steers and heifers. The bulk of beef steers for the week ranged from $7.25 to $8.75. Arrivals included 25 cars of western steers. Texas consignments canned from $5.25 to $6.50, with a few cars of fed Oklahomas making $7.75. Most of the yearling offering was of indifferent quality and sold from $4.50 to $8. Butcher cows were most noted at $4 to $5.75, followed by cutters at $3 to $3.50 and canners at $2.50 to $2.75. Heavy bulls were available at $4.50 to $5.50 and bolognas $5.75 to $6.75. Monday's veal calf top was $13, compared with $12 on the close. Southern canner yearlings dropped 25c. $12 was the top Tuesday and Thursday and Friday. Limited demand together with the decline in beef steers influenced the severe break in stockers and feeders. Most of the week's steer run changed hands at $6.50 to $7. Stock cows, heifers and bulls were little changed for the period.

Hog Market Irregular.

While receipts the current week have fallen short of the previous week a heavy supply they have nevertheless been liberal and fully up to the average for this time of year. Receipts totaled 84,812 head, as against 108,000 previous week and 77,600 a year ago. During the forepart of the week the runs were liberal and the hog market responded with a general advance in prices amounting to 25c to 50c. From Thursday on, however, the situation veered around in favor of the buyers and the greater part of the early advances were wiped out. Quality of the offerings ranged good, taken as a whole, with an abundance of medium and heavy finished swine and a rather moderate proportion of pigs and immature stuff. Early in the week weight was in high favor and sought after, but toward the close the packers pressed the market on 250 to 300 pound hogs. January hog receipts at this market totaled 453,481 head, a new record. The previous banner run for any month was January, 1920, with 446,852 head. Stock hog trade rather quiet, yet the January shipments of 4223 head were larger than the movement the same month a year ago when 2941 swine went back to the country to be fed out. At the close of the week the various classes of hogs, good to choice quality, were quotable as follows: Finished swine, 250 pounds and up, $8 to $8.20; medium butchers, 250 to 240 pounds, $8.10 to $8.30; light butchers, 190 to 210 pounds, $8.30 to $8.50; light shipping hogs

Horses and Mules.

The horse market for the week, under an offering of about 700 head on commission, ruled fairly active at steady to strong prices, improvement applying to the better grades of work horses and chunks and top Southerners. There were quite a few orders on the market and supplies were usually readily moved, the bulk clearing at mid-week. The offering of mules was liberal, about 3600 on commission, and the general market was on a slightly lower basis than the previous week. Though some of the good-haired, fat mules held about steady, uneven losses were finished swine, 250 pounds and up, $8 to $8.20; medium butchers, 250 to 240 pounds, $8.10 to $8.30; light butchers, 190 to 210 pounds, $8.30 to $8.50; light shipping hogs

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—Isadora Duncan, whose classic dances created an uproar in various cities on her recent tour of the United States, sailed for Paris today on the steamship George Washington, after firing a broadside at America and things American. The dancer declaimed: "I would rather live in Russia on black bread and vodka than in the United States at the best hotels.

"The people in this country do not want art. I came here to tell them of art and they put me on Ellis Island."

MUNICIPAL NURSE BOARD TO ASK FOR $83,400 FOR 1923

Report of Chairman Lists Items Totaling $25,710 More Than Amount Provided Last Year.

10 ADDITIONAL NURSES PROPOSED

Activities Include Visit to Homes of Sick—Most of Work Is Done at Clinics.

The Municipal Nurses' Board plans to ask the city for an appropriation of $83,400 for, expenses in 1923, representing an increase of $25,710 over the budget allotted in 1922.

In the report of Mrs. Frederick Roth, chairman of the board, items listed as necessary to the continued efficient service of this public health department are explained. The municipal nurses, the report states, will need $58,550 for the present program of work; $5000 to replace funds contributed by the Red Cross and Tuberculosis Society, $12,000 to provide for 10 additional nurses, $1700 for promotions, $2500 for additional doctors' services, $1000 car fare, $300 for supplies and $2400 for clerical service.

Each year the municipal nurse advocates have had to fight for money to carry on the work. Last year $75,000 was asked for and $57,690 apportioned. This was a reduction from $71,000 allotted in 1921, despite the fact that nurses' services were extended and the scope of the undertaking greatly increased. But for emergency aid from the Red Cross and Tuberculosis Society the department would have been embarrassed by lack of funds in the middle of 1922.

Grand Jury Mentioned Work.

The grand jury last October mentioned municipal nursing work in its report and recommended increased appropriations. Medical authorities in the city have indorsed the work of the municipal nurses and have strongly urged further expansion.

Figures obtained from Miss Josephine Goldsmith, superintendent of the municipal nurses, reveal that the comparatively small staff of workers reaches thousands of sick persons each year.

Last year 28 nurses were employed. They were distributed among the 10 health centers maintained by the department in sections where free medical advice and service are most needed.

Most of the work of the municipal nurses and the staff of 16 physicians who work part time for the board is done at clinics. While the municipal nurses visit the homes and care for sick persons in times of emergency, they do not do bedside nursing. Their work lies in the field of preventive medicine largely, Miss Goldsmith said.

Clinic Conferences.

Clinic conferences are held at the health centers on an average of 24 times a week each. These conferences are "visiting hours" for people who wish to consult the nurses or desire diagnoses made of their illnesses. The work is divided into tuberculosis cases, pre-natal cases and post-natal or child welfare cases.

About 6000 persons either suffering from tuberculosis or in the incipient stages of this malady were treated by the municipal nurses last year. An average of 1800 children each month receive attention at the child welfare clinic meetings. More than 300 expectant mothers have consulted with clinic staffs each month.

The numebr of persons receiving benefits from the health centers will increase as facilities for treating them are increased, Miss Goldsmith believes.

PLAN TO DAM BLACK RIVER FLOOD WATERS AT LEEPER, MO.

Incorporation of Reclamation Project Scheduled for April Term of Court.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

POPLAR BLUFF, Mo., Feb. 3.—Incorporation of a reclamation project for the draining of Black River flood water in a reservoir at Leaport, to cost $2,300,000, is scheduled for the April term of Circuit Court, according to W. N. Meredith, one of the promoters of the undertaking. Fifty-one per cent of the landowners in the section to be affected are said to have signed the petition. The statutes provide that 51 per cent of the landowners affected must agree to the project. Meredith says that 60 per cent of the landowners in the district have signed.

"After incorporation," Meredith stated, "the raising of funds can go on without Federal aid. If Federal aid is not enlisted there is a sufficient number of landowners in Missouri and Arkansas that are interested in the dam, and whose property will be benefited to distribute the $2,000,000 cost without proving an unreasonable burden to those taxed."

$3,000,000 FOR CHRISTIAN COLLEGES IN THE ORIENT

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.—The joint committee of the Women's Union Christian Colleges in the Orient has announced completion of its fund, which assures approximately $1,000,000 from the Laura Spelman Rockefeller memorial fund. The Rockefeller gift covers six colleges in Tokio, Pekin, Nanking, Lucknow, Madras and Vellore. Ten denominations appropriated half a million dollars, and a million and a half was obtained through a nation-wide campaign conducted throughout the country, making a total fund of $3,000,000.

Several states and cities raised a sufficient amount to entitle them to name a building in one of the colleges.

So much of the work of the campaign was through voluntary service that the expenses will amount to less than 2 per cent of the whole amount raised.

Entertainments Centering Around the Married Set Featuring Late Winter Season in the Social World

Many Out-of-Town Visitors and Former St. Louisans Renewing Old Friendships, Are Being Honored at Functions—Afternoon Teas, Bridge Luncheons and Parties, Most of Them Informal.

LATE winter, after the cessation of brilliant debutante parties, brings the more inclusive entertainments centering around the married set. This year St. Louisans have the added incentive of many out-of-town visitors, whose presence here is the signal for gracious hospitality. Many of the guests are former St. Louisans, whose marriages have taken them away, and who have returned to visit their families and renew old friendships. A few are strangers, for whom receptions and teas are being given to introduce them.

At least three young matrons, who as St. Louis debutantes, were much feted, have come from their homes in New York to visit. Mrs. Harry [illegible], formerly Miss Edith Nagel, with Mr. [illegible], of New York, are the guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Nagel, of 44 Westmoreland place. The Putnams returned earlier in the winter from a two years' stay in South America. Mrs. Eugene A. Perry Jr. is visiting her mother, Mrs. Claude Kilpatrick, of 33 Portland place, and is being entertained informally by many of her friends. Mrs. Walter Herrick, formerly Miss Helen Aull, is the guest of Mrs. John Dwight Filley at her home in Westmoreland place.

Mrs. Miles Standish Slocum of Stanford, Conn., will depart this week after a several weeks' visit to Dr. and Mrs. George W. Cale, 12 Lenox place, and their daughter, Mrs. James K. Tully. Mrs. Slocum was formerly Miss Isabel Shaw of St. Louis.

Mrs. Auguste B. Ewing of Pershing avenue is entertaining her mother, Mrs. David Day, and her sister, Miss Alice Day, both of St. Paul, Minn., for an indefinite period.

A number of social functions, formal and otherwise, have been given for Mrs. H. P. Bonties of Greenwich, Conn., the guest of Mrs. Edward N. Beach of Westminster place.

Possibly more entertaining has been done for Mrs. Louis B. Woodward's guests, Mrs. Louis Rosenstein and Miss Jeanette Todd, than for any other guests here for so short a time. Several hundred attended the reception given by Mrs. Woodward Friday afternoon. Those assisting were Mmes. Robert Lee Hedges, Frederick W. A. Vesper, Robert Burns, Frederick Fowler Campbell, Tom Murphy, Carl Niederlander, Robert N. Warmack and Ross Woolsey.

Mrs. Edward Mead has sent out cards for a bridge luncheon she will give at her home, 6313 Waterman avenue, Tuesday afternoon, complimentary to Mrs. Rosenstein and Miss Todd.

Mrs. Clinton H. Lubbock and Mrs. H. R. Singleton will be joint hostesses at an informal tea to be given Thursday afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock in honor of Mrs. D. T. Atkins of Ruskin, La., a sister of Mrs. Singleton, who is her guest. The party will be given at 5056 Enright avenue.

Mrs. James Robert Estill of Estill, Mo., was a much entertained visitor in St. Louis last week. She was the house guest of Mrs. James M. Carpenter Jr. of Westminster place, who gave a luncheon in her honor. Mrs. William Caleb Sipple of Brentmoor Park was hostess at an in-

Miss Cullinane's Wedding Brilliant Event of Week

Married to George W. Clarkson Jr. at Home of Her Parents Last Evening; House Decorated With Flowers.

CONSPICUOUS in last week's cycle of weddings was that of Miss Alice Esther Cullinane, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Robert Cullinane, and George W. Clarkson Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Clarkson of 5412 Cabanne avenue, which took place at 8 o'clock last night at the Cullinane home, 5323 Maple avenue.

A springlike atmosphere pervaded the lower rooms of the Cullinane home, decorated with smilax and baskets of roses and spring flowers, and the altar in the dining room might have been built in a garden. It consisted of a trellis completely covered by smilax and flowers and was flanked on either side by tall cathedral tapers. The Rev. Father J. J. McGlynn of St. Rose's Church performed the ceremony.

Spring colors were further in evidence in the gowns worn by the bride's attendants. They were of chiffon with silk Spanish lace to match. Miss Mary Soulard Turner, Miss Alice Maguire and Miss Virginia Richardson, the bridesmaids, wore green, pink and blue, respectively, and Miss Helen Claire Sullivan of Denver, Colo., maid of honor, was gowned in delicate yellow. The gowns were fashioned similarly with lace panels covering the front and back of each, caught at the waist line and held by a rolled girdle. The chiffon skirt was very full at either side, and hung to the floor. Short trains of silver cloth and chiffon were fastened to the left side at the back. Miss Sullivan's gown differed from the others only in

Bridal Couples Spend Honeymoon on Ocean Trips

Joseph Lewis Werner and Bride Sail for Europe; Mr. and Mrs. John E. Sheridan Take Caribbean Sea Trip.

TRIPS to California, the various inland resorts and to the larger cities, such as New York and Chicago, seem to have lost their charm as honeymoon spots, and ocean cruises or shorter gulf trips from Southern ports are supplanting them in popularity.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Louis Werner sailed yesterday on the S. S. George Washington from New York for a tour of Europe on their honeymoon. Mrs. Werner was Miss Elise Garneau. Their marriage took place Jan. 29. They will buy their linen, a gift of Mr. Werner's father, Louis Werner, in Bohemia, and will visit resorts along the Riviera, in Paris and the various European countries. Mr. and Mrs. Werner may remain abroad all summer.

Mr. and Mrs. John Ensign Sheridan are taking the Caribbean Sea trip, including Havana, the Isthmus of Panama, British Honduras and down to Cristobal, in South America. Mrs. Sheridan was, until Wednesday, Miss Patricia Carleton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Murray Carleton of Lindell boulevard. The ceremony was performed in the Carleton home at 4:30 o'clock by Bishop McMurry of Louisville, Ky., assisted by the Rev. Mr. Tadlock of the Centenary Methodist Church. Miss Annie Laurie Carleton attended her sister as maid of honor, and James Sheridan served his brother as best man. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James J.

U. D. C. BALL TO BE GIVEN FRIDAY EVENING

One of the most important functions of the week is the formal ball to be given Friday evening at the Hotel Chase by the Margaret A. E. McLure Chapter, U. D. C., for the benefit of the chapter's educational fund. Mrs. H. F. Brey is president of the chapter, and Mrs. L. William Ray chairman of the Committee on Arrangements for the ball. Invitations for the affair, which has been given annually for the past quarter of a century, were sent out several weeks ago through the membership.

Mrs. George B. Dunford will lead the grand march as matron of honor, and Miss Henriette de Penaloza, a debutante of this season, will lead the procession of maids of honor. They include Misses Mabel Billingsley, Ruth Jamison, Marie Reine Fusz, Mary Carmen Ryan, Madeleine Lasar, Leonore Stark, Romaine Stark, Mary Lee Faris, Margaret Teasdale, Ruth Kellog and Lorraine Meyer.

The ball is to open at 8:30 o'clock. Officers from Scott Field, Jefferson Barracks and the navy, in uniform, and members of the American Legion, will lend a military note to the evening's festivities. The list of patronesses includes Mmes. C. A. Moreno, Daniel Taylor, John C. Roberts, Halsey E. Yates, R. A. Byers, C. J. Manley, Hanley Yore, James White, W. W. Cherry, Eugene Fusz, Charles D. Ashcroft, Joseph F. Hickey, A. C. Meyer, W. H. Naunheim, Joseph McKean, C. P. Melton, W. L. Hemingway, O'Neill Ryan, Shelby Curlee, Robert Lund, Richard Littlefield, Walter Yost and Charles B. Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Murphy of 3 Princeton avenue, University City, have their daughters, Mrs. O. O. Scroggins Jr., and Mrs. Russell T. Lafferty, and the latter's baby son with them for the next month. The visitors are from Little Rock. Mrs. Murphy's sister, Mrs. John Smallman, and Mr. Smallman, have just departed for their home in Nashville, Tenn.

Mrs. Harry Clark Gifford is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Alonzo Frazer of the Westmoreland apartments. MISS CULLINANE'S WEDDING BRILLIANT EVENT OF WEEK gold cloth trimming instead of silver. She carried sunburst roses and the bridesmaids Ophelia roses, in arm bouquets. Samuel T. Gay served Mr. Clarkson as best man, and Floyd Harding, Reed Fenton and Cleon Colgate completed the bridal party, which rescended the stairs and walked through an aisle of satin ribbon caught to aisle posts, to the altar.

The bride was gowned in white satin, made on long, clinging lines, and trimmed with pearls. The skirt drapery was caught at the left side by a pearl buckle, and pearl ornaments at either shoulder held in place the long silver-lined court train. There was a boat neck edged with pearls. Two bands of orange blossoms held the tulle veil to her coiffure and she carried white orchids and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Clarkson's gifts to her attendants were rose crystal plaques set with marquisette, with silk cords to fasten them about the neck, and the bridegroom presented his attendants with silver fountain pens. A reception followed the ceremony, after which Mr. and Mrs. Clarkson departed for the East on their honeymoon trip. Upon their return, in about three weeks, they will reside temporarily at the Gatesworth Hotel.

The bride is a graduate of the Visitation Convent, later attending school in Washington, D. C., and Washington University, where she became a member of Pi Beta Phi sorority. Last year she served as a maid of honor at the Veiled Prophet ball.

Mr. Clarkson was educated at Western Military Academy and the University of Wisconsin.

WRINKLES AND FACIAL BLEMISHES REMOVED

For more than 10 years European and American Doctors have been able to remove lines and wrinkles from about eyes, face and neck, as well as remove facial blemishes, such as smallpox, blackheads, comedones, freckles, blotches, scars, enlarged pores, powder and birthmarks. For these purposes "Caristol" and the Gordon Parisian Process," used by a famous French dermatologist are used. Neither treatment is peeling, astringent, wax, massage cream, exercise or massage. The reason for it disintegrates blemished skin, wrinkled tissue and forms new skin in place of blemished and unwrinkled skin in place.

These famous treatments may be obtained for home use from the Gordon Dermatology Co., 204 Tramway Bldg., Denver, Colo. Literature is sent to those interested on request.

MARRIED YESTERDAY

Mrs. John W. Hobbs.

MISS MYRENE HOUCHIN WEDS JOHN W. HOBBS

MISS MYRENE HOUCHIN, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Houchin of Jefferson City, became the bride of John Wilbourn Hobbs, son of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Hobbs of South Grand boulevard, St. Louis, at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, in the home of her parents, 611 Capitol avenue, Jefferson City. The wedding is of interest here and a number of St. Louisans attended.

The bridal party descended the stairway and passed under an arch of roses and smilax to an altar constructed against the mantel in the drawing room. Mrs. Robert Otto, Mrs. John Guy Gibson and Miss Beulah Souders of Chicago and Miss Helen Clark attended the bride. Blodgett Priest served as best man, and the groomsmen were Theodore Oberman of Jefferson City and Hale Montgomery of St. Louis. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. John Westley Smith and was followed by a reception.

The bride's gown was an imported model of white satin, embellished with silver lace. The sleeves and yoke of the gown were entirely of lace, and lace panels and train ornamented the skirt. The tulle bridal veil, held in place with a silver coronet, was shot with silver threads. Her flowers were orchids and valley lilies. The gowns of the bride's attendants were made of satin crepe of French blue and champagne color, and with these they wore large picture hats.

The guests from St. Louis included: Former Gov. and Mrs. Frederick D. Gardner and William Gardner, Blodgett Priest, Hale Montgomery, Carl Engle, Mr. and Mrs. Morton Jourdan, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Kierns, Mr. and Mrs. John A. Lee, John McElwee, Miss Laura Wessel, Mrs. William N. Claggett, Mrs. John Boone, Mrs. Lillian Cabanne and Mrs. Anna D. Moore.

LITERARY CLUBS HOLDING SOCIETY'S ATTENTION

Clubs, in which the interest is literary rather than social, are occupying the attention of some of the socially prominent matrons and their husbands. On the first and third Thursday evenings of each month, such an organization, comprising about 40 of the married set, meet at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Luther Ely Smith, 5321 Waterman avenue, to hear the latest plays read and discussed by Gustavus Tuckerman. Each Monday afternoon 20 society women meet at each others homes to hear current topics discussed by Dr. Lippincott of Washington University. Miss Mary Lionberger will entertain this group tomorrow afternoon at her home in Westmoreland place.

On one Sunday evening during the month 100 men and women listen to a program of Chamber music. Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. Crunden of Westminster place, entertained the club in January, and Mr. and Mrs. J. Lionberger Davis will be hosts at the February meeting.

Miss Margaret Chandler, daughter of Warren Chandler of 5247 Waterman avenue, has been the honor guest at two large social functions during the past week. Last night Misses Eunice and Betty Hodgman invited a group of the younger social set to the St. Louis Country Club, where they had a table for Miss Chandler at the dinner dance. The guests were the Misses Carolyn Bailey, Audrey Faust, Elizabeth Terry, Mary Denman Clark, Dorothy Elliott, Elizabeth Mauran, Claire Garneau, Rebecca Chase and Helen Mills, and Messrs. Carl Koehler, Warren Chandler, Lannan and Theodore Benoist, Calvin Gatch, Kenneth Drummond, Geoffrey Rideout, Garneau Weld, Charles Mulliken, Robert Ormrod, Field Goltra, William R. Compton Jr., Lindell Gordon, Hugh Lawson, William McCandless, Winston and John Jay Johns, Whitelaw Terry and John McKinney.

Miss Chandler was to have made her debut this winter, but mourning in the family prevented, and she is just now beginning to take part in

Complete With Case
Free Service for One Year

A Sweeping Victory

The new model Corona has won the enthusiasm of typewriter experts everywhere. It is a perfect typewriter for office use, yet it weighs less than seven pounds.

Corona is so far ahead of any other portable Typewriter that you have no basis for comparison. No other portable Typewriter is as—

COMPLETE: Corona has every modern improvement, including Automatic Ribbon Reverse, Standard Portable Keyboard, Two-color Ribbon, Back Spacer and Automatic Line Spacer.

CONVENIENT: Corona folds and fits into a neat traveling case. Takes a sheet 10 inches wide—same as $100 machines. Writing is in plain view all the time. It is the most convenient Typewriter in the world.

DURABLE: Corona is strong and rigid, with frame of aluminum instead of heavy cast iron. It has made good for 16 years in the hands of 500,000 users—more than of all other portables combined.

No Typewriter at any price will do cleaner or better work or stand up longer under hard service, yet the price of Corona has not been advanced. The price—complete with case—is still only $50.

Write, phone or call for a free demonstration. Corona will easily sell itself to you—for either personal or business use.

Only in Sunbeam damask Frocks and Dresses will you find the sparkling style,, the alluring quality, the piquant coloring and the marvelous workmanship that is the despair of all imitators.

Exclusive Styles and Colors

The variety of styles and the diversity of patterns and colors in these Dresses is truly amazing. Many of the designs and color effects were originated for these Dresses; and nowhere will you find anything half so lovely as the checked and flower-spray designs worked out in combinations of golden rod, periwinkle, turkey red, seafoam green, delft blue, buff, navy and other colors.

COMMUNITY FUND SYSTEM TO REDUCE COLLECTION COSTS

Chairman of Campaign Points Out That About 10 Per Cent More of Money Will Go to Charities.

SEVERAL INSTANCES CITED AS EXAMPLES

Appeal for Donations to 40 Agencies Under Budget Method to Be Made From Feb. 23 to March 5.

Approximately 10 per cent more of the funds contributed to 40 charitable and philanthropic organizations in St. Louis this year will be actually expended in carrying on their work, because the cost of collecting the money from the public will be reduced from an average of 15 per cent to about 5 per cent through the Community Fund of St. Louis, which will conduct a joint campaign for the 40 agencies from Feb. 23 to March 5.

This fact was made known yesterday by J. L. Johnston, chairman of the Campaign Committee of the Community Fund, after he had completed a survey of the cost of collecting funds in past years for each of the members of the fund. Johnson found that some agencies which raised money through balls, bazars, entertainments of various kinds and direct mail solicitations had expended as much as 40 per cent of the sum realized in its collection. This means, of course, that charities actually had available for relief only $60 of every $100 collected. The average cost, however, was $15 of every $100 collected.

Opinion as to Costs.

Commenting on the result of the survey, Johnston stated that until the definite amount the Community Fund hopes to raise through its campaign becomes known, it will be impossible to fix the percentage of expense. He pointed out, however, that the local Campaign Committee believes 3½ per cent will be the maximum cost of solicitation, this being based upon the average of slightly more than 5 per cent in the 112 cities employing the Community Fund method of financing charity and philanthropy.

"The survey we have just completed," said Johnston, "shows a waste of public contributions which can be avoided. We want more of the people's money to go to charity and less to cancel off debts incurred through raising this money."

Here are some of the ways several of the agencies in the Community Fund raised money last year and what it cost them as revealed by the survey: One agency sent out an appeal letter which brought in $5225. It cost $1500 to get out the letter, so that it netted less than two-thirds of the amount to be expended for purposes for which it was sought.

Some Examples of Cost.

Another agency gave a card party from which receipts were $1950. Deduct $130 for expenses of the party and the net was $1520. Still another paid $390 to stage a play at which $965 was realized, but less than half the amount remained when expenses were deducted. Then one of the agencies put on a campaign for subscriptions. It got $1430, but at a cost of $500. A small sale of the products of another brought in $127, but it cost $40 to put on the sale. Total contributions to another agency last year were $131,000. Cost of collecting that money was $22,000, a little more than 16 per cent.

The wear and tear on human power under the old system of separate appeals was tremendous. High-priced executives were compelled to devote too much time to raising funds. Under the joint appeal system of the Community Fund, the executives are able to give the maximum of service for which they were hired because they are relieved of the necessity of financing their own agency.

The Community Fund asks, not that St. Louis give to 40 organizations at 40 different times in the year, but that they give to 40 organizations at once. Having done that, they will be immune from further solicitation by any of these agencies.

This means the elimination of many appeals with which St. Louis is familiar. It means the Junior League will dispense with its Follies, the Salvation Army will discard the Christmas kettles and the tambourine, the annual bazar of the Board of Religious Organizations will be no more and the solicitation of funds by Christmas carolers of the Children's Aid Society will discontinue.

Another Fault of Old System.

Johnston also pointed out that the system which prevailed prior to the Community Fund was faulty to a pronounced degree in that the various agencies asked for as much as they could get through separate appeals. The Community Fund, he said, through its Budget Committee, is arriving at a scientific estimate of the needs of the 40 agencies for 1923, so that the public will be asked to give a minimum instead of a maximum. This estimate will be backed up by audited financial statements of income and expenses of all the organizations for the past two years.

"Thus far, about 2 of the 40 budgets have been approved. Hearings on the budgets will be held almost daily this week at the headquarters of the Community Fund in the Central National Bank Building.

ST. LOUISANS TO ATTEND ARMY DEPOT HEARING

Business Men to Protest Against Removal of Quartermaster Department to Chicago.

A delegation organized by the Chamber of Commerce departed yesterday for Washington to present to Secretary of War Weeks tomorrow morning a number of reasons why the Quartermaster depot here should not be moved ot Chicago, as Weeks originally proposed.

Missouri members of Congress will assist in delivering the city's case at the hearing. The delegation is composed of James M. Byrnes, Col. D. S. Stanley, retired, former Depot Quartermaster here; Robert E. Sangster, of the Chamber of Commerce, and James E. Smith.

Arguments Against Removal.

A summary of the argument against removal of the depot as it will be presented to Weeks, follows:

"The estimated saving of $190,000 cannot be realized by consolidation at Chicago.

"There would remain at St. Louis Quartermaster services of utilities and transportation, account of Medical Supply Depot, the cost of which, added to the unavoidable expense (we think of substantially $9 per capita) of supplying St. Louis area troops from Chicago, will increase, rather than diminish, the total cost of operation and maintenance at Chicago and St. Louis.

"The St. Louis depot is adequate and adapted, physically, for the most economical handling of all Quartermaster supply of regular troops throughout Chicago and St. Louis areas, as a whole.

"That depot does not lend itself to commercial use, because it comprises only one modern warehouse building, which could not practicably be occupied both by the Government and a private tenant, nor could the other buildings be devoted to private use, because of the enclosed layout and jurisdictional control of grounds.

"The depot has ample railroad connectons, over direct single-line routes, to all sections of the Chicago and St. Louis areas.

"It is located at the focal point of the country's inland river system, having ship-side connection with the Mississippi River Barge Line and economical terminal facilities for the dispatch of freight, inbound and outbound.

"Water rates via the barge line to Gulf, Panama, Pacific and Atlantic coasts, are 20 per cent under rail rates.

"That depot is nearer both to origin and destination of the bulk of supply tonnage.

Lower Rail Rates Here.

"It has lower inbound and outbound rail rated by 20 per cent than has Chicago, on supplies as a whole.

"It is located in a large industrial center, the variety of industry, volume and variety of open stocks of stores, equipment, subsistence supplies is second to that of no city in the Middle West.

"By consolidating at St. Louis the supply of all troops 1,250,000 square feet of the Chicago units could be devoted to private commercial use, at an annual rental of $500,000, allowing the Government to reserve adequate warehouse and office floor space to accommodate all branches of the service that may remain in the Chicago depot.

"The business of private lessees can be isolated from the part of the plant reserved by the Chicago depot, which fact, together with the location, utilities and transportation facilities with which that depot is connected, gives that property a higher comparative rental value by 50 per cent than the value of the St. Louis depot is for such purposes, even though the St. Louis depot could practicably be so leased, in part, which it cannot be.

Economic Side Presented.

"Further economies in the supply of troops in the St. Louis and Chicago areas can only be accomplished by consolidating the supply activities at the St. Louis depot.

"If consolidation is to be made of the Quartermaster activities, with a view to economy, it should be at St. Louis, not at Chicago."

WILLECKEN BONDSMEN TO WAIT ON AUDIT

Shortage of $10,866.85 in Accounts of Former Circuit Clerk Alleged.

Bondsmen for Arthur D. Willecken, former Circuit Clerk of St. Louis County, who have been called on by Henry C. Kirchner, Willicken's successor, for settlement of an alleged shortage of $10,866.85 in Willecken's accounts, yesterday said they would wait for an audit before taking any action.

Kirchner wrote letters to the bondsmen Friday advising them of the alleged discrepancy in the accounts turned over to him by Willecken on Jan. 20, last, and stated he would file a suit on the $50,000 bond for the amount unless a voluntary settlement was made.

The bond was signed by Fred Essen, "boss" of the Republican machine; A. E. L. Gardner, former State Senator; Charles Authenrieth, proprietor of a Clayton hotel; Michael Weil of Fenton; Jacob Studt Jr. of Creve Coeur, and the late Charles Bartold of Maplewood.

The office was taken over the first of the year by Kirchner, who defeated Willicken in the Republican primary last August and was elected Circuit Clerk in November. The transfer of the accounts was not made until Jan. 20, Kirchner said.

Willicken, who is confined to his home, 7349 Elm avenue, Maplewood, by illness, stated to a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday that he knew of no shortage in his accounts, asserting that if any discrepancy existed it probably was due to loose methods or errors in bookkeeping.

He declared that in the two terms, eight years in all, that he served as Circuit Clerk he had nothing to do with the bookkeeping, leaving it to his chief deputy. John Berthold. Willecken said several instances of laxity in the bookkeeping came to his attention, such as checks in payment of witness fees being duplicated, the checks being returned later by persons who received them.

Berthold yesterday stated the bookkeeping system had been accurate, declaring the present difficulty was that the cash did not balance with the books.

BRICK SUPPLY ABOVE DEMAND, DEALERS SAY

Open Winter Enabled Nearly All Factories to Run Without Usual Layoff.

There is no brick shortage at the present time in St. Louis and none is anticipated, manufacturers of brick said in response to queries concerning the local situation and whether, in the face of the apparent building boom, bricks for construction here would be available without delay. The building permits for January were nearly double those for the same month of 1923.

"If such a notion is prevalent, we regret it," said Walter Pocock, secretary of the Brick Manufacturers' Association. "There are plenty of bricks in this market now, and we expect to be able to take care of the spring demand without difficulty."

Open Winter Favorable.

The open winter has enabled nearly all brick manufacturers to continue without the usual layoff and the shortage threatened during the railroad and coal strikes last summer has not developed in this section. The price of brick is not expected to vary with the opening of the market and rising trend of building, manufacturers say, and the prices quoted will be virtually the same as charged a year ago. They vary from about $20 to $29 a thousand for the ordinary factory brick and about $15 for secondary brick used to back up the facing.

Whether the drop of coal prices will affect brick prices is uncertain, it is said, but should the drop be pronounced, brick will not be quite as high. Coal, or fuel, is approximately 20 per cent of the cost of production in brick manufacture. Mine run or "steam lump" coal from the Southern Illinois mines is selling at a little more than $2 now, as compared to $3.50 in December.

As has been told, the building permits in January here totaled $2,560,326, as compared with $1,440,786 in January of 1922. Last month 387 permits were issued, and 430 were issued in January, 1922. The year 1922 was a banner one in construction because of the rush to overcome a building shortage. The total construction in the United States is estimated at more than $4,000,000,000 in 1922, the largest year on record in point of investment, and an estimated billion dollars greater than 1921.

Estimate of Consumption.

In St. Louis the average monthly brick consumption is estimated by manufacturers at 10,000,000. While the percentage is not known, the bricks used in construction of homes, including apartment buildings, is a large part of the whole.

"While brick is an important item in all construction," Ralph Simpkins, vice president of a local brick-manufacturing concern and a member of the St. Louis association, said, "it is not a great figure in the total cost. It often may run as low as 10 per cent." He said that 30,000 bricks would be the average number used in a seven or eight room house. "At $20 a thousand that would make the brick cost $600, while the house probably will cost altogether at least $6000."

The attitude of building labor trades toward an increase in the contracts for wages which come up within the next 60 days is as yet indefinite. They have been warned by manufacturers and construction men not to "kill the goose that lays the golden egg" by demanding higher wages. This, it has been advised, would raise the cost of building so that the present boom would die within six months. If cost of labor remains the same, some feel the boom will last throughout 1923.

NO CLEW TO ACCARDI SLAYING

A Coroner's verdict of homicide by parties unknown was returned yesterday in the case of Philip Accardi, 28, of 2307 North Market street, who died Wednesday from wounds suffered Tuesday night when he, his two brothers and a relative were fired upon from a doorway as they waited for a street car at Ninth and Biddle streets.

The inquest had been continued to allow the police homicide squad to work on the case. They found no explanation. The three other men wounded are recovering.

Bright shades prevail for the smart Chapeau, with perhaps a predominance of Pacific Green, Raspberry and Wood Brown, while the chic "Poke" model vies for favor with fascinating "Flower" Hats, which are universally becoming.

At this season, too, one would do well to keep the skin at its pinkest perfection, and the aids to beauty found here are efficient and wholly delightful. Novelties and gifts of the different sort, await your choosing, and men will find an answer to an ever-present problem in the slogan "Clothes of Character," exemplified below.

For Walking—Standing—Sitting
Wear Ground Gripper Shoes

Put on a pair of Ground Grippers. What comfort! See that outside "swing" and the straight inside line? Those are called Nature's lines, because they follow the natural lines of the foot.

Feel the gentle support to the arch, firm yet yielding to the flexing muscles? The flexible shank accounts for that.

That little inset in the heel is called the Rotor Heel. It is a miniature shock absorber and pivots the foot correctly when walking.

With Ground Gripper Shoes you will know solid comfort.

U. S. LOST ABOUT $1,800,000,000 IN RAIL OPERATION

Report of Director-General Davis Covers War-Time Period and Aftermath of Settlements.

SCALING DOWN OF CLAIMS REMARKABLE

Up to Dec. 31 Settlement Was Made With Roads Demanding $731,921,814 for Only $171,815,541.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.—Losses sustained by the Government from wartime operation of railroads and its aftermath of earnings, guarantees and damage settlements, will total approximately $1,800,000,000, according to data made available today for the first time in a report by James C. Davis, Director-General of Railroads, transmitted to Congress by President Harding. Not only does the amount come within congressional appropriations already made, but there will also be a return to the Treasury of about $400,000,000 in cash and railroad securities.

Davis' estimates are based on the showing actually made in liquidation of accounts between the Government and corporate owners of 80 per cent of the railroad mileage, which the Government took over. Most of the settlements yet to be made are expected to result in payment by the Government in either cash or securities.

Losses to the Government.

Accounting in connection with the Government operation has gone through three phases, and involves the Interstate Commerce Commission as well as the Railroad Administration. Losses in direct operation of the roads and in the later settlement of capital investment and other claims, as now practically completed by Director-General Davis, are shown to reach a total of $1,250,000,000. To this is added a sum of between $525,000,000 and $600,000,000, which has or will be paid by the commission to short line railroads and to class one carriers. This last amount includes payment under the guarantee given the roads by Congress of earnings during the six months of 1920 just after the Government relinquished the properties.

A remarkable scaling down in claims originally made by the roads against the Government is shown by Davis' report, which marks the beginning of the end of the entire venture. To date, the roads have demanded $952,642,068 on grounds of under-maintenance, damages, loss of inventory, and for other reasons. Up to Dec. 31, final adjustment had been made with corporations which sought $731,921,814 of that total, the Government having paid out a net amount of only $171,815,541. Davis expects the balance of unadjusted claims amounting to $220,720,253, to be closed out by October, without any additional expenditure.

Although much litigation was feared, only one road has so far taken the director general's decision into court, it was added. One factor pointed out by Davis as facilitating the settlements has been the ability of the railroad administration to pay cash to carriers willing to accept an award. Government funds for these operations in part were derived from sale of equipment trust securities amounting to $274,000,000 which were left on the director general's hands after the period of operation but subsequently became desirable to private investors.

Few Law Suits Predicted.

"I believe it may be confidently predicted," Davis' report stated, "that there will be not to exceed a half dozen carriers unable to agree with the Government in arriving at final adjustment. * * * * From the financial showing it is evident that no further appropriations will be required to complete this liquidation in every particular and it may be anticipated with some confidence that after all liabilities of the Government arising out of Federal control have been liquidated, the railroad administration can return to the Treasury in collectable obligations of solvent companies and unexpended appropriations an amount aggregating about $400,000,000."

Maintenance of the railroad organization which has checked the railroad claims and accountings in the settlements cost the Government last year in payroll expenditures, $2,110,000. Davis remarked, "but has resulted in the savings of many hundreds of millions of dollars to the Government."

GERMAN-AMERICAN BODY PUTS BOYCOTT ON FRENCH GOODS

Pronunciamento Also Urges Agitation for Prompt Settlement of France's War Debts.

The Executive Committee of the Missouri Branch, German-American Citizens' League, has issued a pronunciamento to all its members, friends and affiliated societies declaring a nation-wide boycott on all French goods and wares and on all things French, of whatever nature, in reprisal for the French occupation of the Ruhr industrial district of Germany.

It is further demanded that German-Americans and their friends, through their congressional representatives, demand prompt settlement of the French war debt to the United States, without remission or cancellation in any part.

The pronunciamento states that the French occupation is contrary to law, human rights and provisions of the peace treaty, is without precedent in history, and that it is "plainly directed at the lives of German babies."

MISSOURIANS AT CAPITAL ACTIVE IN SOCIETY

Post-Dispatch Bureau.
20 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.—Brecktridge Long of St. Louis, former Under-secretary of State, Missouri had his hands filled as chairman of the men's committee at the Child Welfare Ball. It was the largest ball of the season in Washington and nearly everyone socially prominent was there. Mr. and Mrs. Long were the guests of honor, before the ball, of Mr. and Mrs. William Eric Fowler. Among the other guests were Gen. and Mrs. Merritt Ireland, Miss Anne Squire, Miss Ellen Bruce Lee, Representative Bascom Slemp and Dr. Marinovitch. The party then attended the ball, where Col and Mrs. Fowler and Mr. and Mrs. Long had boxes.

Another Missouri group at the ball was in the box of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Pembroke Thom, who entertained in honor of their debutante niece, Miss Josephine Williford of St. Louis.

Other Missourians noted in the various boxes were Mrs. Frederick Dent Grant, Princess Cantacuzene, Mrs. Wallis Spencer, Mrs. Selden P. Spencer, Mrs. Harry Hawes, Mrs. James A. Reed and Mrs. Joseph Folk.

Mrs. Selden P. Spencer, wife of Senator Spencer, is one of the women in official life who are arranging the drawing room meeting of the Salvation Army which will be held in the residence of Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, wife of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy, on Feb. 9.

Mrs. Coontz to Entertain.

Mrs. Robert E. Coontz, wife of Rear Admiral Coontz, will be at home on Monday afternoon to the officers and families of the navy in Washington at the Wardman Park Hotel. This will be the last time Mrs. Coontz will receive until after Lent.

Washington society has heard with much surprise and a great deal of regret of the transfer of Robert Woods Bliss, Under-secretary of State, from his Washington post to be United States Minister to Sweden, which will deprive the St. Louis colony of two of its leading figures.

Mr. Bliss was born in St. Louis in 1875. His wife was a Miss Mildred Barnes also of St. Louis. Recently the Blisses bought the famous old John C. Calhoun place in Georgetown and have been remodeling it into a French chateau effect. It was to have been one of the show places of the capital. They will leave within a few days for the new post.

Mrs. Grant Gives Dinner.

Mrs. Frederick Dent Grant entertained at dinner on Tuesday night a distinguished company of 18 to meet the Speaker of the House and Mrs. Frederick Gillett. This is the second of a series of formal dinners Mrs. Grant is giving this season to Washington notables.

Mrs. Cleveland A. Newton, wife of Representative Newton of Missouri, who is president of the Missouri State Society, is very ill with an attack of the prevailing grip. She hopes to recover in time, however, to carry out her plans for the reception of the Missouri Society on Feb. 8, which is the big event of the year to the colony here.

CONCORDIA STUDENTS' CHORUS TO GIVE CONCERT WEDNESDAY

Twenty-First Annual Program Will Be Under Baton of Frederick Fischer.

The Concordia Seminary Students' chorus, whose membership of 175 is said to make it the largest male vocal body in the country, will give its twenty-first annual concert Wednesday night at the Odeon, under the baton of Frederick Fischer.

The feature number will be Wagner's "The Holy Supper of the Apostles," which, it is announced, has never before been given in this city. It was an early work, composed in 1843 for the "Maennersaengerfest" in Dresden, of which the young composer had been appointed director. Other selections will include Luther's hymn, "Ein' feste Burg;" "Creation's Hymn," Mord; "Beautiful Savior," a twelfth century song; and "Some Blessed Day," Nevin. The soloist will be Adolf Smukal, violinist.

DR. GRAHAM TO SPEAK IN WEST

Dr. Evarts Graham, professor of surgery in the Washington University School of Medicine, will depart today for San Francisco to address the California Academy of Science on "Some Recent Developments in Thoracic (chest) Surgery."

He will also demonstrate in clinics at Leland-Stanford and California universities, the operation for the relief of abscesses of the chest which he developed during the war when he was a Lieutenant-Colonel in the Medical Corps. These abscesses which followed influenza and measles—pneumonia had an 80 per cent death rate. The operation of Dr. Graham reduced that rate to about 10 per cent.

Taken From Fire With Ladders.

Fire at 9:40 a. m. yesterday on the second floor of a three-story rooming house conducted by Mrs. Lucy Koons, 74 years old, of 1403 South Vandeventer avenue, cut off the egress of Mrs. Koons and one of her roomers, George Kinsey, who were on the third floor. They were carried down ladders by firemen. The fire, the cause of which was not determined, damaged the building about $2000 and furniture about $500.

IGOE TO RESIGN AGAIN FEB. 24 AS COMMITTEE HEAD

Submitted Resignation at Yesterday's Session of Democratic State Body, but Was Induced to Withdraw It.

The resignation of former Congressman William L. Igoe of St. Louis as chairman of the Democratic State Committee, was presented and then withdrawn, during a special meeting of the committee at Hotel Jefferson yesterday.

The committee decided to meet again at Jefferson City Feb. 24. "It is my present intention to resubmit my resignation at that meeting," Igoe said last night. "I do not feel that I can spare the time from my law practice necessary to handle the position as chairman."

Igoe was induced to withdraw his resignation by members of the committee, who declared that they had not learned of his plans to resign until arriving here Friday night or yesterday morning. The special meeting of the committee was called primarily to discuss finances.

Hackworth's Name Suggested.

When it became known that Igoe planned to quit the name of Judge O. W. Hackworth of Piedmont, Wayne County, chairman of the Executive Committee of the State Committee, during the last campaign, was mentioned as a successor.

Opponents of Hackworth were chiefly responsible for the move to induce Igoe to withdraw his resignation. They expect to be able to find an available candidate against Hackworth before Feb. 24.

Hackworth's friends are urging his selection as chairman on the ground that he is entitled to the recognition because of his work during the last campaign. The State Committee will be reorganized before the 1924 campaign.

Igoe was authorized to appoint a committee of seven, including himself and F. C. Newberger, of Joplin, treasurer, to find a way to raise the $26,400 deficit of the committee which has held over from the 1920 campaign, resulting in a Republican landslide.

Several Women Present.

The 1922 campaign was financially a success for the Democratic State Committee, there being a surplus of several hundred dollars when headquarters was closed.

About 30 members of the State Committee and about 10 members of the women's division were present.

There was no talk of the 1924 governorship race, either during the committee session or in the hotel lobby. The committeemen didn't seem interested in that. "Many things can happen in the year before the campaign opens," one committeeman said.

When questioned directly, the committeemen said they have heard that former Gov. Frederick F. Gardner may be a candidate and that Congressman Harry B. Hawes of the Eleventh (St. Louis) District has decided not to run.

Yellow Cabs Replace Columbias.

The Taxicab Trust Estate, operator of Columbia and Yellow taxis, announced yesterday that it had withdrawn the Columbia cabs from regular taxi service and replaced them with Yellow cabs. The Columbia cabs henceforth will be used only on special calls and the identification tags issued to charge-account patrons will be honored by drivers of the Yellow taxis.

Republican Editors to Meet.

The Republican Editorial Association of Missouri will meet Feb. 12 at the Muehlbach Hotel in Kansas City. The Young Republican Association of Missouri will hold its annual meeting there the same day. Members of the associations will be guests at the annual Lincoln day banquet the evening of Feb. 12. An invitation has been sent to President Coolidge to be the principal speaker at the Lincoln [illegible]

Elsie Ferguson, After Seven Years, Returns in "The Wheel of Life"

Also "The Greenwich Village Follies," Vintage of 1921—Ina Claire and Walker Whiteside Next Week.

THE third annual redaction of John Murray Anderson's "Greenwich Village Follies," a series which in the past has been notable, not only for beauty, but for wit and intelligence, begins a week's engagement tonight at the Jefferson. Miss Elsie Ferguson, who has returned to the spoken drama after five years in the movies, and who was last seen here in person at the Olympic, seven years ago, in "The Outcast," opens a week's engagement tomorrow night at the American in James Bernard Fagan's "The Wheel of Life," in which Miss Phyllis Neilson-Terry, niece of Ellen Terry, made her stage debut about a year ago at the Apollo Theater, in London.

Eddie Foy, who seems to have inherited the late Nat Goodwin's title role "the husband of his country," is once more a bridegroom, and is making a honeymoon tour which includes this week at the Orpheum. With six of the Foy progeny, he appears in a skit written by William Jerome and composed by his eldest son, Bryan Foy, who concocted "Mr. Gallagher and Mr. Shean." The Woodward Players, at the Garrick, are undertaking Zona Gale's play "Miss Lulu Bett," and the vaudeville bill at the Empress features Fanny Kitty Watson, popular warblers, and George Price, singing comedian.

The title of Miss Ferguson's play is derived from the Buddhist wheel of life, to which all are bound and from which escape is possible only by conquering the illusions of life. The scene is laid in India. Col. John Dangan adores his young wife, Ruth (Miss Ferguson), but she loves and is loved by Capt. Yeullat. The latter rather than betray his commander's honor, transfers to another regiment.

Besieged in Monastery.

AFTER two years, Ruth's burning desire to see him drives her with a touring party into the frontier post, further than is safe. They are attacked, and it is Capt. Yeullat who comes to the rescue. The little party is besieged in a Buddhist monastery. Word comes that a relief force has been cut to pieces, and the lovers, in the face of imminent death, confess their passion.

The relief force arrives—it turns out that only the advance guard has been cut—and Col. Dangan is the first to reach the monastery. Ruth refuses to tell him what has happened, but cannot, in the face of his love and trust. She makes an unexpected decision which brings the play to its close.

This drama comes to St. Louis from the Blackstone Theater in Chicago. In Miss Ferguson's support will be seen Frederick Worlock, C. Haviland, J. Fisher White, Irby Marshall, George Thorpe, Eric Cowley and others.

The novelty in the 1921 "Greenwich Village Follies" is the De Lipp transformation scene, invented by a young Russian officer. The episode is called "When Dreams Come True." A ballroom is shown; then, without raising or lowering a curtain, by a mere switching of lights, the scene is changed into a moonlit garden. The device is based on the fact that some colors do not register under certain lights.

Ted Lewis, with an enlarged band, heads the cast with his jazz symphonic tonal pranks. Joe E. Brown, who sets the pace for the funsters, Kathleen O'Hanlon and Ted Lewis, and Eva Puck and Sammy White, head the dancers. Others in the cast, which includes a chorus of 30 "artists' models," are Bird Millman, Molly Dodd, John Mahan, Valodia Vestoff, Marie Holly, Roy Purviance, Reed Hamilton, Maren Berdine, Nancy Larned, Basil Smith, Albert Deano and Billy Westin.

Visitors Who Are Imminent.

NEXT Sunday evening Miss Ina Claire will appear at the American in "The Awful Truth," a new comedy by Arthur Richman, author of "Not So Long Ago," and simultaneously Walker Whiteside will arrive at the Jefferson in "The Hindu," his latest play of the Orient.

The Erlanger policy of linking St. Louis and Chicago in the routing of shows brings the announcement that "The Gold Diggers" will play here during the week of Feb. 18, and will be followed by Wallace Eddinger and Mary Nash in "Captain Applejack." George White's "Scandals" is

What They Are Doing in the Movie Studios

According to present plans, Paramount's reproduction of "The Cheat" will be started Jan. 29 as a George Fitzmaurice production, starring Pola Negri, with Jack Holt featured and Charles de Roche in support. This work was originally produced by Cecil B. de Mille in 1915, and was very successful. The new adaptation from Hector Turnbull's story is by Ouida Bergere.

Agnes Ayres has started work in her next picture, "Contraband." It is from a magazine story by Clarence Buddington Kelland.

John Colton, author of "Rain," one of the outstanding dramatic successes of the season on Broadway, has been engaged to write the scenario for "The Exciters," a Paramount picture to be put into production soon at the Long Island studio. Bebe Daniels and Antonio Moreno will be co-starred.

Now that Johnny Hines has finished his latest melocomedy "Luck," his vacation to the Bahamas and to points in South America seems very imminent. "Luck," however, takes Johnny longer in editing and titling than was expected, so Johnny still lingers. While vacationing Johnny will also pick up various and sundry

"Peer Gynt" Opens Monday Night in Gotham

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.

THE long-heralded production of Ibsen's "Peer Gynt" is announced by the Theater Guild for Monday night, at the Garrick Theater. Joseph Schildkraut will have the title role, and the direction is in charge of Theodore Kommissarzhevsky. In the cast will be Louise Closser Hale, Dudley Digges, Helen Westley, Helena Royle, Bertha Broad, Edward G. Robinson, Stanley Howett, Charles Hanlon and others. Grieg's incidental music will be introduced.

The Moscow Art Theater returns this week to the work with which it made its American debut a month ago—Count Alexis Tolstoi's "Tsar Fyodor," with Ivan Moskvin and Vassily Katchaloff alternating in the title role.

"Mary the 3rd," a new play by Rachel Crothers, and "Sun Showers," a musical comedy by Harry Delf, will make their bows Monday night at the Thirty-ninth Street and Astor Theaters. In the cast of the former are Louise Huff, May Galyer, Beatrice Terry and others; the princi-

Jackie Coogan's "Oliver Twist" Is Film Feature

Bebe Daniels in "The World's Applause," Arliss in "The Ruling Passion," "Face on the Barroom Floor" and "The Ghost Patrol" also Showing.

The screen version of Dickens' great novel, "Oliver Twist," with Jackie Coogan in the leading role, is the attraction for the week at the Grand Central and Capitol theaters and for the first half of the week at the West End Lyric.

Critics who have seen this picture in the East have said that in it the remarkable boy actor does the best work of his brilliant career. It is said to have won him a contract as the highest-paid moving picture actor in the world.

In its film treatment the story is said to follow closely the narrative portions of Dickens' great book. The plot, as is universally known, turns about the experiences and adventures of a waif who falls into the hands of thieves who try to train him in burglary and pocket picking. Lon Chaney has the role of Fagin, leader of the gang, and other screen actors of note are in the cast.

The Missouri has a double feature program for the week. The leading picture attraction is "The World's Applause," with Bebe Daniels and Lewis Stone in the leading parts. Miss Daniels is said to fairly outdo herself in the displaying of odd and elaborate gowns in portraying the role of a successful actress who has reached the top of her profession by the press agent route. Stone has the role of a theatrical producer. In the cast also are Kathlyn Williams and Adolphe Menjou.

The other feature at the Missouri is a stage offering by Alexander Oumansky and the New York Capitol Theater ballet corps, which will dance to the music of Tschaikowsky's "Nutcracker Suite." The principals are Oumansky, Dorothy Burtova, Doris Niles and Thalia Zanbu and four other dancers are in the ensemble. A comedy picture feature will be Will Rogers in "The Ropin' Fool," in which the cowboy actor and humorist does about everything that can be done with a piece rope.

The Liberty Theater's feature picture is "The Face on the Barroom Floor," with Ruth Clifford and Henry B. Walthall in the leading roles. Walthall has the role of a famous artist who takes to drink after an unfortunate love affair. The main theme is regeneration and the film shows in a melodramatic way how the artist rehabilitates himself and is brought back to sanity and happiness by the woman he loves. A realistic storm scene is said to be a thrilling feature. On the bill also are a Sunshine comedy and a revival of Charlie Chaplin's famous laugh getter, "The Bank."

"The Ghost Patrol," a seven-reel Universal special production, written by Sinclair Lewis, author of "Main Street," is the feature attractive at the Rivoli Theater. It has a cast of prominent players, including Ralph Graves, Bessie Love, George Nicholson, Max Davidson, Melbourne McDowell, George Cooper, John Crasar, Belle Stoddard Johnson, Gordon Sackville, Lydia Titus, Wade Boteler, Dan Crimmins and Danny Foy.

The story concerns a veteran policeman, devoted to duty and the people on his tenement beat for 30 years, who is retired. The tragedy of the old man's broken heart is lightened by the sunshine of youthful love.

The week's leading picture at the Delmonte is "The Ruling Passion," featuring George Arliss and Doris Kenyon. The story describes the motives and aims in life of a manufacturer who refuses to quit active work when age steals on. His desire to help young men in their upward struggles causes him to turn to manual toil. This gives Arliss a chance to appear in two roles. By day he is an automobile mechanic in a small garage. At night he is a retired millionaire, living up to the requirements of his station in life.

An added feature at the Delmonte is the stage appearance of Ethel Gilmore and her dancing girls.

The love pirate has turned forger—in Norma Talmadge's present production, "Within the Law," a forthcoming First National attraction. And Lew Cody, prominent in her supporting cast, is the man who does it.

Ruth Clifford and Henry B. Walthall, in "The Face on the Barroom Floor"—Liberty.

BEAUTIFUL HAIR IN A MOMENT!
Girls! Try This! Hair Instantly Appears Abundant, Soft, Lustrous and Colorful—A Luxuriant, Gleamy Mass!
35 Cent "Danderine" Also Ends Dandruff; Falling Hair!

Immediately!—your hair becomes beautiful. Just moisten a cloth with Danderine and draw it carefully through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; this will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt or any excessive oil—in a few minutes you will be amazed. Your hair will be wavy, fluffy and possess an incomparable softness, lustre and really appear twice as thick and abundant—a mass of luxuriant, glinty, colorful hair.
Besides beautifying the hair, Danderine eradicates dandruff; invigorates the scalp, stopping itching and falling hair.
Danderine is the best, cheapest and most delightful hair corrective and tonic. It is to the hair what fresh showers of rain are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, vitalizes and strengthens them. Its stimulating properties help the hair to grow long, heavy, strong.
You can surely have beautiful hair, and lots of it, if you will spend 35 cents for a bottle of Danderine at any drug store or toilet counter. It is not greasy, oily or sticky.

Will Rogers the Cowboy Humorist Says

By Will Rogers.
(Copyright, 1923, by the McNaught Syndicate, Inc.)

WELL, readers, as this heavy editorial goes to Press there is quite a bit of news in the Papers.
America has always wanted an adequate Coast Defense, something that would really protect our shores. Well, at last we have it; 12 miles off our eastern shore is a Flotilla of ships which we never hoped three years ago to be able to produce. And, mind, you, all this is done without a ship Subsidy. I tell you it is with a great feeling of security that we here in New York can go to sleep at night knowing that just a mere 12 miles away we are being guarded and protected by the entire Merchant Marine of the World.
They are so thick that an Ocean liner going to Europe has to give two days' notice so they can open up and make a path to let it by.
They have the Ships laid out in Streets, and named according to the Product sold.
Scotch Avenue is really the elite—it's teh Fifth Av. of the Atlantic. Rye Street is more solid and Conservative. Gin Alley is really the Broadway of the foam. It's the night life. To get your Motor Boat parked on that Alley you have to reserve space days in advanec.
It's worked on the same principle as the Cafes on land are worked. On land you go in and drink till you get full or broke, whichever happens first; then you get out. Well, out there you tie up your launch beside one of the more Popular Wholesaling places and buy till your launch is full or you are broke, same as on land.
If you are a kind of adventurous or Artistic Nature they have a miniature Greenwich Village where Wood Alcohol is sold exclusively. It is put in copper-lined containers where it is kept till brought ashore and poured into the prospective Corpse.

Form Their Own Island.

There has been some talk of hauling dirt and making an Island, but they figured that there was enough stuff consumed on the premises so that the empty Bottles would eventually form their own Island.
At the rate it's growing at out there, in two years it will be the biggest wholesaling District in the World. But why shouldn't it? You often hear it said that Bootlegging is the biggest Industry.
Well, that is not quite correct, but Prohibition is the Biggest—that is, taking both sides, money spent for and against it, not only the Bootlegging and enforcement end of it, but when you speak of an Industry you must consider the By Products. For instance, there's the Doctors, the Undertakers, and the Coroners. The Increase in Doctors' Prescription Paper will reach an astounding sum.
FIGURE up the time consumed by the U. S. Senate and Congress and different State Legislatures. Figure it up at their wages and you will see what a big By Product just speaking about it has been.
If all the time had been used in this Country on study that has been used up arguing Prohibition we would be the smartest Nation in the world. Don't say we are already, 'cause China is. They never had a shipping Board, and they never had a Dollar a Year Man in a war.
Also, as I go to Press today, Mr. Anderson of The Anti Saloon League of New York is in Court trying to explain where some of this By Product Dough went to. It seems that mere Money has entered into the realm of what was thought to be a work of Love. It seems that the Fellowman's interest was to be protected, but at so much a fellow.

Dr. Grant on Front Page Again.

DR. PERCY GRANT has made the front page again. Everything, even in religion, seems to have a trend to the Liberal nowadays. Congress wanted a short time ago to rewrite the Constitution. Now Dr. Grant wants to go over the Bible and kinder brighten it up in spots where it appears to him to drag a little. A Liberal is a man who wants to use his own Ideas on things in preference to Generations who, he knows, Know more than he does.
Well, Mr. Harvey went back to England to start Embarrassing again.
Some talk of Mr. Hughes resigning a short time ago. I don't know, but I think that Greece shooting their Cabinet caused a kinder uneasy feeling among the Cabinet Workers all over the World.
Mr. Harding has had quite a little sick spell lately from which he is recovering. I sorter think it's these Doctors these Presidents have. They are promoted from a Horse and Buggy trade in the Country to an Admiral in the U. S. Navy, or a Major-General in the U. S. Army so quickly that I really believe they have to give so much time trying to learn to salute and to getting their Uniforms on proper side forward that they haven't really the time to devote to our President's health.
So, with our next President, I hereby start a movement to let his Doctor keep his bagged-kneed breeches and his ole slouch hat, and I bet you that, without the welfare of the Army or Navy on his hands, it won't give him a thing to think about but just what he has always thought about.

The Wrong Benefit.

I WAS called on to speak last night at the 30th Anniversary of the Empire Theater, Mr. Frohman's Theater. I don't know why I should have been there; I had never played in the place. I suppose I had really contributed more to its success by not playing there. We had Mr. Belasco and he is as good an audience as he is a producer. The Barrymores and everybody of note in the Theater were there, and a lot of Critics. I was as much in the dark as to why a Critic should be at a Theater Celebration as I was over being there myself. Their contribution to the success of most Theaters is in about the same Ratio that a fly would be.
I had played in this Theater one night at a Charity Benefit by Mistake. I was booked to play an Irish Benefit and came from Philadelphia to play it. I had forgotten what Theater it was and it was near one that was having a Sunday night benefit for some Hebrew Orphan Asylum.
Now I go in the wrong one, and ask to go on right away so they put me right on. It was when Ireland had just gotten their Home Rule and was in doubt as to what to do with it. So I had prepared a bunch of Irish Gags.
I started in on all my Irish stuff, about Move England away from Ireland to prevent wars, but when you moved them don't let Ireland know where you were taking them or they (Ireland) would follow them and get 'em. But nobody seemed interested in Ireland, so I said, after a few looks, this Audience ain't Irish and it dawned on me that I was in the wrong place.
Mind you, I would have played this, too, if I had been asked as I had just as many jokes on America trying to get their freedom from the Jews and a lot of good-natured kidding with them. So I switched my stuff and got off and never let them know that I knew I was in wrong.
You see, I was in doubt. I thought, well, maybe these Irish are smart enough to give this Benefit and sell all the Seats to the Jews, and it might really be the right one after all. Well, it supplied me with an act down at the right one anyway, so you see the only time I was ever able to get into the Aristocratic old Empire Theater where Miss Maude Adams reigned for years was by accident.

IF SKIN BREAKS OUT AND ITCHES APPLY SULPHUR
Just the moment you apply Mentho-Sulphur to an itching, burning or broken out skin, the itching stops and healing begins, says a noted skin specialist. This sulphur preparation, made into a pleasant cold cream, gives such a quick relief, even to fiery eczema, that nothing has ever been found to take its place.
Because of its germ destroying properties, it quickly subdues the itching, cools the irritation and heals the eczema right up, leaving a clear, smooth skin in place of ugly eruptions, rash, pimples or roughness.
You do not have to wait for improvement. It quickly shows. You can get a little jar of Bowles Mentho-Sulphur at any drug store.

ELSIE FERGUSON, AFTER SEVEN YEARS, RETURNS IN "THE WHEEL OF LIFE"

listed for the week of March 4, prior to entering Chicago. Other productions promised at this playhouse are "Thank U," for March 11, and Otis Skinner in a return engagement of "Mister Antonio."

The Foy skit at the Orpheum is entitled "1923 Foy Fun Frolic," and the present season is said to mark Eddie Foy's fiftieth year on the stage. The well-known team of John Hyams and Leila McIntyre appear in an act called "Honeysuckle," together with their daughter, Leila Hyams, who is making her professional debut this season. Others on the bill include "Doc" Baker, in "Flashes," a lightning-change turn in which he is assisted by Polly Walker and Bud and Jack Pearson; Chick Yorke and Rose King, in a comedy resuscitating the ancient tin-type; Frank Fisher and Eldrie Gilmore, in a burlesque, "Her Bashful Romeo;" Harry Smith and Jack Strong, singers, and Bessie Clifford in "Art Impressions." At the end all the entertainers on the bill will unite in an ensemble "Carnival of Fun."

"Miss Lulu Bett" at Garrick.

THIS Pulitzer prize play, which was presented in December 1921, at the Jefferson Theater, depicts a middle-class American home with its ogre, in the shape of a dentist, and its kitchen drudge, in the form of his spinster sister-in-law. It also includes a caustic old grandmother and, in the part of Monona Gale, the world's most disagreeable child. This role will be played by Marian Schilling, 12-year-old daughter of Edward Schilling, a member of the Woodward Players, this being her first appearance on the stage in St. Louis. Miss Hazel Whitmore takes the title role.

In addition to those already named, the vaudeville program at the Empress will present De Haven and Nice and Joe Towle, well-known entertainers; Chapelle and Stinette, and "The Five Kings of Syncopation."

The Columbia's bill for the first half of the week is headed by a dance travelogue, "Around the Map," displaying steps characteristic of New Orleans, San Francisco and New York. In the skit appear Charles Manning, Harry Young, Louise Vernon and the Three Barstows. The feature picture is "Grey Dawn." Beginning Thursday, the featured performers will be the Four Roeders, athletes, and the picture will be "The Truxton King," with John Gilbert. The bill at the Grand is led by the Sternad troupe of midgets. Miss Lina Weingaertner will have a benefit tonight at the Eagle Auditorium, where she will have the title role in the German Theater Stock Company's production of "Marie, the Daughter of the Regiment," by Nicolai. George Buddeus will direct and Felix Marx will stage the operetta. The Rialto's schedule is headed by Margaret Young, singer, and Leon and his troupe, in a magic turn.

WHAT THEY ARE DOING IN THE MOVIE STUDIOS

Items of information and interest which he will use in his next picture for Mastodon Films, Inc.

"The Rustle of Silk," Herbert Brenon's first production for Paramount, in which Betty Compson and Conway Tearle will be featured, has been started at the Lasky studio. It was adapted from Cosmo Hamilton's novel by Sada Cowan and Ouida Bergere.

Russell Griffin, who barely tips the age of 5 and who is already under a long term contract to C. C. Burr, New York film magnate, will soon be starred in a series of short films depicting the world's most famous fairy tales. Russell has just finished a picture called "You Are Guilty," in which he co-stars with James Kirkwood and Doris Kenyon.

Charlie Murray has just completed a burlesque on Shakspeare's "Hamlet." The popularity of Barrymore's "Hamlet" on Broadway is the cause. It will set audiences tittering and guffawing from coast to coast and back again. The production is artistic and colorful. The exterior scenes were taken among the old Spanish ruins of St. Augustine, Fla.

"Oh Ye Fools" is the name of the story which Edgar Lewis has written and will direct for Mastodon Films, Inc., of New York. It is an ironic treatment of life in the years since the end of the Great War.

Violet Mersereau, the dainty little actress, who was lost to the screen for a short while, is back again as Johnny Hines' leading woman in Johnny's latest melocomedy "Luck," which will appear in these parts soon.

Eugene Sue's masterpiece, "Mysteries of Paris," has been brought to visual life by Mastodon Films, Inc., of New York by its production of "Secrets of Paris." The cast has such notable names as Lew Cody, Gladys Hulette, Rose Coghlan, William Collier Jr. and a host of others equally well known.

Milton Sills and Carmel Myers will soon be seen in "The Last Hour," which these two players have just finished for C. C. Burr, president of Mastodon Films, Inc., of New York. "The Last Hour" is from a story by Frank R. Adams, which ran serially in Munsey's Magazine some time ago under the title of "Blind Justice." "The Last Hour" was directed by Edward Sloman.

James Cruze has decided that the Navajos are as temperamental as opera singers. Freshly cut poles provided for their tepees when they arrived at the big camp in Southern Utah to make scenes in "The Covered Wagon" got them all out of sorts. They grumbled and made things generally disagreeable until fully seasonade poles had been supplied.

Cecil B. de Mille is not convinced that the art of color photography has reached a stage of development where it is possible to make an entire production in colors without detracting from the interest of the story, but he is experimenting with it. In his latest work, "Adam's Rib," he introduces some fascinating effects during a ballroom scene by having the dancers carry Japanese lanterns illuminated in colors which move about rhythmically and cast reflections on the faces of the dancers.

GAYETY THEATER ALL THIS WEEK SLIDING BILLY WATSON

Don't Know What a Good Show Looks Like Till You See the Gayety Show!

A Theater to Play With in Prague for Capeks

LONDON, Jan. 15.

MAY the Czechs forgive me, says Velona Pilcher in the Telegraph, for writing about their theaters when I spent only two weeks visiting them. Moreover, I do not understand a single word of their language. Nor do I intend to learn it, being advised not to do so by no less a gentleman than the Adviser to the Municipal Theater, who said there were sounds in it that only Czechs and horses could make.

There are three principal Czech theaters in Prague, two subsidized by the nation and one by the municipality; and, of course, there are many smaller, newer Czech theaters, and several old German-speaking ones. At the Municipal Theater, Vinohrady Divadlo, I saw four plays: "Othello," "Tartuffe," "Boris Godunov," and "The Cenci." Consider these four productions, "Othello" was produced by Kvapil, director of the Municipal Theater, and probably the most experienced of the Prague producers. He works in a style classic, cool, quite unlike the grotesquerie and fantasy for which the productions at the National Theater are famous.

His Moor was suave as silk. It was all done on or about a low platform far back stage, and framed with two columns topped with statues, so that the scenes passed before one just as one passes before a series of Venetial paintings in soem ancient art gallery. This Othello was emphatically the Moor of Venice. I had never really thought much about the Venetian part of it before. Not that there was any city or any canal; but there were gorgeous costumes, flashing colors, partly and carefully lighted, and pictures—always pictures.

Simple Stage Pictures.

THESE were usually made by lighting the dark stage with a single lantern or candelabra or chandeller or torch. In the Senate scene, for example, a long wrought-brass bar, carrying 10 candles, hung above the red-robed Senators. That was all. What more was needed? And once a dark street was nothing but a black stage, with a solitary thin green light hung low in space.

"Tartuffe," done by another member of the producing staff, was another matter entirely. This time the stairs took the stage, and they took it completely, leaving only a strip of floor below that was seldom used, and a platform at top that was much used. Stairs are good fun in comedy, when everyone moves precisely, everything is done preciously, and the story is acted broadly, stiffly, artificially. The ladies posed on the stairs; Tartuffe and Orgon, dressed alike and as round as barrels, squatted on them; Dorine thumped up and down them, but all this was done with an elegant air of conventionality and courtesy.

Then there was Pushkin's "Boris Godunov," done by a Russian guest-producer, and done in the brilliant, exciting Russian manner that, whatever it may be, is never dull. Not stairs, curtains, screens, or columns were used, only old-fashioned painted sets and footlights. But the sets were small rooms, with very low ceilings and doors, or close corners of the city, gorgeous with gold and crimson and green.

Everything was so close, and the brilliance so concentrated, that once, when a man in a green robe, with large white circles, bent double as he crept into a gold and crimson room, the shock of the crashing colors was overwhelming.

"The Cenci" in Cubes.

AND then there was "The Cenci." Splendid? Yes. Absurd? Yes. The Brothers Capek put the Cenci in cubes! These brothers who, by the way, pronounce their name with the "C" soft as in Cenci, are the authors of "The Insect Play;" while one of them, Karel, wrote "R. U. R." Both of these pieces are now running in New York. Karel's first work as producer was "The Cenci," and his brother, Josef Capek, who, among other things, is a Cubist painter, designed this production. I catalogue all thees details because I believe that the Brothers Capek represent rather well the peculiar working characteristics of Western Slava, who suddenly found themselves at the end of the war, in possession of a brand-new republic all their own, and a theater to play with at their pleasure.

Energetic, enthusiastic, not in the least afraid of making themselves ridiculous, eager to avoid anything conventional, full of ideas, empty of traditions, ready to try anything, never ready to stop, proud of themselves as a post-war generation, ashamed of themselves if they fail to express post-war ecstasies and agonies, and never afraid or ashamed to experiment, they emphatically are.

Moreover, because during the years of the Austrian oppression plays were, until very recent times, practically forbidden, in the Bohemian language, there really is little or no theater tradition. New experiments cannot shock old experts. In fact, the only thoroughly ordinary, unimaginative producing that I saw in Prague was in a puppet show! It seems that the Austrians were not afraid of the puppeteers, so they allowed them to perform old Czech plays in old-established ways, and today a Czech puppet-show is like any old pantomime paraphernalia. But a Czech play-production is like nothing else on earth.

Acting, Is Mediocre.

SO the Capeks put the Cenci in cubes. Three porphyry pillars built up of cubes, a large one between two small ones, and curtains gashed with shafts of light to pass through, and the floor spotted with pools of

Sonora Plays The Best Record Better

THE most famous motor cars are not produced by the tire manufacturers, the greatest of player-pianos are not all made by the producers of rolls. Nor is the "Highest Class Talking Machine in the World" a product of the record industry.

With no division of effort, with the whole force of a great organization devoted single-mindedly to making the Sonora alone, a great phonograph was inevitable.

This policy has made Sonora so high an achievement in phonograph construction that it plays perfectly ALL MAKES of records and was the first phonograph to do so. Actual comparisons demonstrate that records give BETTER results when played on the Sonora.

The Baby Grand model especially is recommended to critical buyers. Embodying the finest quality of Sonora tone with the exclusive Sonora bulge lines, this perennially popular model has survived all changes of phonograph design. Apparently it always will be in vogue.

light to stand in—these were the principal devices used. And when they were used, austerely and with dignity, no one could wish for a finer patterning of Shelley's strange and calamitous beauty.

But there are all sorts of new lighting tricks. Glocomo's light, for instance, went off one color and came on another. When Beatrice sang, the walls of her prison faded away. As she tied up Lucretia's hair for the last time. . . . But I can't tell on them any more, really. It isn't fair. They were only experimenting in public. It's a habit that makes mistakes. But it also makes masterpieces—and this is not too strong a word for "From the Life of Insects."

Not one of these productions at the Municipal Theater—least of all "The Cenci"—was mediocre. But all the acting was. That is, of course, as I saw it stand out, stripped of everything but movement and sound, in the raised design that I was watching. Moveover, the better the producing the worse the acting, and the reason is, that while the one is developing a new technique, characterized by much abstraction and economy, the other is still using an old technique of realism and detail.

"PEER GYNT" TO OPEN MONDAY NIGHT IN NEW YORK

pals in the latter include Allyn King, Douglas Stevenson and Harriet Lee.

"Wild Flower," a musical comedy featuring Edith Day, is due at the Casino Wednesday evening. Otto Harbach, Oscar Hammerstein II, Herbert Stothart and Vincent Youmans wrote it. On Saturday evening "Icebound," a play by Owen Davis, which had the distinction of being accepted by three producers in one afternoon, will go on at the Sam H. Harris Theater. In the cast are Robert Ames, Phyllis Povah, John Westley and Eva Condon.

Chicago Gets "Insect Comedy."

CHICAGO will be the next to see "The World We Live In," which closed its engagement at the Forty-fourth Street Theater this week . . . Holbrook Blinn will go back to acting in "The Bad Man" next week in San Francisco. He plans a season of eight weeks there, during which he will present two new plays, one of them an English comedy, called "The Impostor." . . . Will Rogers made his first throw at female impersonation this week in a new sketch added to the "Follies." He has the part of "Koo-Koo Nell" in a small musical piece laid at a lonely railorad station in Arizona. Nell is a breezy child of nature and the desert.

Ruth Urban has been selected over 250 contestants for prima donna of Raymond Hitchcock's next edition of "Hitchy Koo." . . . The original company of "The Bat" will disband Feb. 17, in Boston, after playing together continuously for three years. The players comprise Effie Ellsler, May Vokes, John Marston, Robert Vaughn, Charles Coleman, Anne Morrison, Joseph Sellman and Richard Barrows.

It is definitely announced that the Moscow Art Theater, at the close of its eight weeks in New York, will play a fortnight's engagement at the Opera House in Boston. The company will produce "Tzar Fyodor," "The Lower Depths," and possibly "The Cherry Orchard" and "The Three Sisters."

Reviving "The Bride Elect."

OVER in Philadelphia, John Philip Sousa is reviving his operetta, "The Bride Elect," which he has completely revised and enlarged by the introduction of new song and orchestral numbers. The opening will occur next Tuesday evening at the Academy of Music, with the composer conducting, and with one of his doscoveries, a Philadelphia girl named Ethel Porter Brooks, as prima donna.

Ethel Barrymore will make her first appearance in Sutro's "The Laughing Lady" next week at the Hanna Theater in Cleveland, and will come to the Longacre Theater here on Feb. 13. In the supporting cast are Violet Kemble Cooper, Cynthia Brooks, Olive John, Eva Leonard-Boyne, Cyril Kneightly, McKay Morris, Kenneth Hunter, Harry Plimmer and Walter Howe.

Does Fine Flour Cause Appendicitis?

People Ate More Coarse Flour Years Ago—Less Appendicitis Then

Where there is already constipation and intestinal inflammation, the eating of bread or biscuits made from extremely fine wheat flour might possibly tend to cause further trouble, especially when the bread or biscuits are eaten freshly baked. When the flour reaches the stomach and intestines it is more likely to pack into a solid, pasty mass, than would the coarse whole wheat flour used by our ancestors.

A Treacherous Disease.

Appendicitis attacks at any moment even persons seemingly in good health. Usually, however, it is preceded by so-called stomach trouble, constipation or similar disturbance. Often when there is a warning feeling of uneasiness in the abdomen, appendicitis can be guarded against in exactly the same manner in which one guards against the spread of throat infection, because that is just what appendicitis is—an infection in the intestines spreading to the appendix. When one has sore throat, one can often prevent further trouble and the development of influenza, or grippe, by using an antiseptic wash or gargle to fight the germs, and a laxative to carry off the poisons from the body. Just exactly the same procedure is necessary to fight the intestinal germs and guard against appendicitis. But instead of an antiseptic wash for the throat, an INTESTINAL antiseptic is necessary.

Intestinal Antiseptic.

There is now offered to the public a preparation having the DOUBLE action of an intestinal antiseptic and a COMPLETE system cleanser. This preparation, known as Adlerika, acts as follows:

It tends to eliminate or destroy harmful germs and colon bacilli in the intestinal canal, thus guarding against appendicitis and other diseases having their start here.

It is the most complete system cleanser ever offered to the public, as BOTH upper and lower bowel are thoroughly flushed, removing foul matter which poisons the system for months and which nothing else can dislodge. It brings out gases, thus immediately relieving pressure on the heart. It is astonishing the great amount of poisonous matter Adlerika draws from the alimentary canal—matter you never thought was in your system. Try it right after your next bowel movement and notice how quickly and surely foul matter it brings out which has been poisoning you. In short Adlerika relieves occasional constipation, sour stomach, gas on the stomach and sick headache in one spoonful. Adlerika ALWAYS gives relief. A longer treatment may be necessary in cases of obstinate constipation and long standing stomach trouble, preferably under direction of your physician.

Reports From Physicians.

"I congratulate you on the good results I had from Adlerika since I commenced to use it." (Signed) Dr. L. Langston.

"I have found nothing in my 20 years' practice to excel Adlerika." (Signed) Dr. James Weaver.

"I use Adlerika in all cases. Some require only one dose." Dr. F. M. Prettyman.

"After taking Adlerika for more than for 20 years. Haven't words to express the AWFUL IMPURITIES it eliminated from my system." (Signed) E. Puckett.

Adlerika is a constant surprise to people who have used only ordinary laxative and stomach medicines, on account of its rapid, pleasant and COMPLETE action.

Glands Used to Restore Hair Growth

Science of Gland Therapy Relieves Baldness—New Treatment Restoring Health and Growth.

Baldness in both men and women is now generally ascribed by scientists to defective functioning of endocrine glands. Hair growth is dependent upon the secretions of these glands—these secretions making possible the assimilation of those elements in the blood which are vital to a luxurious growth of hair.

Now it is possible for any bald person to have a full, luxuriant growth of hair through the discovery of E. R. Alexander, nationally known scientist. Dr. Alexander, through the concentration of glands, can supply the deficiency of gland secretion and produce a full growth of hair.

This discovery may be easily used in the privacy of your own home. Within a few weeks you will notice new, vigorous hair beginning to come in and with this growth you can gradually restore your hair to its former bright, healthy color.

It is confident is Dr. Alexander that you can be relieved of the embarrassment of baldness and regain the normal hair growth by this method that he offers to send a regular $4 treatment for only $2 to anyone who will write for it. Use it according to directions, and if at the end of a month you do not find your hair returning with all its former vigor, the treatment does not cost a cent.

SEND NO MONEY—just your name and address to Alexander Laboratories, 476 Gateway Station, Kansas City, Mo., and this treatment will be mailed at once in plain wrapper. Try it according to directions and if at the end of a month you are not more than satisfied with results, your money will be refunded at once. A $1 Kansas City bank guarantees that Dr. Alexander is reliable and holds $1000 cash as a guarantee to return your money if he fails.

Don't suffer the embarrassment of baldness—give the treatment a trial on this liberal offer.

THE EASIEST WAY TO END DANDRUFF

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

"Your very life," says Dr. Carey, "depends upon the perfect functioning and health of your kidneys, so whatever you do, don't neglect them."

Dr. Carey's famous Prescription No. 777 (known for years as Marshrool) is not recommended for everything, but we cannot too strongly urge its use if you suffer from annoying bladder troubles, bloating, irritability, with loss of flesh, or any other tendency to Bright's Disease, Diabetes or Gravel, for kidney disease in its worst form may be stealing upon you.

Don't wait until tomorrow to begin the use of this wonderful prescription now obtainable in both liquid and tablet form. ST. LOUIS SOPRANO WHO SINGS AT TODAY'S "POP"

ALMA MENZE...

Symphony Will Depict Humor in Music

OWING to an accident to Concertmaster Gusikoff, who fell on the ice some days ago and suffered a broken rib, he will be unable to appear as soloist this week with the Symphony Orchestra, as had been planned. Gusikoff's tumble smashed his violin box, but left his $10,000 "Strad" undamaged.

The program for Friday afternoon and Saturday evening will have no soloist. Mr. Ganz has chosen Tschaikowsky's "Manfred" symphony for the first half of the concert. Afterwards will come a premiere performance of a "Festival Overture," by Edward Collins of Chicago, who will be present, and who will be piano soloist at next Sunday's popular concert. The program will close with two examples of humor in music—Saint-Saens' "Carnival of Animals" and John Alden Carpenter's "Krazy Kat," both to be played here for the first time.

Miss Alma Menze, St. Louis soprano, will be the soloist at this afternoon's popular concert at the Odeon, singing "Pace, Pace, mio Dio," from "La Forza del Destino," and two songs. The feature of the program will be a performance of a suite for children, "A Woodland Story," by Ellis Levy, assistant concertmaster of the orchestra. It has five episodes: "The Hunter," "The Deer," "The Chase," "Through the Forest" and "Homeward Bound.' Other orchestral numbers will be Halversen's Triumphal Entrance of the Boyars," the overture to Weber's "Der Freischuetz," Scharwenka's "Polish National Dance," and Van der Stucken's march "Louisiana," which was the official march of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, held in St. Louis during 1904. The composer is expected to attend the concert.

Graveure Tuesday Night.

The Apollo Club, on Tuesday night at the Odeon, will present as soloist Louis Graveure, baritone one of the most artistic singers on the public platform. His program consists of the following numbers:

"Largo," Handel; "Look Into Mine Eye," Hungarian folksong; "Elegie, Massenet; "Parasha's Revery," Moussorgsky; "Nocturne," Franck; "J'ai dit aux etoiles," Paladihle; "Le Vague et la Cloche," Duparc; "Mai," Saint-Saens; "O, Lovely Night," Roland; "The Bird's Courting Song," Clutsam; and "Five-and-Twenty Sailormen," Coleridge Taylor.

The male chorus, directed by Charles Galloway, will offer Kipling's "Hymn Before Action," with a setting by Davis; Mentor Crosse's "Negro Death Song," with incidental solo by Waldo E. Finke; Cecil Forsythe's "To America," with Mr. Galloway at the piano; Chadwick's "The Jabberwocky," and Nevin's setting of "Ring Out, Wild Bells."

Fritz Kreisler Thursday.

THE single concert to be given in St. Louis this season by the eminent violinist, Fritz Kreisler, will take place Thursday night at the Odeon. He has just returned from a European tour, and will spend only three months in this country. His principal offerings will be Grieg's Sonata in C Minor and Bruch's Concerto No. 1, in G Minor. In addition, there will be the usual small pieces, some of them new to his programs. Three are transcriptions by Kreisler himself—"Farewell to Cuchullan," a Londonderry air; and two sketches from Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Scheherazade." These are entitled "Chanson Arabe" and "Danse Orientale." Other numbers listed are Cyril Scott's "Lotus Land" and Kreisler's serenade, "Polichinelle."

The program for H. Max Steindel's violoncello recital, a week from tomorrow night, at the Sheldon Auditorium, will include Brahms' sonata in E Minor, Op. 38; an Andante by Tartini, and two bourrees, Nos. 1 and 2, by Bach; the Adagio from Schumann's violoncello concerto, Op. 129; Tschaikowsky's "Variations on a Rococo Theme," and three Popper

MOSCOW OPERA SOPRANO, TO SING HERE THIS WEEK

MME. NINA KOSHETZ.

Ukrainians Bid Us Adieu Tuesday at Coliseum

THE second and last concert of the Ukrainian National Chorus to be given in this city, will occur Tuesday night at the Coliseum, under the direction of the Cossack conductor, composer and miracle-worker, Alexander Koshetz. A new program will be given, and a new prima donna will be presented—Mme. Nina Koshetz, formerly leading soprano at the Moscow Opera.

The choral program will include the following numbers, arranged by Koshetz, Stupnitsky, Stetzenko, Leontovich, Kolessa and Lyssenko:

Canticles—"St. Barbara," "Early Morning," "The Church Was Built in Kootzivka" and "The Guardian Angel."

Christmas Carols—"Ullanka Cut the Silken Grass" and "Behind the Mountain."

Folksongs—"Hey, Near Borysphol," "Young Juliana," "The Beauty in the Street," Kolmrjka," "Oh, Gently the Danube Rolls," "Evening," "The Little Tarin," "I Shall Go" and "The Shoes."

Mme. Koshetz will sing these selections: "Autumn Night," Glinka; Song of Llubasha, from "The Tsar's Bride," Rimsky-Korsakoff; "Eastern Romance," Rimsky-Korsakoff; Reverie and Dance, from "The Fair at Sorotchinsk," Moussorgsky; "Over the Steppe," Gretchaninoff; "Oi, Mamo," arranged by Mme. Koshetz from an Ukrainian folksong; "Vocalize," by Rachmaninoff, and "Old Russian Song," Varlamoff.

Singers Are Trained.

THE Ukrainian Chorus, consisting of 50 singers in native costume, gave its first St. Louis concert at the Odeon on the evening of Nov. 14. It sang without instrumental accompaniment and wholly from memory. The members, according to the leader, are not untutored peasants, but students and teachers, who sing not by ear but by note.

In the Post-Dispatch review of the concert the chorus was compared to the string choir of an orchestra, and mention was made of its peculiar timbre and astounding technical virtuosity.

"Never in a choral body," continued the chronicler, "but only among instrumentalists of perfect discipline, have I heard such endlessly flexible command of pace and rhythm, such executancy in every degree of tonal force. • • • The swelling and diminishing of tone—these the choir achieves with amazing delicacy. • • • When those fathom-deep Russian bassos droned some booming tone of sub-human compass, the effect was that of an organ's pedal notes."

pieces—"Zur Guitarre," "Spanish Carnival" and Mazurka, No. 1. Mrs. Esmeralda Berry Mayes will be the accompanist.

Estelle Asckenasy, 12-year-old pianist and composer, will give a recital Tuesday evening at Baldwin's Hall, with a program including 10 pieces from her own pen. One is an "Indian Legend," with three sections—"War Dance," "Phantoms" and "Mourning." She will also play Schumann's "Childhood Scenes" and numbers by Chopin, Tschaikowsky and Grieg.

Donahue's Recital.

LESTER DONAHUE, who recently appeared at a "pop" concert of the Symphony Orchestra, gave a piano recital Thursday night at the Wednesday Club Auditorium. This was a private concert, one of an educational series sponsored by St. Louis pianoforte teachers. On his program were Scriabine's fifth sonata, Op. 53; Debussy's "Gold Fish," Balakirew's Oriental fantasy, "Islamey," and several other works.

A paper on Humperdinck's "Hansel und Gretel" will be read by Miss Helena Hermingham before the Morning Etude Club, at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning, at Baldwin's Hall. Mrs. Bruno Strassberger will give illustrations at the piano.

John G. O. Sebald, organist, of Kansas City, will give a recital Friday evening at Emmaus Lutheran Church, Jefferson avenue and Armand place, with a program of works by Bach, Yon, Guilmant, Widor and others. A comic opera in two acts, "Priscilla, or, the Pilgrim's Proxy," will be sung on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings by the choir of the Friedens Evangelical Church, at Friedens Hall, Nineteenth street and Newhouse avenue.

The Missouri Chapter of the American Guild of Organists will present Charles M. Courboin, a distinguished organist, in a recital Wednesday evening at the Westminster Presbyterian Church, Delmar and Union boulevards. A program of vocal, piano and violin music was given Monday for the Ladies' Friday Musical Club at the home of Mrs. Morton May, 8 Washington terrace.

The Mystery of Maude Adams

America's Premier Actress Who Quit the Stage at the Height of Her Popularity

RETIREMENT SO COMPLETE THAT NOT EVEN HER FORMER ASSOCIATES NOW KNOW WHERE SHE LIVES

Announcement During the Past Week That Her Connection With the Theater Is a Closed Phase of Her Life Recalls How the Death of Charles Frohman, Long Her Trusted Friend and Manager, Shocked Her—She Gave Her Country Estate to a Catholic Sisterhood Though She Was a Presbyterian—It Was Recently Reported That She Had Invented a Method by Which Moving Pictures Could Be Shown With Undimmed Lights.

By ROBERTUS LOVE

"THE Mystery of Maude Adams" yet may serve as title for a tale of the stage founded on fact, but reading like fiction.

Maude Adams, best-beloved of American actresses, is surrounded just now with question marks. The interrogation point completely environs her. It may be said that she is "lost," though no searching party has set out to find her.

Where is Maude Adams?

Why has Maude Adams retired from the stage?

Why has Maude Adams refused to return to the stage in spite of the most flattering proffers of salary and congenial roles?

Why is Maude Adams, only 50 years of age, secluding herself not only from the general public, but also from her former associates on the stage, and declining to continue, or rather to resume her career of histrionic glory which could but cause her name to shine more brightly than ever through her further appearance before the footlights?

Has Maude Adams, without an authentic hint thereof leaking out to the public, become a religious zealot and cloistered herself from the world?

Or, did this unmarried woman of middle age suffer, years ago, an emotional shock which, persisting and augmenting in its intensity, has caused her to retire to the life of a recluse?

These are a few of the interrogations in the Maude Adams environment. There are others which might be set forth. It appears to be anybody's guess. Mystery envelops the whole situation. Only Maude Adams herself can lift the veil and apparently she has no intention of so doing.

She Always Evaded Publicity

Millions and millions of men and women throughout the lands where English is spoken are interested in the solution of the Maude Adams mystery. They want to know. They desire to be supplied with the key. They have been, from time to time in the past 35 years, entertained, edified, even thrilled by Maude Adams, the actress. As to Maude Adams, the woman, they have been permitted to learn comparatively little, since she is and always had been the least self-displaying personage on the American or the English stage.

Maude Adams, the actress, is known intimately throughout America and England. Maude Adams, the woman, is known intimately to but a limited circle of favored persons. She has kept herself to herself to a degree of seclusiveness unmatched in her calling ever since she became a professional play-woman at the age of 16, after various public appearances as a child. For many years her play-going public has been "curious" about her personal entity; and that curiosity has remained unsatisfied.

This public, therefore, was not surprised when, a few days ago, the Associated Press sent out from New York the brief statement that "the last notes of the swan song of Maude Adams, the Peter Pan of the American stage, have died away and their echo is silenced." But it is not to be denied that the public was disappointed, for millions have been hoping that their favorite actress might return to the stage.

Simultaneously was made the announcement that Billie Burke will succeed to the Christmas premieres at the Empire Theater in New York, where Miss Adams appeared annually for nearly 20 years and where she introduced Sir J. M. Barrie's "Peter Pan," written especially for her.

Gave Her Home to Sisterhood

Strong indications that Miss Adams would not return to the stage had come a week earlier, when she failed to appear at the thirtieth anniversary dinner held back of the Empire stage. At that dinner the astonishing fact was made known that none of those who knew her intimately in the theatrical world had knowledge of her present address. But one, it was stated, knew where to find Maude Adams now, and that one, an old and trusted official of the Empire Theater, is not certain he knows where she is. He forwarded the usual invitation to attend the anniversary dinner to an address she sent to him a year ago, but if she received it he does not know for there has been no reply, no excuse.

Two years ago it was said she was then in retirement at Lake Ronkonkoma, L. I., in her former home, which she gave to the Roman Catholic Sisterhood of Our Lady of the Cenacle. There was also an intimation that she might be at her home in the Catskills.

The Ronkonkoma estate was valued at $200,000, one of its features are 20,000 honey locust trees which were set out many years ago under Miss Adams' direction. They perfume the atmosphere in spring with their gorgeous blossoms for many miles around.

Years ago Miss Adams spent a summer at a retreat near Tours, France, in the mother house of the Sisterhood of Our Lady of the Cenacle. This information did not reach America through any intimation from the actress herself that she had taken temporary refuge in a Catholic retreat; it was told to a writer for the New York World Sunday Magazine by Mrs. Kiskadden (Annie Adams), mother of Maude Adams.

In recent years Miss Adams is said to have passed a portion of each summer with the members of the sisterhood in the vicinity of New York. There was a natural assumption that she would embrace Catholicism, or that she had embraced it, but so far as the public or her personal friends are aware she has made no profession of conversion to the Roman faith. However, it is generally understood that she has developed a strong religious trend and this may have turned her against the stage.

Last October Miss Adams was reported as being ready to present to the world an invention designed to permit the showing of motion pictures without dimming the theater lights. It was stated that she had worked on this invention for three years, from time to time, and that the General Electric Co. had given her, in its plant at Schenectady, N. Y., quarters where she could work in seclusion. The quarters, it was said, included living accommodations for Miss Adams.

Officials of the General Electric Co., when asked for information regarding the activities of Miss Adams at their plant, stated it was true that she had conducted experiments there under their authorization, but that they had no further statement to make, save that her invention, they understood, was successful. As yet, however, it has not been applied to the motion-picture industry. This is easily explained by the fact that the process of securing patent rights usually extends over a long period.

In passing, it is of interest to note that Maude Adams always has refused steadfastly to appear as a movie actress. Offers of well-nigh unbelievable sums have been made to her. She was not tempted by the money. As a matter of fact, one of the traits in this actress which endears her to that section of the public whose ethical and cultural tendency is foremost is that she never has shown the slightest greed for monetary gain. While she has earned a large income for many years, she has remained free from the vulgar notorieties attending the average so-called screen star whose salary, actual or imaginary, has been played up into first place as a publicity asset. Maude Adams has been an actress—an artist—first and last—a money maker only incidentally.

In many ways this stage woman is unique. She is a sort of elusive sprite. Now you see her, now you don't. Neither gifted nor cursed with an extraordinary beauty of face and figure, she has relied chiefly upon her talent for her acting and her inherent genius of personality for popular approval. And so popular has she been, and so well-beloved, that nobody has come forward to suggest that because of her comparative plainness she never could have become a successful "screen star," anyhow.

How Her Stage Career Began

If it be true, as the Associated Press correspondent strongly intimates, that Maude Adams is indeed a closed incident as to the stage, the public that has admired and loved her for more than three decades is entitled to some definite facts about her life. In the first place, her name is Maude Adams—but plus. Maude Adams Kiskadden is how she was christened. Born in Salt Lake City on Nov. 11, 1872, her father was a business man in the Mormon capital; her mother, Mrs. Kiskadden, was known on the stage as Annie Adams, and was said to be related to the two Adamses who served as Presidents of the United States. A cousin of John Quincy Adams is said to have been her grandfather.

Annie Adams died at Salt Lake City in 1916. Her famous daughter canceled important stage engagements to hasten to her bedside. For many years mother and daughter traveled together, occasionally playing in the same companies. The mother, more as a chaperon than as an associate actress, traveled with Maude when the latter was a young girl beginning to blossom into a stage star.

Annie Adams was a member of a stock company in Salt Lake City when Maude was born. The baby was 3 months old when she made her first appearance on any stage. Her nurse had taken her to the theater one night. Mrs. Kiskadden had the leading role in a play called "The Lost Child." The titular character happened to be missing that night. Little Maude was carried to the stage and served as "understudy" to the lost child.

That was almost exactly 50 years ago. Now Maude Adams again is "the lost child." So it seems that her stage career ends, as it began, in mystery.

The girl played now and then in child parts

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Feb. 3.

WITH the evidence all in, it was for the jury to say, in the divorce case of John Howard Cromwell, rich, elderly lawyer and club man of Larchmont, N. Y., against his attractive and relatively young wife, whether the wife's life, with "nothing but a 14-room residence, three house servants and a chauffeur, three automobiles, a yacht and a handsome annuity," was so "unbearable" that she was justified in turning to other and younger men, music and cocktails for diversion.

And, also, whether Mrs. Cromwell's turning to other men for diversion was so "unbearable" for Cromwell that he was justified in turning to Mrs. Genevieve K. Mulford, his young and pretty housekeeper, for sympathy and consolation.

But the jury just couldn't do it. They deliberated on this momentous issue for over 10 hours and then had to confess to Justice Seeger that it was too much for them. It will have to be settled by another jury.

For two weeks lawyers whose zeal for their clients has frequently brought them to the point of blows have been piling up Cromwell's case against his wife and Mrs. Cromwell's counter case against her husband. What with all that was brought against Mrs. Cromwell by her husband's witnesses and the diversions she admitted, with the mitigation of the unbearableness of her lot, it looked at first like Cromwell was going to have a chance to marry Mrs. Mulford, if he really wanted to, but when it came Mrs. Cromwell's turn and she and her witnesses told on Cromwell, it was anybody's guess whose side the jury would take.

Mrs. Cromwell is 38. The five years of her "unbearable" life as the wife of Cromwell, who is 65, have not left a discernable mark upon her. It might have been worse if her loneliness had not been beguiled by the attentions of Harry Cohn, a movie director of Los Angeles, and Irwin Mills of New York and others, all much younger, than her husband. But, on the other hand, she would have the jury believe that Cromwell derived no end of solace from the solicitude of his faithful housekeeper.

"Monotony of Her Existence"

Cromwell had to be away from home a good deal and it was during his absences that Mrs. Cromwell became lonely and hailed as a boon the coming of men to relieve the monotony of her existence. Sometimes she took them for trips in one of the cars her husband provided, driven by the chauffeur which he hired for her. It even happened, sometimes, that men stayed all night, there being no lack of accommodations in the 14-room house.

Irwin Williams stayed one night, and there is testimony before the jury that along about 2:30 a. m. he was seen romping in a hallway in Mrs. Cromwell's silk pajamas, which may have been carelessly left lying about. He was on his way to the bathroom at the time and was heard to say something about going in for a swim.

One of the nights that Mills stayed there it was on account of a terrible rainstorm. William Breed, a Chicago banker and broker, was there, too. The lights went out during dinner, but candles provided enough light to dance and drink by until early morning. But there was no lack of circumspection, since he and Mills occupied the same room when they finally rested from their revelry.

Concerning Cohn, there is no dispute that he and Mrs. Cromwell were very good friends. Mrs. Cromwell testified, frankly enough, that she was "fond" of Harry and some of the letters which have passed between them and which have found their way into the evidence seem to indicate that the fondness was of pronounced degree.

There was a letter, for instance, purporting to have been written by Mrs. Cromwell to Cohn. "If we could ever see the day," it said, "when you and I can go about without fear of being seen! I often wonder if you would let me have my way in everything. You know how cross I am at times. You know I am a regular devil. All I know is I miss you and love you dearly." It was signed "R," Mrs. Cromwell's name is Rose.

A Jewel of a Housekeeper

It happened that Mrs. Cromwell was in Los Angeles when her husband sued her for divorce alleging that she had left his bed and board and refused to return. Mrs. Cromwell tells a very different tale about that. Cromwell told her, she says, that he wanted to marry or adopt Jane, as he called Mrs. Mulford, and as good as shut the door in her face.

This Mrs. Mulford, by all accounts, was a jewel of a housekeeper. Cromwell thought so much of her that he put up a bond to give her $20,000 on condition that she refrain from marrying again and keep the housekeeping job for a stipulated time.

Mrs. Mulford, if anything, was most too efficient, Mrs. Cromwell has come to think, although at first she was not averse to Jane acting as "general fixer" in the Cromwell household, in addition to bossing the servants. It was the housekeeper, says Mrs. Cromwell, who arranged the little parties when Cromwell was away.

"Dear Mrs. Cromwell," she was wont to say, "you must have diversion. I don't see how you can stand your life with Mr. Cromwell. It is unbearable." It was nice to be understood and sympathized with by the efficient housekeeper, and whenever she suggested that Mrs. Cromwell needed the diversion of a little party, Mrs. Mulford told her to go as far as she liked.

Mrs. Mulford knew all about Mrs. Cromwell's correspondence with Cohn. In fact, as a precaution, Cohn's letters came in her care. And Mrs. Cromwell says it was at Mrs. Mulford's suggestion that he signed himself "Harriet."

"She almost did all my thinking for me," is Mrs. Cromwell's summing up.

It was Mrs. Mulford who called up dear Mrs. Cromwell at Los Angeles when Cromwell filed his suit and told her about it. She advised Mrs. Cromwell not to contest the suit, "not to be foolish" and not to return to New York. It was a great shock to Mrs. Cromwell, who had not thought that her husband would go so far as that. She gave "a terrible cry," as one of her witnesses testified, and swooned.

"Oliver Will Not See You Now"

When she came to she packed up and returned to New York. From her sister's home she called up the Larchmont residence. Mrs. Mulford answered. She was sorry to inform dear Mrs. Cromwell that "Oliver" did not care to speak to her. Mrs. Cromwell hung on. The matter was very important, she told Mrs. Mulford, and wouldn't Mrs. Mulford be so kind as to tell Mr. Cromwell so.

Mrs. Mulford was gracious. "Hold the wire," she purred. She returned in a moment. "Oliver will not see you now," she said. "If the matter is of such importance that you must talk to him, he will see you at his office at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning."

Mrs. Cromwell and Mrs. Mulford had been great friends, Mrs. Cromwell never having looked upon Mrs. Mulford as a mere housekeeper, but rather as a confidential adviser and friend, but when Oliver, through Mrs. Mulford, refused his wife permission to come home and directed her to see him at his office, that settled the case of Mrs. Mulford with Mrs. Cromwell. Especially as Mrs. Mulford had been riding around in Mrs. Cromwell's automobile and telling things on Mrs. Cromwell which she, as housekeeper and friend, should have held sacred.

But Mrs. Cromwell went to her husband's office next day. It was playing it rather low down on her to serve her with the divorce papers while she was there, but process servers often lack refinement and punctilio.

She saw her husband and he was almost as bad as the process server. He offered her $75,000 on the spot not to contest the suit. She repelled the offer.

"Oliver," she cried, "how can you do this thing after all our years of married life? I cannot accept the money. I would not sell my soul. I shall fight to clear my name of the stain you have placed upon it."

Cromwell was unmoved. He told her he was going to get a divorce, whether she contested it or not. Mrs. Cromwell might not be aware that in such matters it was money that counted, and he had the money. But just to show that he was a good sport he offered her $71,000 and was willing to pay her lawyer.

He may have forgotten, in the stress of the interview, that he had previously settled $100,000 upon her and had agreed to give her $600 a month as pin money for the rest of her life. If Mrs. Cromwell had accepted the $71,000 she would have forfeited the previous settlement and would have been, so to speak, out of luck.

Exciting Encounter With His Rival

After the break with her husband, realizing as she says, that Mrs. Mulford was no longer her friend but her rival, Mrs. Cromwell told interestingly of a "raid" she made upon the residence at Allenhurst, N. J., where, she alleged, Cromwell and Mrs. Mulford were living.

"Accompanied by my sister and four detectives," Mrs. Cromwell testified, "we went to Allenhurst and rang the front door bell. Mrs. Mulford peered out of an unstairs window and at another window, I distinctly saw Mr. Cromwell. Mrs. Mulford said I could not enter, and when I told her the matter was of extreme impor-

Grace Lusk, Freed After Serving Four Years for Killing Wife of Man She Loved, Will Devote Life to Prison Reform

Veterinarian Who Was the Cause of Wisconsin Teacher's Tragedy Has Forgotten Her and Married Another Woman — Broken in Health, She Soon Will Leave Sanitarium and Begin New Struggle With World That Scorned Her for Her Romance and Condemned Her for Her Crime.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Feb. 3.

GRACE LUSK, middle-aged Wisconsin school teacher who has spent four weary years behind prison bars for killing the wife of the man she loved, is free to do as she pleases with what remains of her life, broken by tragedy, by confinement and illness. It has been given back, placed at her own disposal through the executive clemency of Gov. J. J. Blaine of Wisconsin who saw in such a step the only means of saving her life at all.

Now that she has regained her liberty, she hopes to devote all her time to helping the public to get the view from the outside of America's prison system that she has had from the inside.

Lying now in a private sanitarium here where she was taken in 1921 for treatment after her complete collapse in prison, she is formulating her plans for making existence more sufferable for others who, like herself, have had to pay for their misdeeds with penal servitude.

There isn't much left for her on the "outside" anymore. She can't very well go back to teaching. School boards don't approve of ex-convict school teachers as a rule, and for that matter she wouldn't care to go back to teaching, anyway, she says, for it reminds her too much of her tragedy. But if she can do something to let the public know of the abuses of prison life and something to make less terrible the lot of convicts, she believes, then her life and her pardon will not have been in vain.

Two photographic views of Grace Lusk.

As for her love dream, that which brought those few moments of rage that made a murderess of her, and which since that time has brought only condemnation from her neighbors, it, too, is hopelessly shattered.

Man She Loves Weds Another

Dr. David Roberts, veterinarian, of Waukesha, whose wife it was she killed in an outburst of hatred for her rival, is gone out of her life. Hardly had the prison doors closed behind her until he forgot that her affection had ever meant anything to him and, a few months later, when she was hovering between life and death in prison, he married another woman and left the scene of his illicit romance with Grace Lusk.

So, in a few days, she will leave the sanitarium and take up again her struggles with the world —the world she tried to leave by suicide on that day in 1917 when she stood with a smoking revolver over the body of Mrs. Mary Newton Roberts and realized the consequences of her anger. Her pardoning marks the end of an extraordinary murder case, which during its trial, attracted little less attention than did that of Harry K. Thaw for the murder of Stanford White.

The story of Grace Lusk and of Dr. Roberts, as the public is concerned with it goes back to the latter part of 1916. She, at that time, was a teacher in the public schools of Waukesha, a spinster who was beginning to fear that her chance for domestic happiness or for the love of a man was fading. He was a respectable, successful veterinarian with a large practice, a fortune estimated at $250,000, a beautiful home, two automobiles, a wife and a longing for secret amorous adventure. Her work was confined to the humdrum of schoolroom instruction; his to journeying day by day over the countryside around Waukesha attending the ills of cattle in his district. There was little in common in their everyday lives, but these two were drawn together, and this is how their association came about.

Dr. Roberts and His Book

Grace Lusk had been a student all her life. She was familiar with books and she loved them. Occasionally she had felt that longing to write, to give expression to thoughts of beauty that formed themselves imperfectly in her mind. She had felt the urge, but had not had the experience or the convictions to forge her dreamy thoughts into words.

Dr. Roberts came along. He had a book to be written. It was not to be a work of art—just a book about cows. He knew the facts that he wanted to set forth, but he was not skilled in the handling of sentences, so he went to the teacher with his plan. It was not just what she was looking for in the way of literary endeavor, but it was better than not writing at all. She took up the task of helping him to write it.

Before Grace Lusk knew it she was in love with Dr. Roberts and she believed that he was in love with her. She had wanted to be in love with somebody, and Dr. Roberts' wife didn't understand him—he had told her so himself—why should she not be to him what his wife was not? A secret, illicit love affair was better than none, she reasoned, and she was satisfied for a time with sharing his affections with his wife who didn't understand him. There were secret meetings, automobile trips together about the country, then quarrels.

Grace Lusk was beginning to tire of sharing the love of the doctor with another woman, even if the other woman was his wife. She demanded that it be confined to her alone and that the wife be told of their association, but the doctor put her off. He was afraid to tell his wife just then, he explained, but he would when the right time came. Each time she asked that Mrs. Roberts be told the doctor had some excuse or other to offer and it was put off again and again. Finally the teacher grew desperate.

"Tell your wife or I will tell her myself," she demanded, and Roberts promised he would.

The next day there was a meeting with Mrs. Roberts, but it was not the kind of a meeting that Grace Lusk had expected. Instead of offering to give up her husband so that he could go his way with the other woman of his choice, the wife was belligerent. She taunted the teacher with her misconduct and threatened her with disgrace. She shamed her for her intimacy with a man who was already married to another woman.

"What about yourself?" the teacher countered. "Aren't you living with a man who is in love with another woman?"

"I? I am a respectable married woman," said the wife.

"What about your husband? Do you want to disgrace him?"

"He is a man," the wife said. "His wrongs will not be remembered, but you must suffer for yours. I am going to report you to the School Board."

Killed the Wife, Wounded Herself

The teacher reached for a revolver. Mrs. Roberts screamed and started to flee, but she was caught in a rain of bullets and fell to the floor dying.

A moment later, persons in the house, rushing to learn the cause of the firing, heard one more shot. Mrs. Robert lay dead at the foot of the stairs. At the head of the stairs stood Grace Lusk, holding to the railing with one hand and clutching a revolver with the other. She swayed and seemed about to fall and her waist with a crimson stain upon it told where the last shot had gone.

Slain Dancer Another Victim of the Lure of Fame in the Movies

STORY OF TRAGEDY THAT FOLLOWED FRITZI MANN'S EFFORT TO BE POPULAR WITH HOLLYWOOD'S FAST SET

Her Case Is an Example, Police Declare, of the Fate Awaiting Pretty Young Girls Who Go on Unwise Pursuit of Ambition to Star on the Screen—Solution of Her Murder Appears as Far Away as It Did When Her Body, Clad Only in Silk Undergarments, Was Found in the Surf North of San Diego on Morning After a "House Party" at Beach Resort.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

SAN DIEGO, Cal. Feb. 3.

"SHE was just another victim of the lure of motion picture fame!"

So say the police of the case of Fritzi Mann, 20-year-old dancer whose body was found in the surf on the beach north of here Jan. 15. Though she was murdered, the crime remains unsolved.

"It is another example," the police add, "of the fate awaiting pretty young girls who go on a wild and unwise pursuit of an ambition to star before the motion picture camera."

Coming to America with her family from Austria at the age of 10, she had gone to the movies and read motion picture magazines until she had become obsessed with the idea that she could become a great motion picture actress and constantly projected her imagination toward the wonders of life at Hollywood as she pictured it. It is the same dream that millions of girls of her age have. Fortunately most of them are cured of it before it leads them to an untimely grave as it did Fritzi Mann.

But where the hopes of most girls fade and die, hers thrived and grew because nature had been kinder to her than to the vast majority of her sisters. She had beauty, plenty of it, and she had a wonderfully lithe and graceful figure, perfectly proportioned. She could dance entrancingly, having a natural talent for it, and she was full of animal spirits, of the joy of living. On the advice of friends who knew of her talent, she became a classic dancing pupil because, she was told, it would drill her in the art of posing gracefully and, perhaps, open the way more quickly to a movie career.

Studied Under Pavlowa's Premier Danseuse

Fritzi Mann had come to San Diego late in 1921 with her mother and brother from Denver, Col., and she had brought with her considerable fame as an interpretive dancer. To improve her talents further she had studied diligently there under several instructors, among them being Mlle. Domina Marina, former premier danseuse of Pavlowa's ballet. She had won her way to coveted popularity with the pleasure loving set into which her art had thrown her. Soon she became one of this set at gay midnight cabaret resorts.

Next came association with members of the motion picture world. She met, now and then, at these gay parties, a screen celebrity whose flattering attentions gave impetus to her hope of achieving success in a theatrical career. She must be a "good fellow" with these people, she thought, for their influence, and the benefit of their acquaintance even, would be mighty when she should go to seek her fortunes at Hollywood. The wild parties, said to be characteristic of Southern California's movie colony, continued. Now it was a cabaret in San Diego, then a "house party" at some pleasure resort along the coast, and frequently there were long automobile rides up down the beach to less pretentious gatherings. Often Fritzi went into the exclusive confines of Hollywood itself as a guest at some feast, where wine was to occupy its celebrated place along with women and song.

Then the Fatal Last "House Party"

It was to be a "house party," she told her mother on that Sunday afternoon, Jan. 14, when she went away to her death. No, she didn't know just who would be there or when she would be home, so Mrs. Amelia Mann, the mother, ceased her inquiries, accepting it as a natural fact that she didn't know all her popular daughter's friends. She simply trusted in the ability of the daughter to take care of herself and told her so as the two walked from their home at 2923 Spruce street to a car line where Fritzi was to board a car to take her downtown to meet the automobile party which she was to accompany up the coast to Del Mar, where, she said, the party was to be held. Mrs. Mann said goodby and went home, without thinking seriously of danger ahead for the girl.

Fritzi was a little wild, like many flappers, the mother told herself, but she would be all right. She must enjoy herself like other girls. Even when there came a telephone call from Fritzi later in the evening saying that the location of the house party had been changed from Del Mar to La Jolla, a seaside village farther down the coast and 14 miles from the city proper of San Diego, there was no thought of harm.

On Monday noon, the following day, the children of a party of automobile travelers, who had stopped on the beach just south of Del Mar and about 10 miles north of La Jolla, were playing in the sand. Suddenly they ran crying to their parents that there was a human body on the beach. It was that of a young and beautiful woman clad only in silk undergarments which clung to the lifeless figure as the surf washed over them. An ugly bruise on the temple indicated violence.

The tourists hastened to report their discovery to the proprietor of a roadside garage and he telephoned to Coroner S. C. Kelly in San Diego. The Coroner rushed to the scene and returned with the body to a morgue, but he had found no mark of identification and it was not until late that evening that it was learned that the victim was the popular dancing girl.

The Card in the Handbag

An officer searching along the coast for possible bits of evidence came upon a handbag 500 yards or so from the spot where the body was found and a few yards further on picked up a vanity case. In the handbag was a dress and a kimono; in the vanity case, a number of cards, on one of which there was this inscription:

"I am Fritzi Mann."

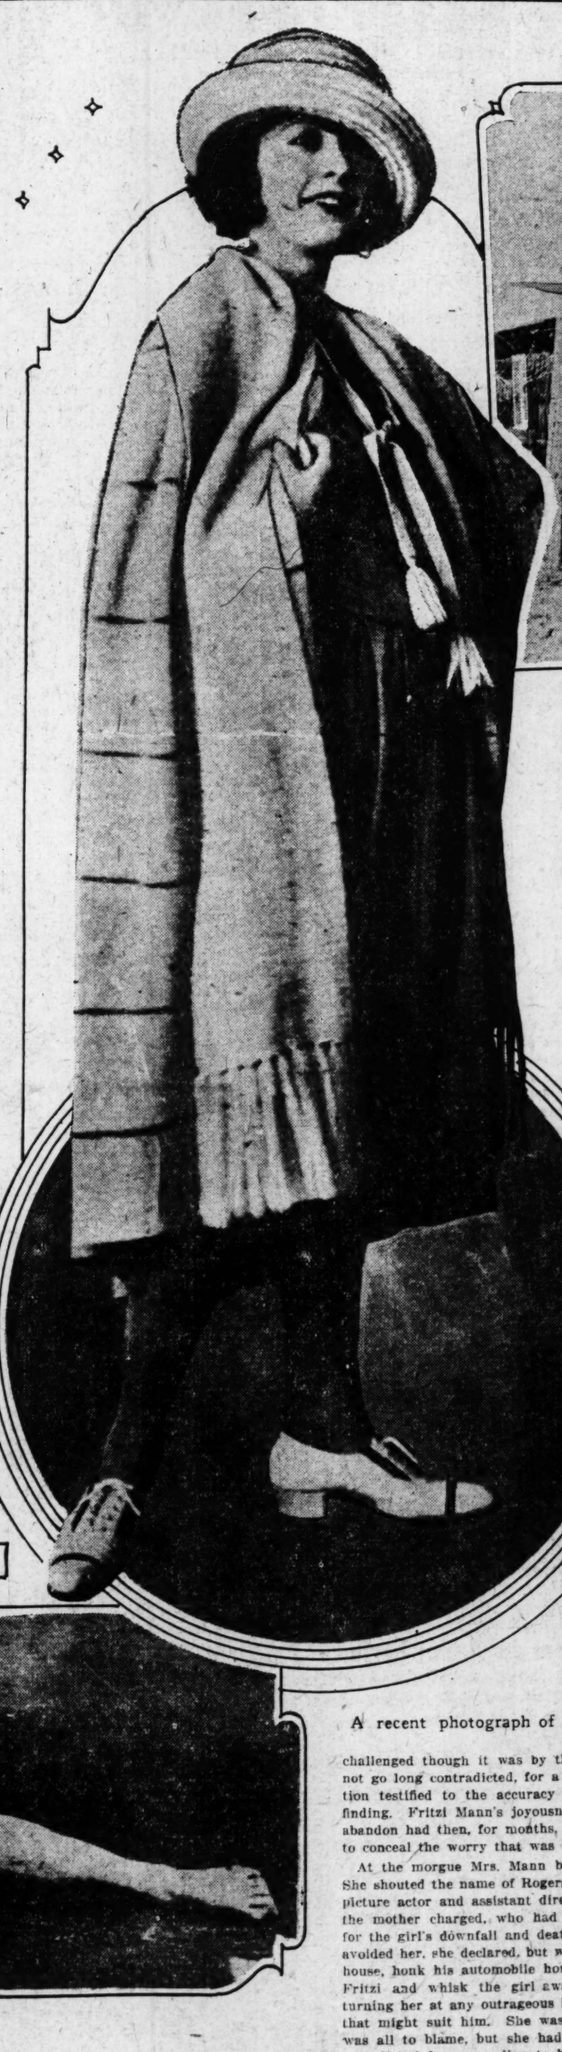
What circumstances caused the young dancer to write that card have been a matter of much speculation since the inquiry into her death has been in progress. Was its presence without particular significance or did it mean that the girl had foreseen possible tragedy and taken this measure to aid in the identification of her body in case she should not return alive? Official believe that she had a premonition of foul play when she started out upon that automobile trip to the "house party," and subsequent disclosures in the case appear to bear out their conclusions.

Even after the discovery of the card, the girl's identity was not established until her mother and brother went to the morgue, their fear aroused by a telephone message from the Coroner. It seems that, when the finder of the card reported its discovery to the Coroner by telephone, the latter understood that it was a calling card of Fritzi Mann. He then deduced that the victim must have been an acquaintance of the dancer and called the Mann home to inquire whether the girl was at home and whether she would come to the morgue to help identify the body.

The dancer's mother and brother already were alarmed at her failure to return and this inquiry filled them with foreboding.

The girl had been murdered, they were told upon identifying the body. She had been rendered insensible by a blow on the temple and then had been thrown, still breathing, into the water where death by drowning resulted. Apparently she had been carried to the spot in an automobile, after being stripped to her undergarments and struck on the head elsewhere, the officers said.

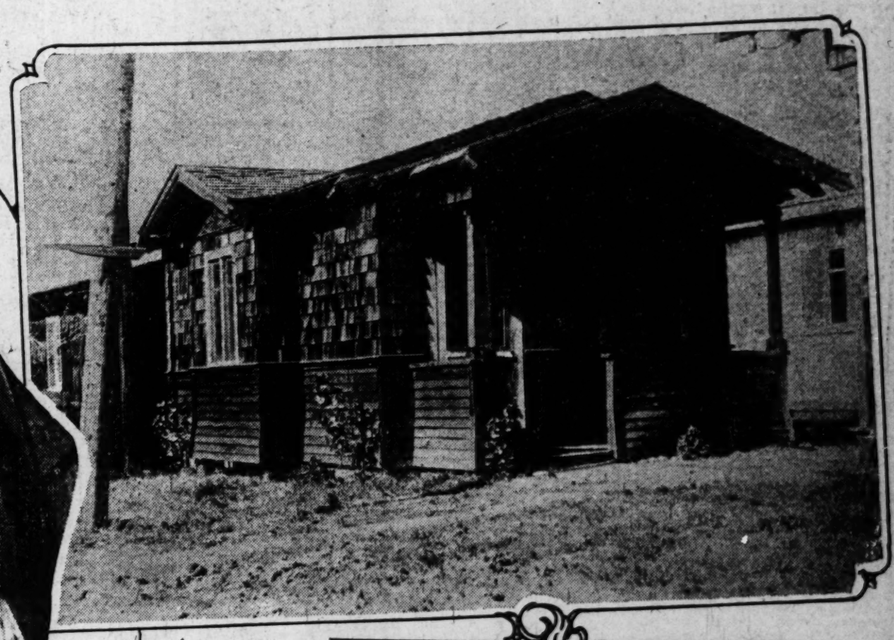
And there was yet another thing to be revealed. The girl had been found to be in a delicate condition. The autopsy surgeon's finding, challenged though it was by the brother, could not go long contradicted, for a private examination testified to the accuracy of the surgeon's finding. Fritzi Mann's joyousness and care-free abandon had then, for months, been but a mask to conceal the worry that was on her mind.



A recent photograph of Fritzi Mann.

At the morgue Mrs. Mann became hysterical. She shouted the name of Rogers Clark, a motion picture actor and assistant director. It was he, the mother charged, who had been responsible for the girl's downfall and death. Clark always avoided her, she declared, but would drive to the house, honk his automobile horn as a signal to Fritzi and whisk the girl away in the car, returning her at any outrageous hour of the night that might suit him. She was sure that Clark was all to blame, but she had no fault to find with Fritzi for responding to his signal and remaining out late. Fritzi was just like all the other girls, she was bent on having a good time and insisted on running with that fast set in spite of everything, so the mother declared.

After this denunciation by the mother the officers were not long in getting on the trail of Clark. A request for his arrest was telegraphed to Los Angeles adn he was taken into custody just as he was about to board a train for the East. His automobile was examined and found to have red stains upon it and he admitted that he had been in San Diego in his car on Sunday and Sunday night. He also admitted that he had been friendly with Fritzi Mann, but he insisted that he was innocent of any connection with her death. He had passed the evening at the home of Al E. Flowers, exalted ruler of the San Diego lodge of Elks, he said.



The "Blue Sea" bungalow at La Jolla, Cal., in which it is believed that Miss Mann was murdered.

Secret Marriage Story Unconfirmed

Meanwhile in San Diego, Dr. L. L. Jacobs, attached to the staff of the public health service hospital at Camp Kearny, a few miles east of La Jolla, appeared at the police station, offering information concerning Fritzi Mann. He said he had known her for some time and had taken her automobile riding Friday night before the tragic Sunday and that she had confided to him that she was secretly married to a motion picture actor, but had left him because of cruelties. He said she had pleaded with him to perform an operation for her, but this he had declined to do.

Rogers V. B. Clark

He was arrested soon after the murder was discovered, but released when he presented an alibi. He is a motion picture actor and director, and had been very friendly with Miss Mann.

At the time he came to the station, the officers had in their possession letters he had written to Miss Mann and also letters written to her by girl friends. In Dr. Jacob's letters the chief topic was her delicate condition and arrangements being made or proposed regarding it. He wrote her he had made arrangements whereby a certain nurse in Los Angeles, who was a "good sport," would aid her. Investigation revealed that Miss Mann had made a trip to Los Angeles but had not called upon that nurse. Her story of secret marriage is without confirmation by license or otherwise.

Closely questioned by the detectives and Chief of Police James Patrick, Dr. Jacobs steadfastly maintained that he had not seen Miss Mann Sunday, knew nothing of her death and declared he had been at the Camp Kearny hospital that Sunday evening. Fellow officers and hospital attendants substantiated his assertion he had been at the hospital, but he was held for further investigation and only released the following Monday on habeas corpus proceedings in which no effort to detain him longer was made.

While Dr. Jacobs was still being held, Rogers Clark was brought to San Diego and succeeded in establishing his alibi so completely that the authorities were forced to release him. Al E. Flowers, although first stating that Clark came to his home and took his stepdaughter, Miss Gladys Taylor, out to dinner and brought her home at 11 o'clock and then left, later declared Clark had remained in the house with the stepdaughter until 1 o'clock in the morning. As to the stains on his car, Clark substantiated a claim he had an injured man in the car on his trip from San Diego to Los Angeles.

Final release of these two men followed the failure of a man who had seen the companion of Fritzi Mann on her death night to identify either of them positively. This man, A. E. Kern, was brought into the case through discovery of the house where was held what there was of the "house party" Fritzi Mann told her mother she expected to attend.

Couple Traced to Seaside Cottage

Following a meager clue, detectives had entered one of a number of rental cottages by the sea at La Jolla, known as the Blue Sea cottages and operated by Kern, and there found a hair net, a comb and several other articles that were identified as having belonged to the dead girl. Under inquiry, Kern stated a pale, nervous man driving a closed car had come to him to rent a cottage for the night and signed the register: "Alvin Johnstone and wife, L. A. (Los Angeles)." Kern said he saw the woman in the car and would know her. He was taken to the morgue and there identified Fritzi Mann. But when Clark and Dr. Jacobs were taken before him he said he was uncertain and would not take the responsibility of saying he had ever seen either before. Concerning activities of the man and woman, Kern said the man appeared so nervous when engaging the cottage that he intended to note the license number of the automobile if not take other action, but later decided his suspicions were unfounded. After engaging the cottage, Kern said, the man entered the automobile with the woman and drove away, but about 8 o'clock he looked toward the cottage and saw the lights were on and a car was standing outside. Then, about 11:30 o'clock that night, he noticed that the lights were out, the cottage vacant and the car gone. While Kern did not notice at the time that anything was missing from the cottage, later in the week he positively identified a blanket that was found on the beach where the body of Miss Mann was found as one belonging in the cottage.

It is quite obvious, according to the authorities, that Miss Mann, dead or alive, was transported from the Blue Sea cottage at La Jolla to the beach 10 miles away by automobile. The autopsy surgeon declared death was due to drowning, having found water in the lungs, but advanced the theory that a black and bruised spot on her right temple was caused prior to her drowning and may have been due to a blow that rendered her unconscious.

The authorities scout a suicide theory in view of the numerous circumstances discrediting it. It is unbelievable, they say, that she went to the beach unassisted. A trough in the sand where her vanity case was found indicated that it had been thrown from a car traveling along the paved coast highway that parallels the beach, and far beyond was found her handbag, with dress and kimono. The blanket from the Blue Sea cottage was high and dry above the reach of the breakers, and is believed to have been used to wrap about the girl when she was removed unconscious from the Blue Sea cottage and transported to the death beach.

Theories of the Cottage Episode

Only theories have been afforded by the cottage episode. A plausible one advanced is that the visit there was arranged for the purpose of an operation. A bottle partly filled with liquid was discovered there, but analysis revealed it did not contain poison and the fluid was not whisky. The autopsy surgeon asserts he saw no evidences of an attempted operation. Whether

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

If Mixed With Sulphur It Darkens So Naturally Nobody Can Tell

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft luster and appearance of abundance which is so attractive.

Famous Old Recipe for Cough Syrup

Easily and Cheaply Made at Home, But It Beats Them All for Quick Results.

Thousands of housewives have found that they can save two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough preparations, by using this well-known old recipe for making cough syrup. It is simple and cheap but it has no equal for prompt results. It takes right hold of a cough and gives immediate relief, usually stopping an ordinary cough in 24 hours or less.

Get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist, pour it into a pint bottle, and add plain granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. If you prefer, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, keeps perfectly, and lasts a family a long time.

It's truly astonishing how quickly it acts, penetrating through every air passage of the throat and lungs—loosens and raises the phlegm, soothes and heals the membranes, and gradually but surely the annoying throat tickle and dreaded cough disappear entirely. Nothing better for bronchitis, spasmodic croup, hoarseness or bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract known the world over for its healing effect on membranes.

Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

GRACE LUSK, FREED, WILL DEVOTE LIFE TO PRISON REFORM WORK

A physician started up the stairway to her, but she threatened him with the revolver and held him at bay.

She pointed to the wound in her side. "Will this kill me?" she inquired. The doctor hastened to assure her that it would not. She would be all right, he told her. The wound was too low to be fatal.

"Please go away for a moment," she asked. "It is very hard to do now."

Not understanding her purpose, the physician stepped out of sight to please her, and there came the sound of another shot.

But her second wound proved to be little more serious than the first and after a few months in the hospital, where she daily prayed that she would die, she was brought to trial for murder.

Here her ordeal was a severe one The finger of scorn was pointed at her. The morbidly curious flocked to the courtroom to hear her bare the details of her illicit, but cherished romance—the only one she had ever had.

He Deserted Her at Trial.

Then as a final blow to her dream, her erstwhile lover turned against her. He told of their visits to Chicago and Milwaukee and their clandestine meeting, always careful to place most of the blame upon her. He declared that she had "hounded him" in spite of his attempts to get rid of her and that she repeatedly had urged him to cast off his wife and marry her.

This the teacher denied. She listened undisturbed at his description of their associations until he came to the "hounding" charge, then she was on her feet in an instant. Dramatically she shouted, "It's a lie. I didn't hound him or ask him to marry me."

The excitement was so intense that seven women fainted and had to be carried out of the crowded courtroom.

The teacher next was put upon the stand, and she described the course of her shattered love affair.

"We met at a church social," she said. And she told of rides in his automobile when he was just a friend.

"He told me he was not happy with his wife," she continued. Then they talked about his book. She told of their first kiss.

It happened in her office in the Waukesha Y. M. C. A., where she taught a class in psychology.

"I was bent over my work," she said, almost painfully, "then he bent over and kissed me. I stood up and I said, 'Oh, you shouldn't do that'—and then we kissed again."

Her cheeks flamed at the remembrance. Here was a woman hungry for love, and then, suddenly, love had come into her life. True, it was illicit love, but sweet, nevertheless.

Then she, too, told of the trips around the country.

"Who paid the bills?" she was asked.

"Dr. Roberts paid his, and I paid my own."

Then she told of demading a "showdown."

"I asked him to tell his wife," she said, "and he told me he would—but he didn't.

"Finally I told him that if he did not, I would. I even wrote a letter to her, but he intercepted it.

"One day I telephoned to his home. I was told he was at his office, so I called there. He told me he could not talk, as some one was present.

"I went then to his office and he came out, saying: 'What do you want, Miss Lusk?' All I could say was, 'Miss Lusk!'

"'Grace,' he said, 'what do you want?' I again demanded that he tell his wife. She was there. Instead, he took me out of the office and we walked in the park.

"He promised me then he would tell her. 'Do you love me?' I asked, and he said he did. He even kissed me then.

"Next day his wife telephoned to me. She said she wanted to talk to me, and I told her I was anxious, too, to talk to her. All that morning I had been thinking of suicide. I had finally decided that I would go away and try to forget.

"She came and she taunted me and she called me names—such names!

"She said she did not believe her husband and I had been together, so I got out his letters to me and in the desk where they were I found the revolver.

"I showed them to her and she became abusive. I listened until I could stand it no longer—then everything went blank, blank!

"Next thing I knew I was being carried out of the house on a stretcher."

That finished her story. A short time later she was carried kicking and screaming from the room to begin her prison term. The jury had sentenced her to 19 years in the Waupun penitentiary.

Four years filled with illness, sorrow and hopelessness dragged by. Then about a year ago, Gov. Blaine paroled her so that she might be taken to a sanitarium for surgical treatment, physicians having informed him that continued incarceration would prove fatal to her.

Slow and uncertain has been her recovery, but her pardon, recently granted, has given her hope of doing yet something for humanity, even though life for its own sake now means little to her.

WIFE UNDESIRABLE IN 14-ROOM HOUSE WITH SERVANTS AND AUTOS

...ank, she replied I would have to ...Mr. Cromwell at his office. I ...ed to the back door and, when re... admittance there, I became ...erate, smashed a kitchen win... and entered anyway.

"Inside, Mrs. Mulford rushed at ... placed a pistol at my head, and ... 'This is my house; not yours. ... if you don't go away, I shall ...shot to kill.' I asked Mrs. Mulford ...at she meant by threatening me ...h a pistol when she claimed to ...e my best friend. I had in my hand ...a dog's leash. When she threat... ...ed me with the pistol, I did flour... ...this. It was not a horsewhip as ...s been testified. I did not strike ...her. One of the officers made her ...ve up the pistol, and she threat... ...ed me with arrest. I got into ...mmunication with my attorney ...nd he advised me to leave the place ...mptly."

The testimony of Cohn showed clearly that Mrs. Cromwell's "unbearable" life was at least relieved now and then by diverting incidents. He admitted his fondness for the debutant, admitted they had for years kept up a clandestine correspondence and refused to say whether he now desires to marry her. Although he confessed he had addressed her in letters as "dearest" and "honey girl," he emphatically denied he had ever so much as kissed her hand.

"Never Had Any Real Happiness."

Apparently theirs was a strange friendship. While she occupied his apartment in Los Angeles, gardenias and candy arrived from Cohn almost daily. Across the continent, they telephoned to each other. On several occasions he gave her money and once permitted her to draw from his account $1000 to pay her fare to California and to him.

When asked by her attorney to tell the story of her life with Cromwell, Mrs. Cromwell said:

"We were married in 1917. I never had any real happiness with him. There was no enjoyment in my home life. He discouraged me in everything I undertook. He refused to permit me to play golf, did not want me to go horseback riding or dance or go anywhere. He never invited anyone to our home, and was discourteous even to our Larchmont neighbors. He never brought me flowers, even on our anniversaries. He never took me to a theater in his life.

"He destroyed my love for him. Not even after that I tried hard to love him again. Do I love him now? No. After what he has done to me, the last spark of affection I had for him is dead."

In the earlier part of her testimony, Mrs. Cromwell contented herself with mere insinuations regarding the character and alleged duplicity of the housekeeper who, for years, had been her dearest friend. Under pressure of a gruelling cross-examination, however, the wife finally hurled into the open her charges that Mrs. Mulford had for some time maintained improper relations with Cromwell.

"No Nightgowns, Only Pajamas."

When Mrs. Cromwell took the stand she was asked at the outset by her attorney, Max D. Steuer, about her meeting and subsequent acquaintance with Bernard Karman, one of the man mentioned in charges of the plaintiff.

Mrs. Cromwell said she was introduced by Mrs. Mulford to Karman. She admitted visiting Woodmanstan Inn with him, but declared she was accompanied by Miss Trimble and the date was arranged by Mrs. Mulford. She further said Mrs. Mulford always made her dates between her and Mr. Karman.

"Did Mr. Karman ever enter your room?" asked Mr. Steuer.

"He did not."

"Did you ever go anywhere unless Mrs. Mulford was along?"

"She was always with me and participated with me," replied the witness.

"It has been testified by one of the Cromwell maids that in 1921 she heard loud walking and she came downstairs at 2:30 o'clock and saw you in the hall attired in a nightgown and a robe over it. Had you ever worn a nightgown for five years previous?" Mr. Steuer asked.

"I never wore a nightgown. I always wore pajamas."

Mrs. Cromwell emphatically denied the testimony of two maids that Irene Mills had entered her room or had been in her room that night.

"Who ran everything about the Cromwell house?" pursued her lawyer.

"Mrs. Mulford."

"Did you have much to say in that house?"

"I had very little to say. Mrs. Mulford ran almost everything," she replied.

"Did Harry Cohn put your stockings on when you were about to go to the hospital?"

"That is not true. My sister, Mrs. Winslow, and Mrs. Mulford dressed me," was the reply.

Why She Changed Her Name.

Humphrey J. Lynch, representing Mr. Cromwell, brought out that Mrs. Cromwell had changed her name from "Barbary" to Barker when she was 16 years old.

"Were you ever married to R. J. Ronker?" asked Mr. Lynch.

"No, but it had been announced that we were to be married. It nevertook place," she replied.

"Mrs. Cromwell, did you know David Rice?" she was asked.

"I did."

She identified a photograph showing herself and Rice posing together on a boat bound for Halifax. It was in the early part of 1905.

"Were you on board taking a trip to Halifax and was Rice on also?"

"Yes, and I was with a party of guests."

She said at that time she was living on West Eighty-first street, and when asked when she moved from that address she replied:

"I never check up every move I make like some other people do."

"How long were you on the trip with Rice on that boat?" asked Mr. Lynch.

"I was not with Mr. Rice."

Mrs. Cromwell admitted that she had visited the apartment of Bernard Karman after her marriage three or four times.

"Did you ever own a pair of black pajamas in 1921?"

"Never," she answered.

She said Cohn visited her home in Larchmont in 1918 after her marriage, which was a little over a year after she wrote a letter to him in which she said "with all my love."

"Were you as fond of Cohn then as when you wrote him that letter?"

"I was always fond of Mr. Cohn," Mrs. Cromwell replied.

"Did Mr. Cohn send you flowers while you were in the hospital in 1918?"

"He sent flowers very often, but not daily."

"Did you attend the Army-Navy football game in 1919 with Cohn?"

"I don't remember," replied Mrs. Cromwell.

"Now, Mrs. Cromwell, there is no question but that Cohn was at the bungalow at Asbury Park in 1920 when you were stopping there," said Mr. Lynch.

"He came there before he was injured."

"Who telephoned for Cohn?"

"Mrs. Mulford did the telephoning. I also had telephoned to Mr. Cohn."

Allowance of $2000 a Month.

"After Mr. Cohn was injured and was at your bungalow, did you nurse him?"

"No. A waiter from a nearby inn did."

In the winter of 1920, Mrs. Cromwell said, when she visited Los Angeles with Mrs. Mulford, they stopped at the home of Cohn and his mother. She said she had only met Cohn's mother once before that time. She said Cohn made the arrangements for her living with his mother and father.

"Did you tell your husband where you were going?"

"No," replied the witness.

Later Mrs. Cromwell testified that Cohn moved out of his parents' home to another house and she communicated with him by telephone.

She said she had the use of Cohn's limousine while she was in Los Angeles and that she and Mrs. Mulford never paid the Cohns anything for board during the three months they were in California.

Mrs. Cromwell admitted she had opened an account with the Pacific Bank in her maiden name after her marriage and that she gave checks to Cohn.

"Why did you give him checks?"

"Oh, for stock in the movies," she answered.

"Why were some of the checks cashed in Rector's?"

"I think I asked him to get them cashed for me."

She said her husband had been very penurious toward her and that the reason she had opened up the account was so she could make investments without Mr. Cromwell knowing it. She said she was receiving then an allowance of $2000 a month from her husband, which she deposited in this account. She also testified that she had bought stock and her dresses with checks on this bank.

"Wasn't this a deception on your part?" asked Mr. Lynch.

"No. Mrs. Mulford inspired me to open this account."

Alkali in Shampoos Bad for Washing Hair

Many soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much free alkali which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It is very cheap and beats anything else all to pieces. You can get Mulsified at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulsified in a cup or glass with a little warm water is all that is required. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub the Mulsified cocoanut oil in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to manage. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff. Be sure your druggist gives you Mulsified.

MAUDE ADAMS AND THE MYSTERY OF HER RETIREMENT FROM STAGE

when she was quite small, in Salt Lake City and in San Francisco. At the age of 6 she was sent to school. She remained in school 10 years. Born a Presbyterian, as the phrase goes, she was educated as a Persbyterian. She attended the Presbyterian School for Girls in the Utah capital. In 1888, when she reached "sweet 16," Maude migrated to New York, her mother going along. It has been said that the Presbyterians tried hard to educate the histrionic trend out of her, but the girl seemed born for the stage.

Five Years in Drew's Company.

When the little Presbyterian from the Mormon stronghold reached the Mecca of all Americans' artistic dreams, otherwise Manhattan Island, Duncan B. Harrison engaged her to play Moyna Sullivan in "The Paymaster." It was not long until E. H. Sothern discovered that the little Westerner had unusual talent. He annexed the new play-girl, giving her good parts in "The Highest Bidder" and "Lord Chumley," the latter being the play which had made the elder Sothern famous.

One night in March, 1889, Miss Adams essayed an ingenue role, that of Dot Bradbury in "A Midnight Bell" at a Broadway house. She was a hit almost from the start. The play was a success for two seasons. Maude Adams being the chief factor in its success.

Comes now into the career of Maude Adams a romantic mystery. He who plays the role therein is the late Charles Frohman, the illustrious maker and manager of stage stars who, as he was going down with the Lusitania after the German torpedo struck that proud craft in 1915, remarked:

"Death, after all, is the great adventure."

Charles Frohman saw Maude Adams as Dot Bradbury, saw her time and again. He saw also that she had a great future, if managed properly; and he made up his mind to do the managing. He did it, for years. Miss Adams began playing under Frohman auspices in 1890, in a stock company at first. For a couple of years she had young-girl parts in several popular plays of the period, now forgotten. Then came a period of five years as John Drew's leading woman. In half a dozen dramas she played opposite the inimitable and undying Drew, he who came to St. Louis only a few weeks ago along with the similarly deathless Mrs. Leslie Carter.

A full quarter of a century ago Maude Adams blossomed into a star. Since then, until her retirement about three years ago, she has remained full-blown, a perennial undamaged by time and change. It was as "Lady Babbie," the play which James M. Barrie wrote from his delightful novel, "The Little Minister," that Miss Adams achieved stardom. She opened in that role at Washington in the summer of 1897. For three seasons the play ran, with increasing triumph.

Barrie virtually adopted Maude Adams as his model around which to write plays. When she went over to England he had long talks with her. He found her suited exactly to his artistic requirements, Barrie has said that Maude Adams, in his opinion, is the most delightful actress on the English-speaking stage. He wrote for "Peter Pan" and other plays. As Peter Pan, a boy's part, "the boy who never grew up," it is probable that Miss Adams will be remembered longest and most fondly. Nowadays, when anybody thinks of Peter Pan, the name of Maude Adams pops into mind.

The Salt Lake celebrity has essayed Shaksperian roles with high success. As Juliet, for instance, she is remembered with keen admiration. As Rosalind in "As You Like It," she also shone brightly. From Barrie to other dramatists she has hopped happily, always scoring triumphs. Since 1900, when she appeared for the first time in "Romeo and Juliet," she has been starred in "L'Aiglon," "Quality Street," "The Pretty Sister of Jose," Hop o' My Thumb," "The Little Minister," "Peter Pan," "What Every Woman Knows," "Joan of Arc," "As You Like It," "Chanticleer" and several other plays of high appeal.

St. Louis has seen and heard her many times. Her last appearance here was at the American Theater in "A Kiss for Cinderella," a Barrie medium, the week beginning Feb. 11, 1918. In his review of that week's opening, Richard L. Stokes wrote in the Post-Dispatch of "the artless, wistful, waif-like and almost elfin personality of Miss Maude Adams." Continuing, he said:

"It is more than 20 years now since the unerring eye of the Scotch playwright and novelist picked Miss Adams as the actress inevitably ordained to interpret his woman characters. They are domestic and romantic, rather than tragic or lyrical; and so also is her talent. They are mostly quaint, odd, brisk, little creatures, concealing dauntless spiritual valliance beneath a fragile physical exterior; and such are the temperamental and bodily qualifications of Miss Adams. They have a winning feminine sweetness and softness, with a dash of tartness and mischief; they combine whimsicality and caprice with shrewd worldly wisdom; they have a boundless capacity for giving and receiving affection and they are at the same time prone to variable moods and immovably constant at heart. These traits are entirely at the command of Miss Adams' art."

Shocked by Frohman Tragedy.

Now, returning to the Frohman incident—much more, in fact, than a mere incident, being indubitably a vital element in the career of Miss Adams and strongly suspected of being the chief romance factor of her personal life. There were rumors of the engagement of Frohman and Miss Adams. All these she denied. It was said, also, with no admitted authority, that Miss Adams and her manager had been married in Europe. These rumors but gave fuel to the augmenting mystery of Maude Adams.

Early in May, 1915, shortly after the Lusitania tragedy, Miss Adams was playing in "Quality Street" at the Grand Opera House in Kansas City. Shortly before time for the curtain to ascend for the matinee she was told that a dispatch from Queenstown stated that Charles Frohman's body had been recovered.

Miss Adams decided that she would not go on for the matinee performance. The theater management, unable to get money from the bank, deposit already having been made and the closing hour at hand, could not refund ticket money to the audience. Being so informed, Miss Adams consented to go on, after a long delay, during which she was weeping. She got through the matinee, but that night the theater was dark.

The manager of the "Quality Street" company took occasion to deny that Miss Adams and Charles Frohman had been married. "I regret very much," he said, "this unfortunate publicity. I wish it were not necessary to mention it. Naturally, in the years that Miss Adams has been under Mr. Frohman's direction, a close friendship had sprung up between them. That, of course, has led to the absurd report of their marriage."

Miss Adams is said to have had implicit faith in Charles Frohman. At rehearsals, when he would correct her and recite a line, saying "This is how that line should be spoken," she would say, "Yes, Mr. Frohman," and follow his directions like a child.

some drug had been administered to the girl, and her companion, or possibly companions, in the cottage feared she was dying and so hastened to dispose of the body by throwing it in the sea is a guess merely. That there was a quarrel is believed to be more likely because of the bruise on her temple.

The latter supposition is given some suport in the report of an automobile express driver and his wife that they saw a man and woman quarreling in an autoombile Sunday night near the place where Miss Mann's body was found, but the detectives hold to an opinion that Miss Mann was unconscious when taken from the cottage, that she was not fighting half-clad in an automobile and that she had not disrobed on the cold, damp beach.

SLAIN DANCER ANOTHER VICTIM OF THE LURE OF FAME IN MOVIES

ing towns and sent another to Ensenada, seaport of Lower California, Mexico, where Clark, the motion picture actor associate of Miss Mann said he had been on the trip that placed him in San Diego on the Sunday night of the girl's death. The search for the man includes, too, search for the hat and fur which Fritzi was known to have worn when she said good-by to her mother to go to the "house party." These were not found among belongings left in the cottage or strewn along the beach 10 miles further north on the way to Los Angeles and Hollywood, where the little dancer hoped some day to star.

In their investigation in Los Angeles and Hollywood, the San Diego detectives found two motion picture men who knew the girl well, but were convinced these men knew nothing of her death. Fourteen other persons when the officers had listed for questioning were out of town and had left no word as to date of return, the detectives reported. In Long Beach the detectives visited the home of Mrs. Bernice Edwards, a long-time friend of Miss Mann, and there found in a suit case which Miss Mann had left there on a recent visit a powerful medicine. It is believed she procured this at the advice of a physician and an effort is being made to trace it to its source. Miss Edwards furnished the officers with no valuable information, saying Miss Mann was infatuated with a man in the motion picture business, but declined to name him. Miss Edwards and Miss Mann are said to have been friends in Denver, Col., before their families came to California.

Funeral services for the dancer were held one week after her death, with only her mother, brother and a few intimate friends present besides Rabbi Waxwell Dubin, who officited. The deceased was of Jewish faith, as also is Dr. L. L. Jacobs. During the severe questioning of him, Dr. Jacobs said he had tried to help the girl because of their mutual religious faith.

HELP KIDNEYS BY DRINKING MORE WATER

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys and Help Neutralize Irritating Acids.

Kidney and bladder irritations often result from acidity, says a noted authority. The kidneys help filter this acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it may remain to irritate and inflame. The sufferer is in constant dread.

Bladder weakness, most folks call it. While it is extremely annoying and sometimes very painful, this is often one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Begin drinking lots of soft water, also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast. Continue this for two or three days. This will help neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer are a source of irritation to the bladder, which then acts normal again.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to disorders caused by acid irritation. Jad Salts causes no bad effects whatever.

Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink which may quickly relieve your bladder irritation. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

AMAZING SALE! World-Famous Pocket Series Offered Until February 28 at Sensational Reduction! Size of Books 3½x5 inches. Books Printed Uniformly; Bound in Heavy Card Cover Stock. For Limited Time We Are Cutting Price to 5c per Book in Order to Make an Important Experiment That May Establish New Publishing Standards!

Only 5c Per Book Until Feb. 28

I have sold 25,000,000 copies of my pocket series in three years. Over 500,000 book buyers are now on my mailing list—the greatest aggregation of book buyers in the world. After careful investigation I find that it cost approximately a million dollars to sell these 25,000,000 books. That means that for every dime I received I had to spend five cents in order to make the sale. So I have really been getting only five cents for each book I sold so far. I have solved the production problem—I produce these books at an astonishingly low cost. The actual cost above the price of raw material is very slight indeed. This is because of especially made machinery that makes a joke of production problems. Mass production has cut the cost of the book, but distribution costs remain the same—5c per book. That is the problem I am working upon now, and I may solve it. I have a plan which I intend to try out with readers of this announcement, and if it works I shall then go to the general public. Everything depends on this present announcement. It must "make good," or the price will remain 10c per copy after February 28, 1923. In brief, what I must do is simply this; the sales cost per book must be reduced from 5c per book to 1c per book. That means we must get five times as much business on the same advertising and distribution outlay. Am I asking too much? That remains to be seen. The response to this amazing announcement will decide the question. There is nothing so convincing as an actual test, and that is the real reason for this special sale.

JUST OUT OF COLLEGE

By W. E. Hill

This, my dear, was one of the leading lights of the Senior Dramatic Society. But not for nothing did Gordon create a sensation doing Louka in "Arms and the Man." He's carrying on the good work, striving like mad to make the community players letter perfect in "The Tragedy of Man."

Wallace is learning papa's business very much from the ground up. Wallace busted out junior year—he's listed in the catalogue "ex-1923." Wallace was bent on marrying a Follies girl and going in for art, but papa thought differently.

"Nineteen twenty-two this way!" The reunion luncheon in the Rose Room of the Hotel Plazaza is being lavishly attended by loyal alumnae from far and near. The group in the lobby, waiting for the clans to gather, numbers five of 1922's most representative girls. From left to right, we have with us this noontide: Mabel Oval, permanent class secretary and treasurer; Harriet Gobang, easily the most popular girl in the class; Lura Applejohn, the class beauty; Lillian Snee (she wrote those perfectly splendid verses in the Lit, beginning "close not the door, a chaliced vista gleaming with naked catkins and bitter sweet yawns before," etc.), and last, but not least, Isabelle Mary Gregg, just a nice, sweet girl. Isabelle Mary was class president senior year, and was greatly praised for her rendering of Petruchio in "Taming of the Shrew." Isabelle packed every single line with meaning, those lucky ones who were present at senior dramatics affirm. It's going to be such a merry party! Already Harriet (she has such a sense of the ridiculous, my dear) is saying, "And will you ever forget the time Kate Hogg's room-mate dressed up in the watchman's clothes and nearly scared her to death!"

Carolyn is doing a little post-graduate work preparatory to going up to the neck in settlement work. She's specializing in scientific feeding—with reference to the very young and the very old.

The late crop of wild oats is no less wild because it happens after graduation. Just look at Harvey B. Tonge! The leader of all Y. M. C. A. gatherings junior and senior years. "Now, men," he used to announce, "I want every one who can, to come to the Y. M. next Friday evening and hear the Rev. Doctor Brankle of Montague Center, speak on his work in China. Let's show Doctor Brankle that we're with him to a man in his great work!" And now will you look at him! Spending the evening with cousins in Walrus street, playing hearts for prizes, mind you. Harvey is carrying off second prize—a padded gray silk muffler!

The fraternity hound. Brother Wooley of the noble brotherhood of Phi Magenta Tau, is on a bi-monthly trip to the halls of his Alma Mater. Seven months in the cold, cold world and the bond business, have not caused Brother Wooley to forget for an instant that the sacred bonds of Phi Magenta Tau are more precious than anything else in life—as Brother Wooley will tell the assembled Phi Magentas on the eve of his arrival, and whom Phi Magenta Tau hath joined let no worldly interest put asunder.

The cautious graduate. Selby believes in looking twice if not thrice before leaping into the world of affairs. Selby is not sure just what vocation his presence will grace—poetry, maybe, or perhaps a fling at the diplomatic service. Certainly not papa's offer of a job in the woolen mills, where you work up from the bottom. To be on the safe side, Selby is going to travel in Spain and Italy for a couple of years. Just until he finds himself.

Oh, those college friendships! They just don't last any time. Marguerite and Grace had a terrible crush on each other all senior year, and now they're lucky to meet once in a blue moon. Marguerite is engaged and Grace is taking up basket weaving. Just nothing in common.

Young man in the cloak and suit trade doing his darnedest to look like something just out of college. If those college boys will set the styles——!

"Well, by gee, if it isn't old 'Kidney Rutherford! Seen any of the fellas? Say, how about getting up a little reunion some night next week?" etc., etc. The very college spirited graduate wants to get up a little song fest. "We gotta do something to the 1922 bunch together!" he adds.

RADIO—For the Amateur and Expert

975 MILES COVERED BY K S D IN DAYLIGHT

Record Established When Verified Letter Is Received From Amateur in Massachusetts.

The Radio Department of the Post-Dispatch recently received a letter from Pehr Barnes Moller of West Brookfield, Mass., saying that on the afternoon of Dec. 30, 1922, he plainly picked up signals transmitted by Station K S D.

Believing this to be an unusual record for daylight transmission, further verification was requested, and in response, the following letter was received:

Jan. 8, 1923.

Radio Editor,
St. Louis Post-Dispatch,
St. Louis, Mo.

Dear Sir: In answer to your letter of Jan. 4, I am sending you the following verification: On Saturday afternoon, Dec. 30, 1922, I sat down at my set at 3 p. m. (Eastern Standard time), and got Medford Hillsides, Mass. After I had listened to them for about a half hour, I started tuning for "bigger game." At (3:45) three-forty-five, I heard K S D (E. S. T.). Your station was coming in as clear and loud as W B Z does on a perfect night, and they are within 30 miles of our house. I listened to you till you signed off, stating the next transmission would be at 5 p. m. (E. S. T.).

I have heard your station a couple of times since, in the afternoon, but not so clear as Saturday afternoon, Dec. 30.

My set is of the super-regenerative type, and my aerial consists of two wires, 100 feet long, running almost due east and west. Although my set does not have two steps of amplification, I feel pretty proud of it, as I made it myself, and hope to add on to it later. I am 16 years old, and my ambition is to become a first-class wireless operator, and so am having quite a time learning to read code signals. I think you very much for your little book about your station and hope to hear from you and your station again. Yours truly, (Signed) PEHR BARNES MOLLER.

It is an established fact that radio transmission during daylight hours is approximately one-half that which is possible after 9 or 10 p. m. or even later, at night. Spanning the 975 miles air-line distance to West Brookfield, Mass., therefore, establishes K S D's best record for daytime transmission.

"Tuning In."

Tuning is accomplished by careful variation of the coils and condensers, while using an excessive value of tickler coupling or plate inductance, just within the "hissing" region. To "clear up" the voice of music, the tuning should be maintained to give the best note of lowest pitch, while the regeneration is gradually decreased until the beat note just fades out, and the radiophone signals alone remain. Distortion or whistling at this point is gradually eliminated by a very careful further reduction in regeneration, with a slight readjustment of the tuning circuit for maximum signal intensity. The tuning of distant radio telephone signals is critical, and will be learned by the beginner only after some practice.

Foundation for Coils.

Tuning coils, loose couplers and variometers can be made from all kinds of round cartons, such as contain oatmeal, cracker dust, salt, etc.

Inventor in Discussion Gives Details of Flewelling Circuit

New Hook-Up Secures Distance and Great Amplification Using Only One Tube and No Ground Connection.

This article will describe a new radio receiving instrument which has proved to be perhaps the most sensitive one-tube receiver that we yet have. Its ability to receive from great distances and its volume are very satisfying, to say the least.

In the diagram shown it will be seen that the circuit is practically the same as the usual regenerative type with these differences.

The coil L2 contains considerably more inductance than is usual and there is also added to the circuit an additional bank of three rather large fixed condensers.

In operating this receiver one will hear a small high-pitched, shrill whistle, showing that there is a continual train of oscillations occurring. Super-regenerative receivers have this characteristic whistle and the theory is advanced that these oscillations form a variation frequency to periodically change the condition of the circuit as regards its positive negative or zero resistance condition and thus prolong the condition that the regenerative receiver is in just before it spills over or begins to howl, after which time zero resistance of the circuit predominates.

Theory of Circuit.

It is not for me perhaps to question the theories advanced by better men than myself, but I find it so hard to adjust this theory to this receiver that I am at least opening the question for discussion. It seems to me that some other action is taking place. In this receiver one is greatly impressed by the large voltage obtained at the grid. Super-circuits and the one shown here depend for their action upon supplying to the circuit a separate train of oscillations and it is only after this train is supplied to this circuit that the grid becomes so highly charged.

Either an aerial or ground connection is used with this set, but not both at the same time.

The idea is advanced here with due respect that possibly the effects secured do not depend upon any variation of the resistance in the circuit but upon the operation of the tube under different characteristic curve conditions, or that there is occurring a new action with which we are not familiar.

Won't Work With Plate Variometer.

Another point of great interest with this circuit is, that so far it has not been possible to secure operation by using a variometer in the plate circuit to replace coil L2. In a regenerative receiver, regeneration may be secured in various ways, but the action of this circuit is such that the question has arisen as to whether or not it is a regenerative circuit. The fact that a variometer or condenser has not proved satisfactory, of course, might be explained by saying that the right values were not used, but this is not a suitable explanation because so many different values have been tried unsuccessfully.

Too, the maintenance of the low frequency oscillations depends upon the coupling of coils L1 and L2 and it may be that a condition has been set up whereby the incoming wave train is carried by the vastly more powerful low frequency oscillations tending to reach their amplitude in the same manner that a balloon is carried along by the wind and will attempt to approach the same speed.

A plain detector tube will not function properly in this set. It is necessary to use a hard amplifier tube that can successfully handle the increased grid charge and the large plate voltage of 100 volts or more. Radiotron No. 202 tubes have given excellent results.

Correct results are only obtainable by a strict adherence to the layout shown, in which coils L1 and L2 are 50 and 75 turns (about 90 turns will give even better results) honeycomb coils respectively (for 360 meter work), and are varied for different wave lengths. The following values are used for condensers:

C1, .0005 mfd. variable; C2, .00025 mfd.; .006 mfd. for each of the three fixed condensers C3, C4, C5; C6, .00025 mfd. variable. The grid leak R1 and condenser leak R2 are best made by pencil or ink marks across the face of the condensers between their terminals. R1 is critical, as it is varied, the shrill whistle will change in tone, increasing in pitch as the resistance is lowered. R2 is not at all critical and is of rather low value.

Antenna System.

Ground and antenna should not be used together. Either may be connected to the input point at condenser C6. The set may be used with a loop, or within, say, 25 miles nothing but the set itself is needed. Condenser C6 is not necessary for operation except that various grounds and antennas vary so much in their capacity value that they may tend to stop the oscillation of the set. It has been found that more satisfactory results are obtained by putting the energy into the set through this condenser which compensates for these various capacities, although the same results might be obtained by the more troublesome method of changing coils L1 and L2.

While, as can be seen, the impedence contained in the phone windings is used to balance with the condensers C3, C4 and C5, yet we are not concerned with its value. Any number of phones may be used in the circuit. These phone coils may simply act to take the place of the large inductances used in other super-regenerative circuits.

Does Not Howl.

This circuit does not spill over and does not howl. It is very quiet in its operation, but during long distance reception it will amplify in proportion to the distance the various disturbances in the space between the sending and receiving stations such as static, etc.

For this reason a distant station will be received with more or less noise depending upon the time of year and other conditions.

This receiver offers to those interested in long distance reception a very reliable, cheap and extremely sensitive receiver, and to those interested in experimental work unlimited possibilities for research.

There really is an opportunity for discussion as to how the results are obtained and while reception so far has always been at least equal to two stages of Radio frequency amplification, yet on more than one occasion the set has acted as though it had a stage or two of audio amplification. A broadcasting station 10 miles distant has come in so loudly that every word and syllable was audible in a room 30 feet square.

(Copyright, 1922, Radio Digest Pub. Co., Chicago.)

A Hint for the Battery.

When using a storage battery in connection with a radio receiver, allow the battery to stand a time just after being charged before it is placed in use. Otherwise the unstable condition of the voltage will cause disagreeable noises in the head phones, caused by the carrying amplification of the tubes.

STANDARDIZATION OF RADIO INSTRUCTION FOR THE ARMY

Officers and Enlisted Men Receive Thorough Training in Signal Corps Camps.

A definite program of instruction in radio, as part of the schooling of all Signal Corps officers and other officers assigned for training from the regular army, National Guard, Reserve Corps and civilian military training camps, has been laid down by a board of army officers.

The course for company officers includes approximately 1309 hours of study for signal officers and 1285 hours for officers of other arms. Courses extend over a period of nine months, commencing in September. Advanced studies in radio are prescribed in the tactical and administrative course for signal officers assigned to units larger than divisions. This is also a nine months' course and covers study and instruction periods totaling 1235 hours. Communication engineering, technique, equipment, design and development, is taught in the advanced technical course. During a total of 1200 hours, divided into eight subjects.

Fifty-six officers and 200 enlisted men are now studying radio at Camp Vail. Thirty-five are officers from various corps, 15 Signal Corps students, two Marine Corps, two Philippine Scout, and two Cuban officers. The enlisted men are studying to become operators and electricians.

Titles for the Radio Enthusiasts.

Someone has suggested the name of "Radioowners" for those of us who have sets and listen in. Certainly it is better than most of the awkward terms in use today. "Listeners-in" is too long, "Radiophans" or "Radiofans" sounds like the name of an instrument, and we could hardly designate them as "receivers."

Commercial Reports.

Tulane University, W A A C, is now broadcasting the Commerce reports at 7:05 p. m., central time, on Friday's.

STATIONS WARNED AGAINST SENDING PERSONAL MESSAGES

Operators of broadcasting stations are warned by the radio section of the Department of Commerce not to communicate with other stations by either telegraphy or telephony as broadcasting licenses do not permit direct communication. Some stations have been guilty of acknowledging letters, telegrams and telephone calls, which, the department points out, is direct communication. The suspension or revocation of the operator's license is the penalty for infractions of this rule. Owners are also cautioned to observe the rules laid down by law, else their station licenses may be endangered.

Care in Handling Crystals.

When handling crystals, use a small pair of pincers to place the crystal in position. If the mineral comes in contact with the fingers, it is liable to impair the sensitivity.

RADIO—For the Amateur and Expert

CLOSING OF 27 COASTAL STATIONS CONSIDERED

Early Action Will Probably Be Taken on Recommendations of Naval Radio Officials.

The value of radio in the United States Navy, both in peace and war, is testified to by four Read Admirals and three Captains in a report seeking, by the elimination of unimportant shore stations to increase the value of the navy afloat. These naval experts declare an efficient radio service gives a nation that most important of all war assets: The power to strike hard with its fighting force.

The abandonment or transfer of 27 minor naval radio and compass stations was recommended recently by the Special Naval Board on Shore Stations, headed by Rear Admiral Hugh Rodman, and was forwarded to Congress by Secretary Denby with his approval. Disposal of these useless radio shore stations will make for naval sea efficiency. "Every dollar saved through the elimination of the stations, whether in pay of operators or for maintenance, willl be used to improve fleet communication and make for efficiency and mobility of the sea forces of the nation," said a naval radio officer, explaining the board's recommendations.

Communication experts of the navy believe that when these naval radio stations are closed, commercial interests now served by these stations will immediately establish new public stations equipped with modern apparatus, which will guarantee better service to the public and not interfere with broadcasting. Some of them had been maintained at a cost ten times the return, since the war, because no local public radio service facilities were available, but the navy reached its limit and their end is near.

Navy to Give Up No Prime Stations.

All the high-powered naval radio stations, such as Arlington, Annapolis, Porto Rico, Canal Zone, Honolulu, Guam and certain stations in Alaska, as well as the semi-high powered stations in the navy yards at the 12 important naval bases, will be retained together with a number of minor stations now in use. Today there are 65 traffic stations and 33 compass stations in operation, requiring a personnel of 79 officers and 1257 men. The elimination of 27 would leave 71 active stations, sufficient to meet the navy's needs ashore.

Commenting on the recommendations made, the report stated as follows in part:

The Value of Naval Radio Service.

"Radio communication is of paramount importance to the fleet. The maintenance of a complete transocean and coastwise system of radio communication by the Navy Department is necessary for the efficient management and operation of the fleets of the United States in peace and war. The control of various independent operations can, through it, be more closely associated and made to conform with the general plan of action. Efficient radio service provides the means to obtain and disseminates information and gives a nation that most important of all war assets—the power to strike hard with its fighting force. In time of peace, efficient radio service is also essential to commerce. Superiority in this service by the navy is a factor of the same order of importance as superiority in number or types or in the trained efficiency of ships. The naval radio system is an integral part of the navy. It must be maintained and operated during peace in such a way as to be of the greatest value in time of national emergency.

"Radio compass stations are not only of great importance to the fleet, but also they are immensely helpful to commerce. Their value has been demonstrated, but the best locations are still being determined through experiment. Their utility to commerce demands that radio compass stations be established at all important seaports as well as at points of importance solely to the fleet.

"The development of radio telegraphy is so rapid and the administrative considerations which govern the operative status of present stations and the creation of new stations are subject to such frequent change that the board makes no recommendation as to reducing the operative status of any existing station or the development of new stations."

Foreign Reception.

During the recent transatlantic tests no fewer than 125 individual amateur radio stations in the United States have been heard by European, whereas only 24 stations were heard during the entire test last year. Some of the stations were heard 4000 miles or more. The majority of the stations are located in Connecticut, Maine, Massachusetts, New Jersey and New York.

Loud Speaker Hint.

If a loud speaker is placed on a soft rubber cushion about three-quarters of an inch thick the sound will be much clearer. The rubber must be of a certain density to prevent a lateral movement of the loud speaker.

Perfect Contact.

All electric contacts should be soldered. They provide a continuous metal contact between wires, and this does away, to a large extent, with losses by resistance.

RADIO QUESTIONS ANSWERED.

All Queries Must Be Accompanied by the Name and Address of the Sender.

Q. Please tell me where I can buy a practical book on radio with diagrams. G. H. R.

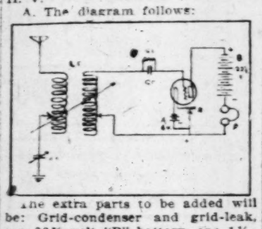
A. You will find the names of dealers elsewhere on this page, from whom radio books may be obtained.

Q. Please tell me how deep a ground rod should be driven for a lightning conductor. H. M. J.

A. About 6 feet.

Q. I have a loose-coupler crystal set with a variable condenser connected in series with the aerial. Could I change this into a "peanut" tube set, using my loose-coupler for a tuner? If so, please publish the hook-up and list the additional apparatus which will be necessary. E. H. V.

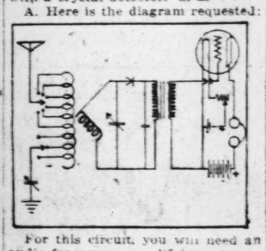
A. The diagram follows:



The extra parts to be added will be: Grid-condenser and grid-leak, one 22½-volt "B" battery, one 1½-volt dry cell, one "peanut" tube, a socket and a rheostat.

Q. Please publish a hook-up showing how a "peanut" tube may be used to amplify signals detected with a crystal detector. S. L.

A. Here is the diagram requested:



For this circuit, you will need an audio-frequency amplifying transformer, a "peanut" tube, socket, rheostat, one 1½-volt dry cell, and a 45-volt "B" battery. The variable condenser across the secondary as indicated is not absolutely necessary, and may be omitted.

Q. (1) Does it make any difference how thick the box is made that holds the different parts of a radio set? (2) I am winding a coil and tapping it every 50 turns, and then every two; is that all right? (3) Can you give me any information in regard to the fixed detectors on the market? Are they better than ordinary detectors, and are they set on the best spot on the crystal? (4) My wire from the antenna to the set is very long. Could this decrease the loudness of the signals? (5) Is there anything I can do to make the sound on a crystal set louder?

A. (1) No. (2) You can obtain much finer tuning by taking off taps every turn for the first 10 turns, and then every tenth turn thereafter, if the coil has already been wound as you described, suggest that you connect a variable condenser across the coil, which will enable you to work in "between" the taps, so to speak. (3) Fixed or permanent crystal detectors are simply mineral detectors on which a sensitive spot has been found and permanently fixed so that jarring or vibration will not dislocate it. (4) Probably not, but the entire over-all length of the antenna and lead-in should not exceed 120 feet. (5) Yes, add amplifiers.

Q. What is a "peanut" tube? F. G.

A. A "peanut" tube is a vacuum tube which functions with a 1½-volt "A" battery for lighting the filament, instead of the usual 6-volt type. One dry cell is sufficient, and they are said to give about 90 hours' service. The tube operates equally well as an amplifier or detector.

Q. A question which I would like to have answered in your Queries Column: We have a radio and needles to say we enjoy the Post-Dispatch programs. My mother also loves to listen, but says that whenever she listens in it makes her have a nervous feeling and pains in her chest for several days. Is that due to the radio? If so, what is its cause? M. A. H.

A. We have never heard of pains in the chest resulting from listening in on a radio set.

Q. Where are stations WAAB and WMAJ? G. B.

A. WAAB, Times-Picayune, New Orleans, La.; WMAJ, Drover's Telegram, Kansas City, Mo.

Q. I am able to get, very distinctly, everything broadcast by KSD. However, WMAY and WCK are indistinct. Is there any kind of an attachment I can add to my set to enable me to hear more clearly the stations which transmit on 360 meters? N. E. W.

A. Yes, add a 43 or 23 plate variable condenser to your apparatus by connecting it in series with the aerial. This should enable you to hear the above mentioned stations very clearly.

Q. I noticed an article on the radio page stating that a new vacuum tube had been invented which used but one-fourth of an ampere for lighting the filament. Is this tube on the market yet? If so where can it be obtained: H. M.

A. Communicate with any of the dealers whose advertisements appear on the radio pages.

Q. Can a "peanut" tube be used in the Flewelling circuit?

A. Yes, with very satisfactory results.

Q. (1) Who is the Government radio inspector for this district, and what is his address? (2) Do you believe "peanut" tubes are equally satisfactory amplifying as detecting? K. B. J.

Ans. (1) Edward A. Bean, 629 Federal Building, Chicago, Ill. (2) It is our understanding that they are.

COMMITTEE TO STANDARDIZE RADIO APPARATUS SELECTED

Conference Recently Held in New York—Plans Discussed for National Agreement.

The conference on radio standardization which met in New York recently resulted in the unanimous agreement of about 100 representatives present that standards for radio apparatus and service should be formulated, but no definite plans were announced. It was agreed that a broadly representative national committee on standardization should be formed under the leadership of the Institute of Radio Engineers and the American Institute of Electrical Engineers. The procedure of the American Engineering Standards Committee will be followed by the committee in outlining standardization planned.

Localities Affect Transmission.

The range of transmitting and receiving radio messages depends upon the nautre of the territory lying between the transmitting and receiving stations, the greatest range for a given power being obtained over water. Any metal, particularly iron or steel, lying between the stations will cause loss of signal strength. Such metal may either be in the form of artificial structure, such as building framework or tin roofs, or may be in the form of ore deposits. Some regions of the country are noted for their poor location for radio reception. In many places it is possible to receive effectively from all directions but one, and it is usually found that in this direction a metallic structure or metal deposit is responsible for the lack of reception.

The Idle Battery.

Storage batteries which are to stand idle for a month or two should be fully charged before being put away. If the battery is permitted to stand for any length of time in a discharged condition, the plates will become white, an indication that sulphate is forming, which is very harmful to the cells.

Cat-Whiskers.

The cat-whisker of a crystal set should not be too long. Two inches of steel violin E string is about the proper length. The spring should rest very lightly on the crystal. If the spring is longer than two inches external vibration on jarring will cause the spring to change position and jump off the sensitive spot. Never try to use cat-gut string for cat-sylvania plans courses in Radio, this spring.

Radiograms.

Australia has two radio broadcasting stations, each giving a regular program once a week.

Plans are being made to link New York City, Buenos Aires, Paris, London and Berlin, with new super-powered international radio telegraph stations.

The United States now has six transmitting stations and one central receiving station along the Atlantic Coast which serve to connect this country with Europe.

Because of the loneliness of lighthouse keepers, who are isolated for weeks, even months, radio telephones are being installed aboard lightships at sea and in lighthouses around New York.

Fifty-one radiophone stations are broadcasting daily the national crop and market reports of the Department of Agriculture. More than 15,000 individuals, firms and railroads co-operate in gathering the data broadcast throughout the country.

During a Caesarean operation recently performed in a hospital in Minneapolis Minn., surgeons fitted a radio head set to a patient after applying a local anesthesia. The patient's mind was soothed and distracted from the operation by music from a specially arranged band concert.

For the Notebook.

Wherever possible, the receiving set should be inclosed in a dustproof cabinet.

Radio insurance is now being offered covering fire, lightning, breakage and theft.

No fewer than 3500 patents relating to radio have been granted in the United States.

Radio waves vary up to thousands of meters in length. They travel in all directions and through all mediums.

Radio telephone messages have been sent successfully from balloons to the ground for distances up to 25 miles.

Many of the developments in wireless have come from boys building and experimenting with sets in the attics of their homes.

The United States army has perfected a method by which the fastest radio message can be caught on wax cylinders and reproduced at lower speed on dictaphone machines, making the message easy to read.

At the Show

—Next Week!

All Over America

—In 1923!

Next week—The big Automobile Show will be in full swing!

Many motor car manufacturers will bid for your attention—and your patronage.

Scores of automobiles will be on display—hundreds of claims will be made!

But—no claim made at the show will carry such compelling weight as Oakland's new and revolutionary "mileage-basis" plan!

Why?—Because 90% of those who buy an automobile at this show, or in 1923, are already owners of some make of car.

They know how to judge automobiles!

And for these critical 1923 buyers there has been evolved an entirely new method for judging motor cars—a method by which you can know, before you buy, the exact amount and kind of mileage you can rightfully demand in 1923.

Last year, you remember, Oakland guaranteed in writing the performance of its six-cylinder engine for 15,000 miles. (Incidentally, it cost less than a cent per car to make good this guarantee!)

And now — although this guarantee is continued, Oakland is about to make an additional announcement—surpassing, in its effect, even the remarkable performance guarantee.

Oakland will give you definite facts and figures enabling you to know, in advance, just what you may expect from an Oakland Six in continuous, satisfying mileage—the true measure of a motor car's value!

See this announcement!

Because—on the strength of these facts and figures, motorists here—and everywhere—will insist upon buying motor cars in 1923 upon a basis of actual mileage to be delivered!

Did Closed Cars Cost Too Much?

Thousands thought so. And prior to the Coach, they stuck to open cars.

Yet everyone wants closed car advantages provided they can also have genuine chassis value. Essex provides all these advantages at little more than open car cost.

So a Great Welcome Awaited the Coach

Essex invented the Coach to meet this urgent demand of thousands. It gives every essential closed car comfort. It is solid, quiet, durable and attractive in looks. Yet of course its greatest value is in the famous Essex chassis which world experts have called the finest of its size built. It fully has confirmed that verdict by official proof.

It is easily turned and parked in small spaces. Little attention is needed to keep it in prime condition. All controls are easy to reach and operate. Clutch and brake pedals require but a touch. You will like the response of wheel and throttle and its economy in fuel, oil and tires.

The body is lastingly sturdy and comfortable. The chassis is so durable and capable that its performance is a never failing delight.

ANNUAL AUTO SHOW WILL OPEN SATURDAY

Latest Model Passenger Cars and Accessories to Be Shown in Universal Building, 27th and Olive Streets.

The sixteenth annual St. Louis Automobile Show, staged by the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association, will open Saturday, Feb. 10, at noon, in the large three-story Universal Co., Inc., Building, at the northwest corner of Twenty-seventh and Olive streets.

It will also be open Sunday, Feb. 11. The exhibits include every make of automobile that is represented in St. Louis and 51 exhibits of accessories, supplies and equipment for automobiles made by the most important firms in St. Louis.

A large force of men is engaged at the Universal Building installing electric lights, signs, foliage and bunting for the decorations and lattice work, and a dozen men with mops and scrapers are busy cleaning the floors.

Elaborate Decorations.

The decoration scheme of the Automobile Show will be one of the most unusual ever seen at any show. A great storm door has been installed inside the main entrance which will be on Beaumont street, and on the wall of this storm partition a painting 18 feet long by 8 feet wide will be placed. Artist Taylor, who has painted the picture, has delineated the progression of transportation. He shows on his canvas the Indian with his drag sticks behind the horse, the ancient palanquin, the coach and four horses, the latter-day horse-drawn carriage, then the bicycle and the motor cycle, and last he has pictured the 1923 splendid automobile. A striking feature of the painting is that by ingenius "cut-outs" backed by electric lights, the headlights of the automobile, the motor cycle and the bicycle show brilliantly the side lights of the carriage, the torch of the palanquin bearers, the moon and the stars will shine naturally and realistically. This picture is at the main entrance of the show.

Within the building lattice work has been placed on all of the 300 pillars, and these in turn are closely intertwined with oak leaves and trailing vines, and the hangings throughout the building are of many colored pennants and the colors of the Automobile Show, which are purple and gold.

All possibility of congestion at the show has been avoided in making the aisles wider than usual, and the progress of the visitors to the second and third floors will be up a 20-foot wide incline or ramp. This incline is 100 feet long, so that the incline is so gradual that an automobile can be driven up it in high gear.

Cars Shown on All Floors.

Automobiles will be shown on each of the three floors. The accessory department will be on the second floor in the west half.

The public will be admitted to the show through an automobile door on Beaumont street at the corner of Olive street. Outside of this, covering the pavement will be an awning useful in case of bad weather and also as a wind-break. Exhibitors and dealers from out of town will be admitted through a small door on Beaumont street at the corner of Olive street.

Two or three drastic regulations which are intended to make for the comfort of the visitors of the automobile show will be enforced by the Show Committee aided by the police and the Fire Department. One of these is that smoking will not be permitted within the building. Another is that no dealer nor his salesmen will be permitted to park their cars within four blocks of the show building, in order that the public may have this parking space. The third is that all street cars on Olive street will stop on the west side of Olive street so that Beaumont street will be a one-way street and that visitors to the show can drive to the door of the show, driving south from Locust street, and there unload and then drive on to a parking place elsewhere. There is ample parking room on all streets adjacent to the show.

The Police Department has provided a corps of officers to handle the traffic and prevent any possible confusion or congestion.

1923 Models to Be Featured.

The automobile distributers in St. Louis have secured the very newest 1923 models from their factories for the St. Louis show, and in several instances cars will be shown which have never before been seen in St. Louis. Among the standard cars there will be shown new body designs. A number of firms will have special open chassis which will be turned over by electric power.

There will be two orchestral concerts each day under the direction of Walter C. Weber, an orchestra playing on each of the three floors. The concerts will be from 2 to 5:30 in the afternoon and from 8 to 10:30 each evening.

An important feature of the 1923 St. Louis show is that it will be open on Sunday, Feb. 11. This is the first time this has ever been done in St. Louis, although other cities keep their shows open on Sunday, and vasts crowds have visited them, indicating that there are many people who can spare Sunday who could not come at other times.

Most of the Show Committee and the show manager visited the automobile show in Chicago and brought home new ideas with them. The Show Committee consists of Joseph A. Schlecht of the Mound City Auto Co., chairman; P. H. Brockman of the De Luxe Automobile Co., I. G. McNiece of the McNiece-Hill Motor Co., and H. F. Fahrenkrog of the Kardell Motor Co. The executive officer of the show is General Manager Robert E. Lee.

ANNOUNCING A NEW LINE OF Finer Motor Cars

AT LOWER PRICES

OWNERS are asking a brand new deal in the making and pricing of motor cars.

No longer are they willing to pay luxury prices to satisfy their personal standards.

They are making no compromises on essentials—on performance, distinction, comfort, lasting quality and economy.

But they are giving economy its real meaning. More miles per gallon of gas, of course—more miles also per dollar of purchase price and running expense.

The 1923 Stephens line is built to meet this demand for high-quality, distinctive motor cars at substantially lower prices.

Two new models: Seven body styles

For the first time, Stephens presents two distinct models and seven new body types.

Three of these—a powerful 7-passenger Touring car, the luxurious 7-passenger Sedan and the intriguing new sport type "Foursome"—have a longer wheel base.

Completing the line are a robust Touring car for five, a graceful 5-passenger Sedan, a spirited Touring Sedan seating five and a sleek and rangy Roadster.

Every 1923 Stephens is the best car of its type we have ever designed and built.

Chassis units give index of value

Delco ignition, Timken axles, Gemmer steering, Fedders radiator and Mather springs: all chassis units are first quality.

The responsive, Stephens-built motor, with its intake manifold entirely inside the cylinder head, develops 59 horse power.

The Stephens bodies, with their graceful contours, lustrous finishes and spacious comfort, complete the alluring picture.

Come in and see these great Stephens cars. Study their powerful lines, balanced design, oversize units, unmatched equipment. Ask for a demonstration. Give the car you like your own performance tests.

SYMPHONIC MUSIC REGARDED AS TEST

Said to Be Quickest Gauge of Musical Culture of a Nation or Community.

BY DEEMS TAYLOR.

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—For generations the controversy has raged as to which form of music is the highest. The champions of opera—and they have been far from few—generally point triumphantly to Wagner and rest their case. And if Wagner were the only man who had ever written opera they would have a very good case, for he scaled the heights. But that was Wagner. Taking the average run of opera, and noticing certain facts—that a bad libretto is fatal even to great music, for instance, and that "Tosca" with Maria Jeritza will draw more audiences than will "Rheingold" with nobody in particular—one begins to suspect that opera is by no means a purely musical form, that if operas were simply played, without being either sung or staged, they would not, necessarily, weigh heavily in the musical balance.

The type of music that we group under the head, "symphonic"—symphonies, suites, tone poems—is now pretty generally admitted to represent the highest and most complex form yet attained by the art. It demands an interest in music for its own sake, unalloyed with literary, vocal or dramatic associations, and implies a degree of musical intelligence on the part of the listener that goes much farther than the mere sensuous response to a pretty tune or a contagious bit of rhythm. Consequently, one of the quickest tests of the musical culture of a nation or a community is its interest in symphonic music. If that interest is real enough, and widespread enough, to suport one of the least profitable—financially—of musical enterprises, the symphony orchestra, we may safely conclude that that nation or community deserved to have its claims to musical culture taken seriously.

Change Began in 80s.

There was a time—and not very long ago, reckoned in terms of this nation's life—when, if you said "Boston, New York, Chicago," you had about summed up America's centers of musical culture, measured, that is, in terms of symphonic music. There were occasional and sporadic attempts in other communities to play orchestral music, but these three cities, and these alone, seemed capable of supporting permanent symphony orchestras.

That time is past. The change began in the late '80s, and during the last decade of the nineteenth century symphony orchestras began to spring up all over the country in bewildering profusion. Some of these failed to command local support, and eventually died of undernourishment, but many of them survived, and have grown to occupy a permanent place in the life of the communities that support them.

Suppose we digress a moment to define our terms. We have a bad habit in this country of taking excellent words and bleaching all the meaning out of them by applying them where they were never intended to apply. We have "art" linoleum, "sensible" cigarettes, and "sanitary" erasers. And by the same misuse of the language a "symphony" orchestra, if the motion picture theaters are to be believed, is almost any instrumental combination of more than six pieces. This is hardly exact enough. In the loosest sense of the term a symphony orchestra would have to be defined as an orchestra big enough to play a symphony—that is, a combination of not less than 45 or 50 men. To be absolutely exact, one would have to define "symphony orchestra" as meaning an orchestra capable of playing any work in the standard symphonic repertoire — including such a composition as Strauss' "Ein Heldenleben," for instance—without alteration or condensation of the parts; in other words, an organization comprising from 80 to 100 players.

Record of America.

Considering the late start America got in symphonic music, we have done amazingly well—much better, in fact, than even the average musician, American or European, realizes. The 1918 edition of "Who's Who in Music" lists every symphony orchestra in the world large enough and permanent seeming enough to be worth listing. In Great Britain there were 16 such organizations; in France, 16; in the United States, 40. In other words, five years ago America had exactly the same number of orchestras, in proportion to her population, as Great Britain, and one-third more than France; and the relative figures would be about the same today. Not bad for a nation of Babbitts.

Yet how many of us know anything about these orchestras, or have ever heard more than two or three of them? New York regularly hears orchestras from two other cities, Boston and Philadelphia, every season, in addition to its own three; but the range of its acquaintance is otherwise confined to an occasional visit from one of the Middle Western organizations. It is doubtful if any other American city hears even that small proportion of the country's good symphonic orchestras.

It is, of course, our justly celebrated geographic vastness that is responsible for the comparative sameness of our orchestral diet. One could probably hear every orchestra in England in the space of a month. To accomplish the same feat in America he would have to become a nomad for a half year at least.

However, excepting always the excellent orchestras of San Francisco and Los Angeles, it is quite possible for the curious listener in the East to hear the best of the American orchestras in a comparatively brief space of time. For, outside Boston, New York and Philadelphia, they are clustered in that east-central part of the United States that is loosely called the Middle West and ought to be called the Far East. There are six permanent orchestral organizations in this section, and when one has heard these, and compared them with those of the East, he will have some idea of the average excellence achieved in presenting symphonic music in America.

And that is what this reviewer purposes doing. Leaving New York to shift for herself temporarily, he will hear in turn the orchestras of Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago, Detroit, Minneapolis and St. Louis, all in 12 days. He will review the concerts of these orchestras as conscientiously and dispassionately as possible, and will try to transmit such impressions as he is able to gather of the local conditions, favorable and adverse, under which they are organized and directed.

The resulting series of articles will, naturally, need a serviceable, winter-weight mantle of charity to enable them to be called a "survey" of musical conditions. It would take months to do that properly. They will, at least, be a series of personal impressions, accumulated fast enough to form some sort of basis for comparative study, and will, I hope, give a sketchy idea of what is being done to present the best in music throughout a reasonably large and representative section of the United States.

Let this trial offer prove for you at our expense whether more Iron in your blood will make you well and strong Physician tells why you must have Iron to give you Health, Strength, Energy and Endurance.

"Lack of iron in your blood produces the most terrible of all devitalizing weaknesses and makes a man or woman a physical and mental weakling, nervous, irritable and easily tired out," says Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly Physician at Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor Dept.) and the Westchester County Hospital. "It is the iron in your blood that takes up oxygen from your lungs. The food you eat contains carbon. As digested food is absorbed into the blood, the carbon in the food unites with the oxygenated iron in your blood, and by so doing gives off tremendous power and energy, thereby giving you great force, physical and mental vigor, and producing the material which becomes active, living cells, flesh, muscle, bone and tissue, thus performing one of the most remarkable miracles of life. Without iron, even three big meals a day will not do you any good—you do not get any strength out of your food—it is like putting coal into a stove without a fire."

Blood corpuscles rich in iron, highly magnified. Starved blood Corpuscles highly magnified Blood examinations by physicians all over the country show that three people out of every four you meet lack 100% iron in their blood, often due to modern methods of cooking and modern diet. For centuries scientists tried in vain to produce iron like the iron in your blood and like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples. At last the problem was solved, so that you can now obtain this newer form of iron from any druggist under the name of "Nuxated Iron," which is ready for immediate absorption by the blood the moment it enters the system. A single daily dose of this newer form of iron gives your blood the opportunity of assimilating in concentrated form, iron like the iron that you could get by eating raisins, apples or spinach. It is often remarkable what a tremendous amount of pep, vigor, force and energy a little more iron will give a person whose blood is deficient in this magic-like substance. Nuxated Iron often increases the strength and endurance of weak, nervous, run-down folks in two weeks' time.

Matters of Current Interest to St. Louis Lovers of Art

As a result of the recent trip East made by Vice President Sherer of the administrative board of the City Art Museum, the various collections of ancient glass and metal work which are to be seen in gallery 32 are here for a time for public exhibition and the consideration of the museum.

Early Egyptian, Greek, Roman and Phoenician glass, which has been attributed by authorities as belonging to the fifth century B. C., is grouped in one case. All ancient glass in existence today has been taken from tombs where it was originally buried with the dead, or from ruins of temples. An important thing to note about all buried glass objects is the black mold which completely covers every surface. The sulfides glass in a manner similar to its action on metal, although the effects are entirely different. The encrustation on glass is easily removable by flaking it off with a small knife, or even by rubbing with the fingers, whereas the green mold on bronze is permanent.

The possibilities of slight imperfections in the glass make it necessary to exercise much care in removing the outer covering of mold, since the fragile glass might be irregularly thin in some places. When this encrustation has been safely removed, we find a pearly iridescence covering much of the original color. This iridescence often rambles over the greater part of the surface and gives the effect of mother-of-pearl inlay. A fine example of this is seen in the small, fairly heavy Greek bowl, whose original color is a deep, rich peacock blue and purple, as shown in portions of the inner surface. The rest of the bowl looks as if it were the inside of a sea shell. This piece is considered among the most important in the collection.

The history of early glass making is a little uncertain. Some authorities says the process was discovered in Phoenicia many centuries before Christ, when persons chanced to build fires upon a sand bank, the heat melting the sand and the liquid hardening into a transparent substance. Others say glass originated in Egypt and was known in other countries long before it was seen in Phoenicia. At any rate, by the fifth century B. C., the process had developed to the extent of three methods—blowing, molding and cutting. Examples of each are in this collection.

The cut glass of this early period is especially interesting. A medium sized bowl made of yellowish colored glass, which was hewn from a solid chunk of glass, and whose pattern is plain, with few curves, is somewhat at variance with the exquisite cut glass that glitters on our buffets and tables today.

Mosaic glass has much unusual interest. Different colored glass mixed while hot resulted in a marbled effect. Previous to Greek and Roman periods of this art, the Phoenicians conceived the idea of rolling thin sheets of hot, colored glass into small sticks, like pencils. Bits were broken from the ends of these sticks, the cross-sections laid flatly side by side like tiny tiles. The whole was then shaped and allowed to cool. When hardened, the rough, irregular edges of the separate particles were ground down to one smooth surface. This art became extinct thousands of years ago and it is for pieces of this work that Nero is said to have paid enormous sums. One tiny bowl of this ware is to be seen in this exhibition, although it cannot compare in excellence and quality with the two larger, finer and more beautiful ones owned by our museum.

Five Egyptian glass bottles are grouped. Three of these are of amphora form, one is a straight-sided little vase, and the other a triangular vial with three tiny handles which indicate its having been used as a perfume bottle worn on a cord about the neck. A necklace of lapis lazuli beads graduated in size lies near these Egyptian bottles. Although they have been restrung, the original thread having long since rotted away within the tomb from which the necklace was taken, the strand is intact, all 34 of the beads having been carefully collected, as well as the gilt beads and the tiny blue ones which are strung between the lapis lazuli.

For the most part, these objects come from the establishment of Azeez Kyahat, in New York. Its owner personally conducts the excavations of tombs in Palestine from which his treasures come.

Another of the cases of the exhibit contains Hindu, Chinese, Persian and Japanese metal work. An Ispahan candlestick is among the larger objects. This particular candlestick was illustrated in the last issue of the International Studio. From the thirteenth century, A. D., is the other candlestick, of brass inlaid with silver. Around the wide base in the form of a design are inscriptions probably taken from the Koran. The Persians made much use of caligraphy as a decoration, thereby giving their art objects added significance.

Two gold necklaces seen here are from the collection of Lockwood de Forest, the famous artist-collector. They were obtained, with many other of his treasures, some 40 years ago in India, when East Indian art was not so rare or expensive. About the loveliest object in this exhibition is a Byzantine bracelet of the sixth century, A. D. It is about two and a half inches in width, and large enough to slip easily over the hand and encircle the upper arm. It is of thin, pierced gold and divided into eight sections. The piercing in the sections is in Greek inscriptions, reading: Soul — Invocation — Sound Opinion—Forbearance. It is the most beautifully Oriental thing imaginable and is one of the most important objects of its kind for sale anywhere in the world today. The same dealer to which this bracelet belongs has a similar one for sale at The Hague, but no museum owns one of such beauty or importance.

A Mycenaean ring is the point of concentrated interest in the case containing miscellaneous objects. It is a large ring, with iron mounting and gold inlay like a seal ring. In the gold are two figures in intaglio. The figures are so small they must be seen through a magnifying glass to convince the beholder of their perfection. It is a tenth century (B. C.) treasure asserted to have been excavated by Dr. Schleiman, the famous archaeologist who, later in life, gratifying his boyhood desire to explore ancient ruins of which he read, made vast excavations and is said to have discovered the buried city of Troy.

It is the intention of the museum to perfect and improve its present collections, making them finer rather than larger. For this reason the present exhibitions will remain here several months to allow leisurely contemplation.

FOR 10 days only, from Feb. 1 to 10, an exhibition of prints and books from the collection of Burton Emmett, selected to illustrate the history and development of wood engraving, will be on view at the museum in gallery 29. The importance of wood engraving in the development of printing and illustration and the steps in its progress are here clearly set out. Not only should this exhibit hold much charm and interest for the Franklin Club, but for book readers and book lovers in general.

A DISPLAY of prints by Wilhelmina and Grace Parish will be opened at the Artists' Guild tomorrow, Feb. 5. Some two hundred will be shown and remain on exhibition for one month. The loveliness of the Misses Parish's prints is well known, and a wide attendance is assured.

TWO important additions have been made to the exhibition of eighteenth century French art at the City Art Museum since its opening, Jan. 15. These are "Portrait of a Woman," by Jean Marc Nattier (1685-1766), lent by Edward Mallinckrodt, and "Portrait of Mme. Du Barry," by Francois Hubert Drouais, which, though originally included in the exhibition, was delayed in shipment and did not arrive at the museum until last week.

The portrait by Nattier is a typical and charming canvas, recently added to the Mallinckrodt private collection. It shows to fine advantage Nattier's brilliant ability to depict the pink and white complexions, velvety cheeks and bewitching eyes of the beauties of the luxurious court of Louis XV, a gay and artificial world of which Nattier was the idol. In the rendition of the delicate textures of skin and scintillating silks, he is unexcelled and with his facility in the depiction of superficial beauty he happily combines a strong feeling for character.

The second addition to the temporary collection at the museum, Drouais' portrait of Mme. Jeanne Recu Du Barry, aside from its beauty as a work of art, is an historical document of entrancing interest. Mme. Du Barry was presented in 1769 at the court of Louis XV, through the machinations of Lebel, valet de chambre, and the Duc de Richelieu. Her charming manner and seductive beauty, of which the painting now on view is mute witness, won the affections of the King, whose mistress she became. Until the death of Louis XV in 1774, this remarkable woman was virtually the ruler of France, deposing and setting up Ministers at will. The King erected for her the magnificent mansion of Luciennes, where she lived in state. Following the death of the King, and with the coming of the Revolution, Mme. Du Barry fell upon evil days. She was tried before a revolutionary tribunal, which accused her of dissipating the revenues of the state, conspiring against the republic and "wearing mourning for the tyrant." On these grounds she was sentenced and executed in 1793.

Her portrait is the likeness of a woman of unusual and gracious beauty, with delicate features, large, sensitive eyes, daintily modeled chin and graceful neck. Her hair is powdered and dressed in simple but becoming fashion and a garland of flowers covers her bosom. The drawing and modeling are superb, but the coloring lacks something of the rich warmth of Nattier's work. The artist, Francis-Hubert Drouais, was a pupil of Van Loo and Boucher. After the death of Nattier he became "premier peintre du roi" and official court painter of Louis XV. There are many excellent portraits of the royalty of the period from his brush in the Louvre and at Versailles and Chantilly. The collection of French art of the eighteenth century, of which these two paintings are a part, will remain at the museum until Feb. 15.

Third Generation is Using Syrup Pepsin

No other Laxative can replace Dr. Caldwell's in the confidence of those who use it

THERE are thousands of healthy, robust young men and women who have never in all their lives taken any other laxative for constipation than Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Their parents were given it by their parents; the grandparents are using it today. It is the one laxative ideally suited to all the family, safe for the little ones, effective in grownups, so compounded that elderly people, who are constantly forced to take a laxative because the intestinal muscles are weakening, find increased dosage unnecessary. This wonderful constipation remedy has been used continuously for 30 years, and over 10 million bottles are now sold annually, the largest selling family laxative in the world! The cost averages but a cent a dose. Every druggist sells it, and under a guarantee to do as claimed or your money will be refunded.

Millions of carefully conducted homes are never without a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

ANY FAMILY MAY TRY IT FREE

Thousands of parents are asking themselves, "Where can I find a trustworthy laxative that anyone in the family can use when constipated?" I urge you to try Syrup Pepsin. I will gladly provide a liberal free sample bottle, sufficient for an adequate test. Write me where to send it. Address Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 515 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois. Do it now!

Mr. J. B. Belk of Shaw, Miss., relies on it entirely to keep his children in health, and Mrs. Catherine Connolly of Jersey City, N. J., declares that not only herself but all her neighbors and friends use it and tell others about it. There is scarcely a day that someone in a family does not need it for constipation, flatulency, auto-intoxication, biliousness, intestinal poisoning, headaches, colic and cramps, and to break up fevers and colds.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a scientifically-balanced compound of Egyptian senna with pepsin and pleasant-tasting aromatics. The formula is on the package. As the popularity of this natural vegetable laxative increases, the public discards the harsher physics like calomel, cod-tar in candy form, salt waters and powders. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin empties the bowels more cleanly and without any danger.

East St. Louis, Ill., July 23, 1919.

Dr. W. P. Henrich:

Dear Sir—You surely have a wonderful Treatment to Cure Piles without the knife to stay cured. I feel like a new man now, after suffering with those terrible Piles for 25 years.

I did not have a particle of pain, nor did I have to quit work while under your treatment. You did not perform a surgical operation, hence I did not have to go to a hospital.

Before I called on you, I called on another specialist, who tried to cure me with electricity, which he called "Painless Bloodvessel Method." If he would be truthful he would have called it "Painful Enlargement Method," as it caused me so much pain after each treatment that I could not sit down for five hours, and after three treatments my Piles did not dissolve, but always got bigger, so I quit his painful method and came to you, and I thank God that I did.

I advise all sufferers from Piles or any other rectal disease not to experiment and thereby lose valuable time, but call at once on Dr. W. P. Henrich, who I consider the best Specialist for Piles in the U. S. A.

Very truly yours,
C. R. CHANDLER, 17 N. Tenth-st.

If you want to be Cured for life in such a safe, sure and painless way as Mr. Chandler was, then Call on me this week.

WEEK MARKED BY REPORTS OF NEW NUGENT BUILDING

One Story Is That $10,000,000 Structure Will Be Erected on Present Site of Department Store.

MUCH ACTIVITY IN DOWNTOWN SECTION

Negotiations for Record Number of Purchases and Leases of Buildings and Sites Concluded.

By Berry Moore.

Developments of the last week were of a character to inspire greater confidence in real estate operators who confine their activities to the business centers of the city. This refers notably to downtown St. Louis, which is scheduled for a broad revival, according to Oreon E. Scott, president of the Oreon E. & R. G. Scott Realty Co.

Announcement of the consolidation of Nugents with four other large department stores in different cities as the National Department Stores Co., with an outstanding capital of $5,200,000, and with authorized capital of $10,000,000, was followed by the report that Nugents was to be re-established in a building to cost $10,000,000. No official confirmation was forthcoming as to this, however.

The supposition was that the building would be erected on the present site of the store, at the southeast corner of Broadway and Washington avenue, including the northeast and southeast corners of Broadway and St. Charles streets. The parcels embraced in the site of the present buildings were held by Nugents under long leases, which were assigned to the National Department Stores Co.

The building plans of the new concern were expanded by the more enthusiastic to include the site of the eight-story building of the Kennard Carpet Co., occupying the entire east half of this block, facing Fourth street, which it was declared had acquired a lease of a building in the vicinity of Tenth street and Washington avenue. This is also without confirmation.

Nugents has a large clientele in the East Side cities, and the erection of a building on the scale proposed virtually at the entrance of the Eads bridge, would further enhance its prestige with this contingent, it was argued.

May Build Further West.

Another report abroad was to the effect that a site farther west was under consideration for the St. Louis unit of the National Department Stores Co., the combined sales of which, according to the statements of the various concerns incorporated, aggregate more than $33,000,000 yearly. A year or so ago negotiations were opened with the Government for the block occupied by the Federal Building, at Eighth and Olive streets, as a site for a building for Nugents. The negotiations, which involved a trade were conducted by Isaac T. Cook, but the price asked for the site by the Government was prohibitive, according to real estate agents. Realtors who specialize in downtown property were busy yesterday preparing plats of sites to be submitted as available for a building adequate to the requirements of the proposed new big store.

Prior to the consolidation, Nugents was negotiating with the S. Van Raalte Investment Co. for the erection of a building at the southeast corner of Grand boulevard and Morgan street for an uptown store. The site is owned individually by Simon Van Raalte. The department store now has a branch store at the southwest corner of Olive street and Vandeventer avenue, which is on a substantial basis.

While announcements are withheld as yet, it is known from authentic sources that negotiations for a record number of purchases and leases of buildings and sites in the business district were concluded during the week. An old two-story building at 715 Chestnut street, with a lot 25 by 109 feet, owned by Nancy L. Johnson, a Lucas heir, was bought by William E. Caulfield, State Senator and realtor, Victor Rhodes and George F. Bashford. The title to the parcel was taken in the name of Samuel Marts. The consideration was not announced by Robert Rutledge, who made the sale.

Other Big Deals.

Another important sale of Chestnut street property in the district east of Twelfth street was reported to have been made by the Cornet & Zeibig Trust Co. in connection with the Mississippi Valley Trust Co., represented by William R. Cady, its real estate officer, but details were not available. Negotiations are being conducted through John Dockery & Son for a big corner on this thoroughfare, desired as a site for a notable structure.

Negotiations, it is understood, have been closed for various other sites in the central district and in the downtown section of Eighteenth street. These embrace prominent sites on both Locust street and Washington avenue, which have been obtained, it was stated, for important building projects.

Last week was a noteworthy one for leases through which several of the foremost retail concerns acquired new and larger quarters, including two eight-story buildings on Washington avenue. A distinct westward trend is indicated by these leases, the more important of which were made through the Martin-Breitt Real Estate Co., Isaac T. Cook & Co., and the Francis-Perry-Ruth Real Estate Co., which declined to give out details.

The passage of the bond issue would be a signal for a big movement in real estate throughout the city, according to Theodore Hemmelman, president of the Hemmelman-Spackler Real Estate Co. The present revival in the business district, which is emphatic, foreshadowed this success of the bond issue, he declared.

Ground Broken for 36-Family Apartment

GROUND has been broken for the construction of a six-story, 36-family apartment building at the southwest corner of Belt and Waterman avenues, to cost about $750,000. The structure, which is expected to be ready for occupancy about Sept. 1, will be built by the Worth Investment Co., of which E. M. Worthington is president and A. D. Gates is secretary-treasurer. Worthington and Gates were the builders of the Gatesworth Hotel, Union and Lindell boulevards.

An unusual feature of the apartment will be a garage to accommodate 75 automobiles, in the basement, which will be at street level. Elevator service in three units, serving as many entrances to the building, will also serve the garage. Private locker and laundry facilities will be provided in the basement.

There will be six apartments on each floor, of five and six rooms each. Living rooms will measure 13x25 feet and connect with dining rooms through wide colonnades. The apartments will have two bathrooms each, iceless refrigerator systems, combination electric and gas cooking equipment and garbage incinerators.

A loan of $458,000 for the building has been financed by G. L. Miller & Co. of New York and Atlanta, Ga., with local offices at 124 North Fourth street.

TOBACCO COMPANY TO DISTRIBUTE FROM CITY

Eight States to Be Served From St. Louis Depot of American Tobacco Co.

The American Tobacco Co. has decided to distribute all its products from the new depot recently established at 4210 Forest Park boulevard in stead of from its Eastern factories, as heretofore, throughout the St. Louis territory in the states of Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska, South Dakota, Missouri, Arkanas, Oklahoma and Texas.

This step was taken by the company to expedite shipments of fresh goods to the consumer and St. Louis was chosen, after consideration was given to all other important cities in the Middle West and Southwest, due to the excellent railroad facilities and favorable freight rates.

The company's sales organization also will operate from this city, O. K. Parker, sales manager for this section, has moved his offices from Kansas City. W. J. Naber, who has served in various capacities in the company's branches, and in its home office, has been appointed operating manager. He will be assisted by E. R. Fuhrman as office manager and O. J. Weiss as local traffic manager.

The company has a temporary lease at its present location, but it is anticipated that within a short time it will have permanent quarters of its own. Some of the important brands of the company are "Bull Durham" and "Tuxedo" smoking tobacco; "Lucky Strike," "One Eleven" and "Pall Mall" cigarettes and "Riz La Croix" cigarette papers.

The industrial department of the Chamber of Commerce was instrumental in having the branch established here.

Chauncey P. Heath represented both parties in the transaction. The property consists of a five-story building of approximately 80 rooms. The sale was on a cash basis and the sale price was reported to have been $80,000. Alterations and improvements are being made that will modernize the building throughout.

CONTRACT LET FOR NEW $50,000 BUSINESS BUILDING

A contract has been let for construction of a two-story building at 2020-24 South Broadway, for the Frank L. Schaab Stove and Furniture Co., at a cost of about $50,000. The business was founded more than 60 years ago at 2024 South Broadway, and the building at 2023 was added in 1909. The business will be continued during construction of the new building.

The company handles stoves, ranges and washing machines, but was reincorporated with an increase in capital from $12,000 to $30,000 last month, for the addition of a furniture department.

The new building will have a frontage on Broadway, facing Russell avenue, of 75 feet, the front wall being of cream-colored terra cotta. Vestibule show windows will be provided for the protection from the weather of persons looking as displays. The improvement of the paving of Russell avenue was one reason for the construction of the new building, the company feeling that this improvement would help trade conditions in its neighborhood. Architects of the new building are Hoener, Baum & Froese.

EMBASSY LIQUOR INQUIRY SOUGHT

Crompton Asks Congress to Investigate Supplies of Foreign Representatives.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
20 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.—"Declaring it time for Congress to ascertain the facts about importation of liquors for embassies at Washington, and "whether that which has been permitted as a courtesy is being used as a cover for abuses seriously contributing to scandalous disregard of the fundamental law of our land," Representative Cramton, Republican, Michigan, dry leader in the House, introduced resolutions today seeking information from the State and Treasury Departments.

He asked that the former make known the rules and regulations in effect for bringing liquor to representatives of foreign Governments since Jan. 17, 1920, the date the Volstead law went into effect. He also asked to whom certificates of identification have been issued and under what law.

The Treasury Department is asked to specify the shipments with full details as to when and how and to whom they went, and the rules and law governing them.

"Of late," Cramton said, "the importation and use of liquors for foreign embassies and legations has been the subject of countrywide discussion. This has been particularly true in Washington, where the problem of enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment is said to be acutely affected by the presence of these liquors.

"To what extent it really is affected is uncertain, so conflicting are the various published reports. The other day the President said the question of the amount of liquor to be received by the Diplomatic Corps here is a matter for Congress to consider rather than the executive."

Cramton added that when Congress gets the facts it can decide better what, if anything, "is necessary to safeguard the courtesy or to end the abuses."

CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION COMMITTEES OUTLINE WORK

Chairmen Will Exchange Suggestions and Go Over Them at Home to Prepare for Meeting.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 3.—The Phraseology Committee of the Constitutional Convention met here today in response to a call from George H. Williams of Webster Groves, chairman and outlined the method it will follow on going over work already completed by the convention. That body is in recess now, having had to adjourn temporarily because of the Legislature which now is in session here.

The committee decided to ask chairmen on the convention committees whose reports have been worked over by the convention, to submit suggestions to Miss Anne Brady, secretary of the committee in charge of the convention office here. She will provide each of the phraseology committeemen with copies and with copies of suggestions to be offered by each of the latter.

Each member of the Phraseology Committee will go over all of this matter at home, and then, the committee will hold another meeting March 20 to corrolate the various ideas developed. This committee will not touch unamended sections of the old Constitution, but will concern itself only with phraseology of the sections as the convention has proposed to amend them.

THREE NEGRO CHILDREN DIE FROM SUFFOCATION IN FIRE

Mother Goes to Store and Floor Catches Fire, Apparently From Sparks From Grate.

Three negro children of Mrs. Amelia Caldwell, 32 years old, of 2130A O'Fallon street, died from suffocation about 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon in a fire that did considerable damage to their home before it was extinguished.

The mother, who went to a store at 2:30 left the children—Earl Jr., 3 years old; Alma, 2, and Robert, 6 weeks—in a front room in which a wood fire was burning in a grate, the baby being on a lounge. When firemen arrived they found part of the room in flames and the three children dead, Earl and Alma under a bed in an adjoining room, where they presumably had gone to escape the fire. The firemen believe that the floor caught fire from sparks from the grate.

"THE QUESTION OF INTER-MARriage" will be discussed at the Y. M. H. A., Monday night at 7:30 o'clock. Rabbi Leon Harrison will preside. The public is invited.

FEDERAL AGENT KILLED, ONE WOUNDED, IN GUN FIGHT

Trouble Started When Efforts Are Made to Enforce Cattle-Dipping Law.

By the Associated Press.

STATENVILLE, Ga., Feb. 3.—Echols County's cattle-dipping war broke out again early today when one Federal enforcement officer was killed and another wounded. Mack Lockridge of Dawson, Ga., was shot and almost instantly killed, and his companion, R. S. Ritchley, also of Dawson, was seriously wounded during a quarrel that occurred on the highway near the farm of Mann Carter.

Carter and his son Will, who are said to have fired the shots at the Federal officers, have not been arrested. The two Federal officers are said to have visited the Carter farm, heated argument followed and then the shooting.

Lockridge died in a few minutes, but Ritchley summoned aid and was taken to a hospital in Valdosta, Ga., where it is said that he has little chance to recover. Both officers were members of the force sent to Echols County last summer to enforce cattle dipping, for the elimination of the ticks. They established a camp near here and have been riding the ranges, enforcing the dipping law.

CORBIN, KY., QUIET AFTER SHOOTING OF SPECIAL OFFICER

Twelve Additional Militiamen Augment 25 Sent at Request of City.

By the Associated Press.

CORBIN, Ky., Feb. 3.—Arrival here late today of 12 additional National guardsmen augmenting the 25 sent yesterday by Gov. Morrow upon request of city authorities who reported that the situation growing out of the shooting of a railroad man and special policeman last Tuesday and the subsequent resignation of several special officers, had gotten beyond their control, found the town quiet with no indications of imminent outbreak.

The State troopers are patrolling the downtown section.

The resignation of the special police, appointed following the dynamiting of a railroad rooming house recently, which imperiled the lives of 15 shop workers, left city authorities without facilities for coping with any possible trouble, it was declared when troops were called for.

By the Associated Press.

He further declared the day past when persons enterng the diplomatic service were required to have independent incomes. This system he rejected as barring from the service many whom by tradition and birth are best fitted, making way instead for "objectionable profiteers."

WRIGLEY SUES PUBLICATION WHICH OPPOSES KU KLUX KLAN

Majority Stockholders Announce Desire to Repudiate Edition Published Over Protest.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Feb. 3.—William Wrigley Jr., millionaire chewing gum manufacturer and long prominent in Republican politics, today filed suit for $50,000 damages against the Tolerance Publishing Co., which issues a weekly magazine in opposition to the Ku Klux Klan.

Coincidentally a local law firm announced that the majority stockholders and directors of the publishing company desired to repudiate the publication in an unauthorized edition of Tolerance, of an alleged reproduction of an application attributed to Wrigley for membership in the klan. It was stated that it was believed the signature was a forgery. Only a few copies were permitted to go on sale, it was further stated, and it was added that the reproduction of the alleged membership application was published over the protest of the majority stockholders and directors of the company and over the protest of the managing editor.

It was added that an authorized edition of Tolerance would be issued as soon as the situation created by injunction and other suits is cleared up.

AT THE ANNUAL MEETING OF THE St. Louis Letter Carriers' Mutual Aid Association the following officers were elected: Anthony J. Bauer, president; William K. Dunn, vice president; Herman H. Haubart, secretary, and William H. Krenning, treasurer.

There is no risk in purchasing an exchange car from us. It is our policy and practice to be fair and aboveboard. The value of the car is impartially fixed by honest appraisal—the sale price based on actual worth. We could not afford to be unfair in our treatment, because we figure every exchange car buyer will some day be interested in purchasing a new car.

DODGE BROTHERS REBUILT CARS

THE difference between a Dodge Brothers Rebuilt Car and an ordinary second-hand car is a matter of addition rather than subtraction.

To every Rebuilt Dodge Brothers Car we have added the necessary work and parts to compensate for the miles it has traveled. By replacing tops, tires and other worn parts and cassening the baked enamel when finish is dull, Rebuilt Dodge Brothers Cars approximate the condition and appearance of new cars.

They are easy to buy. You can get a Rebuilt Dodge Brothers Car for less than a cheap new car which would be shabby and second-hand in a month. Dodge Brothers Open Cars are finished in baked enamel, which is almost everlasting.

Sometimes we have a few Dodge Brothers Cars which we have not found it necessary to rebuild. They are snaps.

MY LADY OF THE EARRINGS

A Drawing by Dan Smith, Illustrating the Return of a Vogue of Long Ago.

The Romance of the Kidnaped Plumber

Stephen Leacock tells a blood-curdling tale of the master operative on furnace valves who, having to go back to the house to get his wrench (as usual), went several more times on various plumbing pretexts, finally carrying off the Bishop's daughter, teaching her to cook and making her his wife—It's a taking take-off on the trade tradition ::

By STEPHEN LEACOCK.

"PERSONALLY," said Thornton, speaking for the first time, "I never care to take a case that involves cellar work."

We were sitting, a little group of us, around about the fire in a comfortable corner of the Steam and Air Club. Our talk had turned, as always happens with a group of professional men, into more or less technical channels. I will not say that we were talking shop; the word has an offensive sound, and might be misunderstood. But we were talking as only a group of practicing plumbers—including some of the biggest men in the profession—would talk.

With the exception of Everett, who had a national reputation as a consulting barber, and Thomas, who was a vacuum cleaner expert, I think we all belonged to the same profession. We had been holding a convention, and Fortescue, who had one of the biggest furnace practices in the country, had read us a paper that afternoon—a most revolutionary thing—on "External Diagnosis of Defective Feed Pipes," and naturally the thing had bred discussion. It was in the course of this that Thornton interrupted with his remark about never being willing to accept a cellar case.

Naturally, all the men turned to look at the speaker. Henry Thornton, at the time of which I relate, was at the height of his reputation. Beginning, quite literally, at the bottom of the ladder, he had in twenty years of practice as an operating plumber raised himself to the top of his profession. There was much in his appearance to suggest the underlying reason of his success. His face, as is usual with men of our calling, had something of the dreamer in it, but the bold set of the jaw indicated determination of an uncommon kind. Three times president of the Plumbers' Association, Henry Thornton had enjoyed the highest honors in his chosen profession. His book on "Nut Coal" was recognized as the last word on the subject and had been crowned by the French Academy of Nuts.

"You never go into a cellar?" asked Fortescue. "But, hang it, man, I don't see how you can avoid it."

"Well, I do avoid it," answered Thornton, "at least as far as I possibly can. I send down my solderist, of course, but personally, unless it is absolutely necessary, I never go down."

"That's all very well, my dear fellow," Fortescue cut in, "but you know as well as I do that you get case after case where the cellar diagnosis is simply vital. I had a case last week, a most interesting thing"—he turned to the group of us as he spoke—"a double lesion of a gas pipe under a cement floor—half a dozen of my colleagues had been absolutely baffled. They had made an entirely false diagnosis, operated on the dining room floor, which they removed and carried home, and when I was called in they had just obtained permission from the Stone Masons' Protective Association to knock down one side of the house. After we had finished the whole operation—I forgot to say that we had thrown the coal out on the lawn to avoid any complication—the proprietor quite broke down. He offered us to take his whole house and keep it. But, gentlemen, I feel that when Mr. Thornton says that he never goes down into a cellar there must be a story behind it. I think we should invite him to relate it to us."

A murmur of assent greeted the speaker's suggestion. For myself I was particularly pleased, inasmuch as I have long felt that Thornton as a raconteur was almost as interesting as in the role of an operating plumber.

Simmons brought word to the library that there was a client in the "consulting room."

"Not much of a story, perhaps," said Thornton, "but such as it is you are welcome to it. So if you just fill up your glasses with raspberry vinegar, you may have the tale for what it is worth."

We gladly complied with the suggestion and Thornton continued:

"It happened a good many years ago, at a time when I was only a young fellow, fresh from college, very proud of my Plumb. B., and inclined to think that I knew it all. I should mention that at this time I was not married, but had set up a modest apartment of my own, with a consulting room and a single man servant. Naturally, I could not afford the services of a solderist or a gassist and did everything for myself, though Simmons, my man, could at a pinch be utilized to tear down plaster and break furniture."

Thornton paused to take a sip of raspberry vinegar and went on.

"Well, then. I had come home particularly tired, after a long day, and I felt, therefore, none too well pleased when a little while after dinner the bell rang and Simmons brought word to the library that there was a client in the consulting room. I reminded the fellow that I could not possibly consider a case at such an advanced hour unless I were paid emergency overtime wages, with time and a half during the day of recovery.

"Simmons, to my surprise, told me that he had already informed the client of this fact, and that the answer had only been a plea that the case was too urgent to admit of delay. He also supplied the further information that the client was a young lady, I am afraid," added Thornton, looking around his audience with a sympathetic smile, "that Simmons (I had got him from Harvard and he had not yet quite learned his place) even said something about her being strikingly handsome."

They had made an entirely false diagnosis.

A general laugh greeted Thornton's announcement.

"After all," said Fortescue, "I never could see why an ice man should be supposed to have a monopoly on gallantry."

"Oh, I don't know," said Thornton. "For my part—I say it without affectation—the moment I am called in professionally, women as women cease to exist for me.

"On entering the consulting room I saw at once that Simmons had exaggerated nothing in describing my young client as beautiful. I have seldom, even among our own class, seen a more strikingly handsome girl. She was dressed in a very plain and simple fashion, which showed me at once that she belonged merely to the capitalist class. I am, as I think you know, something of an observer, and my eye at once noted the absence of heavy gold earrings and wrist bangles. The blue feathers at the side of her hat were none of them more than six inches long and the buttons on her jacket were so inconspicuous that one would hardly notice them. In short, while her dress was no doubt good and serviceable, there was an absence of chic, a lack of noise about it, that told at once the tale of narrow circumstances.

"She was evidently in great distress.

"'Oh, Mr. Thornton,' she exclaimed, advancing towards me, 'do come to our house at once. I simply don't know what to do.'

"She spoke with great emotion, and seemed almost on the point of breaking into tears.

"'Pray calm yourself, my dear young lady,' I said, 'and try to tell me what is the trouble.'

"'Oh, don't lose any time,' she said, 'do come at once.'

"'We will lose no time,' I said, reassuringly, as I looked at my watch. 'It is now 7:30. We will reckon the time from now, with overtime at time and a half. But if I am to do anything for you I must have some idea of what has happened.'

"'The cellar boiler,' she moaned, clasping her hands together, 'the cellar boiler won't work!'

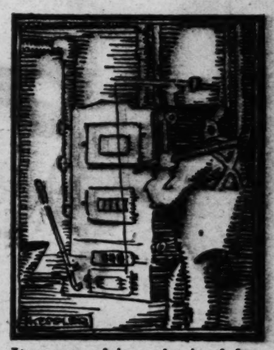
"'Ah!' I said, soothingly. 'The cellar boiler won't work.'

"'How's your pressure gauge?' I asked. 'Do you draw from the mains or are you on the high-level reservoir?'

"It had occurred to me at once that it might be merely a case of stoppage of her main feed, complicated, perhaps, with a valvular trouble in her exhaust. On the other hand, it was clear enough that if her feed was full and her gauges working, her trouble was more likely a leak somewhere in her piping.

"But all attempts to draw from the girl any clear idea of the symptoms were unavailing. All she could tell me was that the cellar boiler wouldn't work. Beyond that her answers were mere confusion. I gathered enough, however, to feel sure that her main feed was still working and that her top-story check valve was probably in order. With that I had to be content.

"As a young practitioner, I had as yet no motor car. Simmons, however, summoned me a taxi, into which I hurriedly placed the girl and my basket of instruments, and was soon speeding in the direction she indicated. It was a dark, lowering night, with flecks of rain against the windows of the cab, and there was something in the lateness of the hour (it was now after 8:30) and the nature of my mission which gave me a stimulating sense of adventure. The girl directed me, as I felt sure she would, towards the capitalist quarter of the town. We had soon sped away from the brightly lighted streets and tall apartment buildings among which my usual practice lay, and entered the gloomy and dilapidated section of the city where the unhappy capitalist class reside. I need not remind those of you who know it that it is scarcely a cheerful place to find one's self in after nightfall. The inhabitants living, so it is said, on their scanty dividends and on such part of their income as our taxation is still unable to reach, are not people that one would care to fall in with after nightfall.



It was my plain professional duty to take a large hammer, knock holes in the boiler and mash up the furnace pipes.

"We alighted at one of the most somber of the houses and our taxi driver, with evident relief, made off in the darkness.

"The girl admitted us into a dark hall, where she turned on an electric light. 'We have light,' she said, with that peculiar touch of pride that one sees so often in her class; 'we have four bulbs.'

Then she called down a flight of stairs that apparently led to the cellar:

"'Father, the plumber has come. Do come up now, dear, and rest.'

"A step sounded on the stairs and there appeared beside us one of the most forbidding looking men that I have ever beheld. I don't know whether any of you have ever seen an Anglican Bishop. Probably not. Outside of the bush, they are now seldom seen. But at the time of which I speak there were a few still here and there in the purlieus of the city. The man before us was tall and ferocious and his native ferocity was further enhanced by the heavy black beard which he wore in open defiance of the compulsory shaving laws. His black shovel-shaped hat and his black clothes lent him a singularly sinister appearance, while his legs were bound in tight gaiters, as if ready for an instant spring. He carried in his hand an enormous monkey wrench, on which his fingers were clasped in a restless grip.

"'Can you fix the accursed thing?' he asked.

"I was not accustomed to being spoken to in this way, but I was willing, for the girl's sake, to strain professional courtesy to the limit.

"'I don't know,' I answered, 'but if you will have the goodness first to fetch me a little light supper, I

Hermit Has Cafeteria for Wild Deer

Hundreds of animals born in the wild and instinctively fearing man have come to regard this lonely island dweller as their friend—There are dining tables for the deer and each has his own bowl—Some try to force their way into cabin to dine from their benefactor's hand—A striking instance of power of human kindness to win the trust of creatures which heretofore have known only the hunter's cruelty

Wild deer eating out of the hand of kindly Hermit Brazil; fawn awaiting its turn.

ON LONELY Hardy Island, off the coast of British Columbia, a man's kindness has won the trust and affection of hundreds of nature's most timorous animals. On this island the only inhabitants are T. B. Brazil and his beloved wild deer.

If Brazil, tired of talking to himself in his solitudes, should ever be moved to oratory he might well begin his address with the words "My Deer Friends." And he would be certain of having an audience, too, for the deer are always with him. They follow him about and eat out of his hand.

Day by day, in every way, these animals signify their appreciation of the fact that Brazil has been the greatest benefactor of their kind. For where in all the world is there a record of another man who started a deer cafeteria and kept it going through changing seasons, in sunshine and storm, and through the rigors of famine-laden winters for six years?

To the deer a man like Brazil stands out above all his fellows. The men they have known on the mainland are frightful, gun-toting men who chase and track and hunt this most defenseless of animals, and call the slaughter "sport." But this grizzled island dweller, who started out as a prospector and has become an island hermit, is a different sort of a man to the kind a deer may love and trust.

There may be some strange magnetic quality to the man which enables him to win and deserve this trust, though he himself disclaims any hypnotic or occult powers over animals. If you were to journey to this lonely island he would tell you, as he recently told a Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine correspondent, that there is nothing to it but that the power of human kindness alone won for him the friendship of the deer.

Brazil is proud of his cafeteria for deer and considers it the show place of his island home. In the forest surrounding his little cabin he placed several tables. There was only one at first; but season after season the patronage of this unique restaurant grew, until now there are tables enough to accommodate the hundreds of deer which have sought refuge on the island.

At each table are rows of bowls from which the four-footed guests obtain their food. While they dine, Brazil finds delight in serving in the capacity of a waiter; and while he is thus engaged the deer pay no more attention to his presence than the diners at a banquet pay to the self-effacing servitors who distribute the food. Each deer has its own bowl and Brazil says that the table manners at his island feasts are better than he has seen in some places supposed to be more refined.

Brazil first set foot on the island about six years ago. For some time he observed no signs of wild animal life. Then one day, through a tangle of undergrowth, he saw two deer slaking their thirst at a stream several hundred yards away. Winter was coming on. Brazil, who had been an outdoor man all his life, knew that in that rigorous season food would be scarce for his two island companions, the deer.

Many days passed and he did not see the deer again, though he knew they were on the island and he put food out for them, at first at quite a distance from the cabin. He noted that the food was consumed. Then day by day he decreased the distance between the house and the food pans. Shyly the two deer came closer and closer, day by day. One day Brazil ventured to show himself at the door of the cabin. They scampered off at sight of him, but, seemingly reassured by the fact that this wonderful stranger did not shoot at them as they fled, they returned in a short time, cautiously and with many advances, feints and retreats, it is true, but they returned and continued their meal, though Brazil stood in the door of his cabin.

Wild deer enjoying a treat of prunings from Brazil's orchard.

This was the "grand opening" of Brazil's Deer Cafeteria, though at the time he did not suspect that the business would have a phenomenal growth. In the autumn the original two deer returned, bringing five more. The next year there were 30. The number has grown annually. Now, after the lapse of six years, Brazil counts them by the hundreds.

Whatever anyone else may think, no one could make Brazil believe that deer have not some means of communicating with each other and spreading the cheering information that Hardy Island is one place in this perilous world where there is a man who would rather feed deer than shoot them. He is quite certain that, through some mysterious system of broadcasting, the first two deer spread the news even unto the mainland that the hitherto unheard-of kindness of one man had made Hardy Island a refuge and a place where the "welcome" sign was always out for deer.

Now the deer literally flock to Hardy Island when the hunting season is at its height on the mainland. In the autumn Brazil can stand on the shore and see great herds of them swimming to his haven from the mainland and from nearby larger islands. That is his signal to get busy. He scurries back to the house and puts provender into the bowls on his cafeteria counter. In a short time there is a great rush for the tables.

Some of the deer that were earliest to partake of Brazil's bounty do not stop at the cafeteria tables. They go right up to the cabin and eat from their benefactor's hand.

If Brazil is not in sight some of the more venturesome deer will rattle their horns against the door and keep up the racket until he appears in person and feeds them. One great buck, for a period of several months, appeared at the cabin nightly and on several occasions was so insistent in rattling the door that Brazil got out of bed to feed him.

It must be remembered that these deer were born in the wild and came to maturity in the fear of man. In all other respects, except for their implicit trust in Brazil, they are as wild as ever. No other man can approach them. The photographer who made the pictures illustrating this article had to keep carefully concealed; even the click of his camera seemed to strike terror to the cafeteria diners.

THE "GHOST" THAT A BRITISH PE NCOUN

Bold young Lord St. Audries tells how he visited a deserted mansion in a lonely place at night and what mysterious influence he encountered—"Like an anesthetic, influence from a small room"—A heavy crash, blood-curdling cries, indescribable noises, the tragedy of the bathroom—The fight on the stairs and "the sensation of incredible evil"—This phantom was black, it leaped and plunged, yet made no noise by these movements—What was it? :-:

LORD ST. AUDRIES, who describes below in vivid terms his recent experience with something mysterious—an apparition, a ghost or what not—in a deserted English country mansion long known as a haunted house, served with credit in the Grenadier Guards during the World War and by virtue of his title of nobility is a member of the House of Lords. He is the son of the first Baron St. Audries, who, better known as Sir Alexander Acland-Hood, was vice chamberlain to the household of Queen Victoria and also that of King Edward. For some time Sir Alexander was chief Conservative "whip" in Parliament. The present Lord St. Audries is 29 years old.

LORD ST. AUDRIES.

By LORD ST. AUDRIES

DO YOU believe in ghosts? Or are you one of those fortunate persons who have no fear of the unseen? Or, again, do you belong to the great majority who keep an open mind, but who like to feel, on Christmas eve, that, after all, just around the corner, in the mysterious darkness, something might happen?

I believe in ghosts, and not only on Christmas eve. For it was on a perfect summer evening, in July, 1920, tranquil and moonlit, that the astounding experience befell me which the editor of the London Weekly Dispatch has requested me to relate.

I was staying in Devonshire with an old Oxford friend who had taken orders. I had been living a delightful, care-free existence in the open air, bathing and playing tennis; in fact, doing everything but think of ghosts.

Then, one night at dinner, the conversation turned, as it so often does, to the psychic, and the usual discussion took place. Paul, my Oxford friend, had been reading stories by Algernon Blackwood, and was still deeply affected by the impression they had made on him. His brother, Philip, a clever, cool-headed young man, who was spending his long vacation at home, openly scoffed at his foolishness, and a keen argument took place.

Finally, Paul leaned forward and said: "Well, we have an opportunity of testing all these theories."

I asked him what he meant.

And then he explained. Not a mile away, on the farthest side of the hill, standing off the road, in a desolate and overgrown garden, was a house which I had often noticed. We will call it Weir Court (not its correct name). This house had been empty for years. It had an evil reputation. Grass had grown thick on its deserted drive, bats had built their nests in the blank windows, the roof had fallen in, making the top floor unapproachable. But no workmen would venture to repair the roof, and, though the house was for sale, no tenant could be found for it.

"Why not go there and see, and test for yourselves?"

The question come from Philip, who did not believe anything he had not thoroughly tested for himself. And something in his tone of cool skepticism made me feel that I should like to take him at his word.

And so it came that eventually, at about 10 o'clock, we set out. The night was very still, with that luxuriant beauty that one associates with a Devonshire midsummer. We must have looked a strange trio as we walked along the lonely road—Paul with a candle and matches in his hand and a crucifix in his pocket, swinging a stick and whistling an air from "[illegible]" myself wondering what was in store for us.

"Here we are," said Paul, after we had been [illegible] about 20 minutes.

I shall never forget the strange and [illegible] pearance of that house. It stood back from the [illegible] in a garden tangled with undergrowth, the [illegible] falling from the walls, and not even the [illegible] could give any glamour to its gaunt nakedness.

To enter the house it was necessary to climb [illegible] gate, to go down some steep area steps, and to [illegible] outside until one arrived at the front. It was [illegible] sible to enter by means of a window giving [illegible] basement.

This we accomplished. The window was [illegible] without a sash, and I remember that Paul [illegible] prop it up with a stick, "in case anyone wants to [illegible] out in a hurry." It was lucky that he did so.

We stepped into the basement, Paul holding [illegible] candle. Never was there such a scene of [illegible]. Plaster had fallen from the ceiling and the [illegible] was littered with rubble, so that it was [illegible] to move one's foot even an inch without [illegible] echoes—a point I would ask you to remember.

"This way," said Paul, pointing to the [illegible] went up the stairs, which were rickety but [illegible] found ourselves in a large hall.

Our first plan was to examine the house [illegible]. It was right at the beginning of this [illegible] that what I may term the prelude to the [illegible] took place. We had been to the front room [illegible] looked over every nook and cranny, Philip [illegible] up a running fire of conversation, which was [illegible] ways, rather comforting. And then suddenly [illegible] stopped. I looked at him. His face was dead [illegible] over part of it there seemed to be creeping a [illegible]. Then he spoke, in a blank, expressionless voice:

"The candle—quick, the candle." And he [illegible] down the stairs. We found him in a state of [illegible] outside.

This is Philip's account, which he has [illegible] me: "To tell the honest [illegible] I was bored by the whole [illegible] ceedings. I did not believe [illegible] psychic phenomena and [illegible] sidered it foolish to [illegible] wonderful evening in [illegible] ing round an old house, [illegible] so when we started to [illegible] the rooms I admit that I [illegible] ed the whole thing as a [illegible]

"When we came out [illegible] hall I was thinking, [illegible] quite precise, of the [illegible] policy of Queen Elizabeth, [illegible] which I was specialising [illegible] moment. Then suddenly [illegible] what I can only describe [illegible] anesthetic. I have had [illegible] eral operations for my [illegible] in the past, and each [illegible] always affected me in [illegible] ly a similar way. The [illegible] say, a black film has [illegible] ly stolen over my brain [illegible] left to right. The right [illegible] of my brain remains [illegible] till the last. [illegible] just enough presence of [illegible] to get out before I [illegible]. For I knew that the [illegible] trouble came from a [illegible] room on the right, down [illegible] corridor at the end of [illegible] hall.

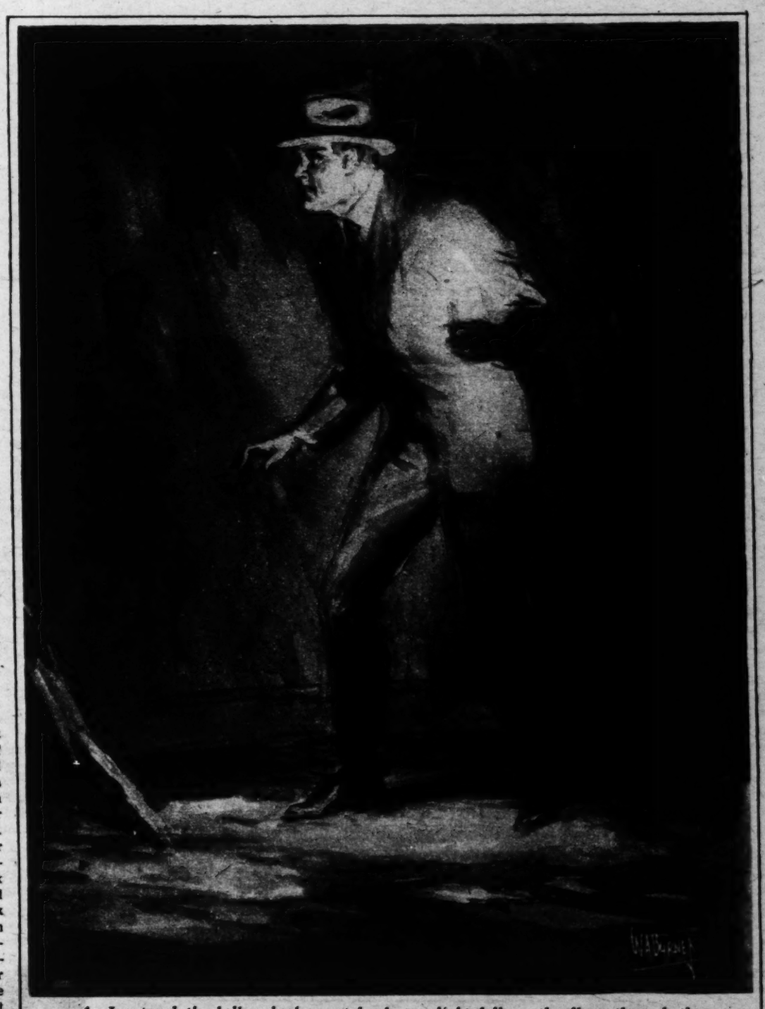
"I have no explanation [illegible] offer."

That is the account [illegible] Philip, the confirmed [illegible]

Naturally, after what [illegible] happened, we felt [illegible] about leaving Philip. [illegible] ever, he affirmed after [illegible] minutes that he felt [illegible] all right "as long as [illegible] mained in the garden. [illegible] ing would induce him [illegible] back to the house.

Paul and I returned [illegible] the candle in order to [illegible] the house from top to [illegible] tom. This we did with [illegible] lute thoroughness. Not [illegible] board, not a crack in [illegible] escaped us. We paid [illegible] lar attention to the room [illegible] from which Philip [illegible] evil influence seemed [illegible] was bare, desolate and [illegible] mantle, with a few [illegible] dirty green paper [illegible] from the walls. We



As I entered the hall, a broken patch of moonlight fell on the floor through the cracked roof and reminded me of the sane, wholesome world outside.

Something rushed,

[illegible] went out again, empt[illegible] [illegible]termined, by what irresistibl[illegible] [illegible]to return. Something called [illegible] [illegible]had made me feel that, after [illegible] [illegible]discover in that house. Of course, they endeavored to dissuade me. How-r, I persisted, and it was arranged that I should ke from time to time to show that I was still alive, d that they should whistle back.

I took the candle and gingerly climbed back through e window. I admit that I felt a little creepy as I nded the silent stairs, and heard the voices of my mds drift farther and farther away. But as I ened the hall, a broken patch of moonlight fell on e floor through the cracked roof, and reminded me at the sane, wholesome world outside.

I should here point out that not only was the house
ly (our search had been meticulous) but that there as no possibility of anybody entering it without pass-g Paul and Philip, and, in any case, without making considerable noise on the rubbled floor.

I sat down at the bottom of the stairs—it was the nly place to sit—and waited. There was absolute since. Opposite me were the two large front rooms.
To the right of them a corridor onto which gave small room from which I had felt all the evil influce coming. The door of the room, which was some et away, I watched intently.

I buried my head in my hands and fell to wondering at type of people had inhabited this strange house in ast. Weird tales ran through my brain of some the things which had been seen here which Paul had ld me so we walked along, tales of a strange man ho had never ventured outside but had taken in pro-ions through the door with his white hands—long, ith fingers pale as death. And how those hands
d been seen on the wall, tapping—tapping.

I pulled myself together and thought of more cheer-l things. I whistled again, the echoes resounding dly against the cold walls. From outside came the reassuring whistle. That reassured me and I turned y attention again to the little room.

Suddenly I felt that all was not well. Somebody, mething, was trying to make me go away. The air as charged with a hostile influence. I knew I was ounted. And I knew that the force came from the om with the open door down the corridor which was watching.

I leant forward and looked into the semi-darkness.
t looked I felt, as though it were a keen wind,
e influence growing stronger and stronger. I sumoned every effort of will power and tried to rise my feet.

Nothing happened. Out of the door, down the dark pas-sage, something rushed, like an immense bat, towards me. I say something, because in the few seconds in which the episode lasted I had no time to see clearly. It was black from head to foot and it seemed to be built in the form of a very powerful man. But two things made me know that it was no human being that sprang towards me. First, I could see no face. There was just a hideous blank, that was all. And, secondly, though it came with huge leaps over the rough, rubbled floor, it made no noise. There was absolute silence all the time.

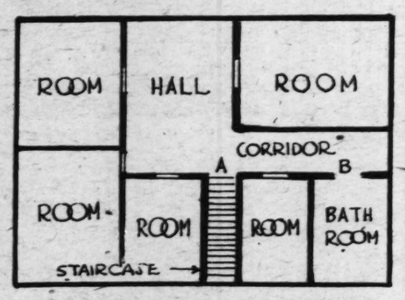
Now, I am not a small man. As a matter of fact, I am 6 feet 2 in my socks, and I think I may say that I am built in proportion to my size. Moreover, I was in the best of condition and, seated as I was in a defensive position, I think I may say that it would have taken a pretty powerful man to knock me over.

But when this thing dashed out I was struck backwards with an irresistible force. And as I fell I felt a sensation of incredible evil, as though the forces of hell were conspiring against me. And with it something warm, not physically warm but with a psychic warmth that cloyed and enveloped.

The rest is told in a few words. For a moment the whole world was blank, and then I found myself fighting, struggling with I know not what down the steep stairs. Who or what it was, if it was one or two or a dozen, I do not know. All I know is that I saw nothing and that I just managed to fight my way outside, where I sank down on the grass.

The rest is best told by Paul, from whose written narrative I quote:

"When Lord St. Audries first went into the house, we naturally felt somewhat anxious as to what would happen. After all, he was our guest, and after my brother's experience I did not feel that I was justified in letting him go in alone. However, when he whistled I felt reassured. I whistled back and waited with interest but without fear.



Plan of the haunted floor. "A" is where Lord St. Audries watched. "B" is door from which the "ghost" appeared.

"I think about a quarter of an hour must have passed without anything uncanny happening. I was just about to turn to my brother to suggest that we should call him back and go home, when something so extraordinary happened that I must narrate it in detail.

"The night was absolutely windless. That is an important point. I noticed that a tall belt of poplar trees at the end of the garden were without movement of any sort. It therefore follows that what we heard and felt was, whatever else it may have been, not wind.

"With absolute suddenness, sweeping over our heads, something came. I could not call it a wind, though I felt it. I could not call it a noise, though there was in one's ear a sensation of rushing. A second afterwards there came from the house one of the most terrible cries I have ever imagined, as though somebody had been violently stabbed in the back. It was Lord St. Audries' voice and was followed by the sound of a heavy crash.

"Aghast, I turned to my brother. He rushed to the entrance. Then we realized that we could not get in, for the place was pitch dark and so blocked up that it was quite impossible to force an entry. A cloud had drifted over the moon, and it was impossible to find our way through the wreckage of the basement without candles.

"We therefore ran at full speed to the neighboring house, whose tenants I fortunately knew, in order to obtain a light. As we vaulted the gate the whole haunted house resounded with violent shocks and shouts.

"We secured the candle and tore back. The noise in the house was indescribable. And then it suddenly ceased and we saw Lord St. Audries advancing toward us, covered with dirt and plaster."

That is Paul's narrative.

I offer no explanation for this story beyond saying that it is true in every detail. However, the following points may be of interest:

1. It has transpired that the small room which was the center of the trouble was once a bathroom in which, some 50 years ago, a particularly atrocious murder had been committed by a semi-insane doctor, who had afterwards committed suicide.

2. No dog will venture into the garden of the house, and many refuse even to pass it.

3. On the next night to my experience (at midnight, to be precise) the inhabitants of the neighboring house, who are also confirmed skeptics, were awakened by the sound of a violent report which, they allege, came from "Weir Court."

The house is still standing there and it remains without a tenant.

GREATEST EXPLOITS OF CELEBRAT

VI.—THE STATUE OF ISIS

By WILLIAM NELSON TAFT

MOST of the objects in what Bill Quinn, retired Secret Service operative, is fond of calling his "crime museum" are hardly of a decorative nature, having been selected solely because of their connection with criminal cases that have occupied the attention of the detectives of two continents.

The delivery slip which formed the principal clew to a daring series of department store robberies, the framed letter which enabled C. D. West to trace a band of financial crooks from New York to El Paso and back again to Chicago, the lead pencil which figured so prominently in the murder of Jules Santon—none of these could be regarded as additions to any room where the scheme of decoration is attractiveness rather than inherent interest.

But there is one object in the crime museum of the old detective that looks as if it might have been taken from the cabinet in the Egyptian room of some famous art gallery, a tiny statue of Isis which stands upon the mantel and forms a startling contrast to the other rather grewsome and distinctly ordinary objects which surround it.

Quinn had hinted upon more than one occasion that, behind this statuette, as behind all the other objects in his den, there was a story of crime, a tale of detective prowess which outrivaled the exploits of any purely fictional character. Seeking to draw the old man out one evening I called his attention to the statuette and asked why it was that a tiny hole, hardly more than half an inch in diameter, appeared to have been drilled through the head and down into the body of the metal.

"Was it always that way or was there something else on top of the figure—a crown or other ornament which was lost after you got it?" I inquired.

"It came into my possession in precisely the way you see it now," Quinn answered. "and I can assure you that the hole in the top is the most interesting feature of the entire piece. Someone, probably centuries ago, drilled it there and filled the cavity with—— But that's getting ahead of the story, in which, incidentally, the principal character is a man whose fame rests upon something rather more subtle than his ability to solve the mysteries of crime."

* * * * * * * * *

While the amateur detective is proverbially a blunderer except in the novels, where he always outwits the professional and shows up the central office men as a crowd of incompetents, there have been a few cases in the annals of crime where the private investigator has scored a striking success—usually before the regular police have had time to pick up the scent. Merely as examples, you will recall the little affairs of the blood-stained duck feathers and the hat with the battered brim. But even more striking than these was the work done by Dr. Thomas G. Masaryk, later president of the Czecho-Slovak Republic, during his sojourn in Cairo a few years ago.

Shortly after reaching Egypt, Dr. Masaryk chanced across an old friend of his, a Dr. Frederick Hauptman, who had been engaged in archeological researches in the vicinity of the Pyramids and who had picked up two treasures—a tiny statuette of Isis and a necklace of gold and rubies, both of which had evidently been stolen from the tomb of one of the ancient Kings.

"I ran across them only a few days ago," Dr. Hauptman explained in answer to his friend's inquiry as to where he had obtained them. "I suppose, of course, that they were stolen and there is little doubt that there would be trouble if it became known that I had them in my possession. But, on the other hand, there is no other way of collecting valuable pieces of this kind unless you get them from questionable sources. So what's the use of worrying about it?"

And he shrugged his shoulders with an air of finality as if to indicate that he did not care further to pursue the matter.

"But," protested the man who was destined to be the ruler of one of the Central European republics, "aren't you running a tremendous risk in carrying those things around with you? The statuette doesn't appear to have much intrinsic value, but the necklace must be worth many thousands of dollars."

"Yes," was the answer, "a good many thousand dollars more than I paid for it, incidentally. The man who passed it on to me was very evidently afraid of being caught with the gems in his possession, for he accepted a ridiculously small price without even haggling over it—and that, in this part of the world, is prima facie evidence that the article sold has not been acquired through legal channels. However, as I intend to leave Egypt within a few days I don't think there's much danger except from the customs officials. If they get wind of my good fortune, I'll never get out of the country with the necklace, and they might even raise a row about the statuette, although that, as you say, has little value apart from its historic interest."

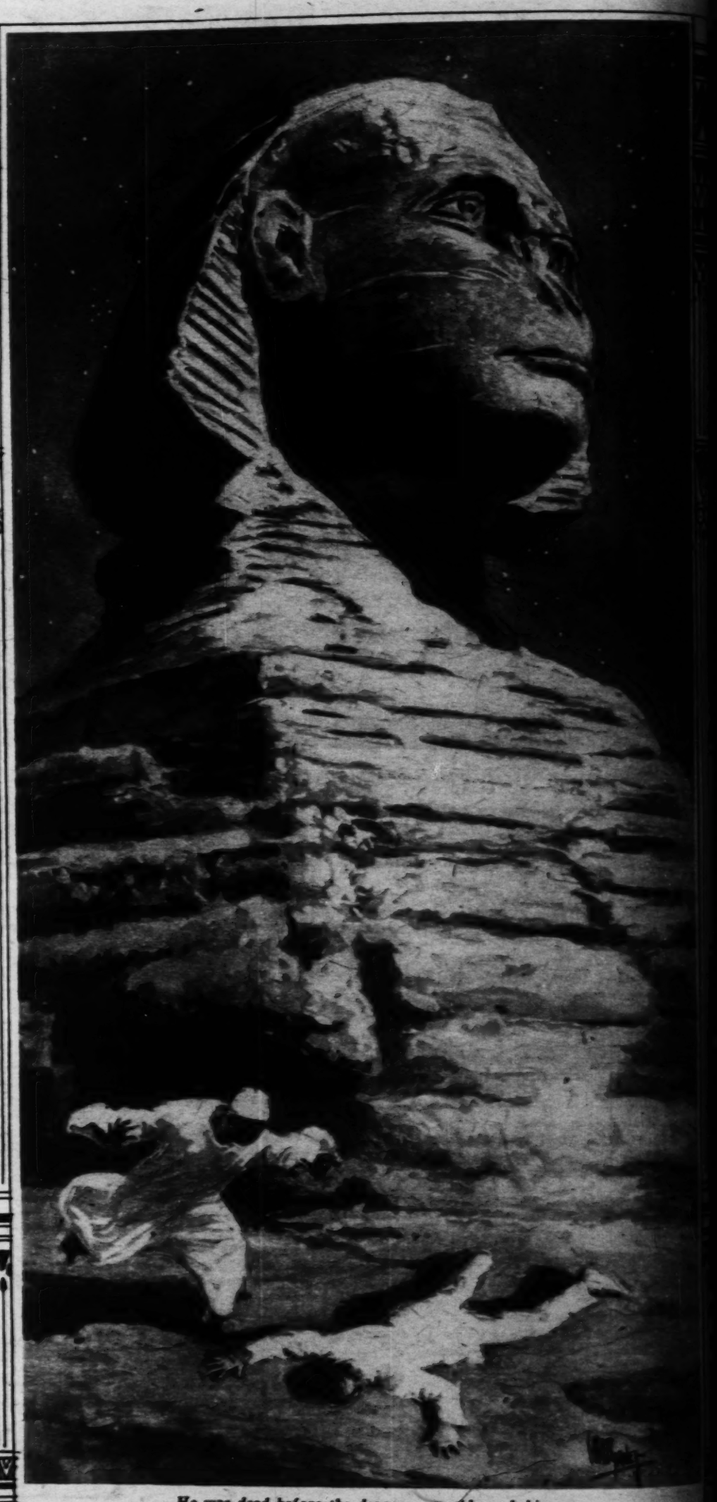
"Well, I trust you get away with them safely," was Dr. Masaryk's final comment, "but I must admit that you are running a risk I wouldn't care to. Anything is likely to happen to you in this country, you know, for it is the home of black magic, and there are those who maintain that the curse of the Pharaohs still rests upon any who rifle their tombs or who assist in any way in the desecration of their bodies."

"Oh, there's no danger from that score," Dr. Hauptman smiled. "This is the twentieth century A. D. not B. C., and, besides, I am leaving in the morning, and naturally I do not care to intrust them either to the mails or to my luggage. The value of both the statuette and the necklace makes it [illegible] carry them with me."

After dinner the two doctors chatted for a [illegible] ments and then parted, agreeing to meet in the [illegible] ing for a word of farewell.

Shortly after midnight Dr. Masaryk was [illegible] a violent pounding on his door and the voice [illegible] manager of the hotel requesting him to [illegible] ately because an accident had happened to [illegible] man. Instantly Dr. Masaryk's mind framed [illegible] of the necklace and the statuette.

"What kind of an accident?" he demanded.



He was dead before the dragoman could reach him.

"How was it that Dr. Hauptman left the hotel after he had told me definitely that he didn't intend to go out any more this evening?" Dr. Masaryk demanded.

The Arab looked aside for a moment, his eyes shifting with a sort of half-hesitant expression, but he finally replied in the dialect of the district:

"That I do not know. I had just finished assisting the doctor to complete his packing when he suddenly said that he thought he would like to take a final walk in the moonlight before he left the country, possibly forever," and here Masaryk thought that he caught the glimpse of a sardonic gleam in the eyes of the man he was questioning.

"You're sure that you didn't suggest to the doctor that he ought to go out and that you didn't offer any inducement to him to leave the hotel?"

"Inducement? How could a man of this type induce his master to leave his room against his wishes?" interrupted the manager of the hotel, who had been standing to one side listening to the interrogation.

"There are ways of accomplishing things which are not obvious on the surface" was Dr. Masaryk's reply, and he added in English, "and I think this man understands what I am suggesting."

But the Arab's only answer was an emphatic shaking of his head and the mumbled statement that he knew nothing whatever of his master's affairs, and that his only business was to observe his master's wishes without questions.

"What happened after you left the hotel?" Dr. Masaryk continued.

"Dr. Hauptman walked several paces ahead of me, and we went in the direction of the Sphinx," the dragoman explained.

"You met no one on the way?"

"No one, sir. Nor did I hear any sounds that were at all suspicious."

"Continue," Dr. Masaryk ordered, as the Arab halted, apparently expecting another question.

"We started to climb the path that leads to the top of the Sphinx. The moon was clear, and it would have been possible to see anybody or anything had it been in the way. About half way up I halted for a moment.

THE stories in this series deal with the exploits of 12 world-famous detectives, presented in narrative form, but with all the details of their solutions of baffling crimes precisely as they occurred. They are built around the experiences of such men as William J. Burns, Chief of the United States Secret Service; Supt. John Shore and Inspector Kendall of Scotland Yard; Capt. Grant Williams, Chief of the Bureau of Missing Persons of the New York police; George S. Dougherty, Deputy Commissioner of Police in New York; Inspector Byrnes and Dr. Balthazard, the famous European criminologist. Through the entire series runs the vein of serial interest supplied by the reminiscences of Bill Quinn, lately of the United States Secret Service, who tells these stories in his den.

The doctor went on. Suddenly I heard a sound as of the swishing of air above me, and looking up I saw what seemed to be a huge body come swooping down from above, and a moment later there was a sound from the ground below, as if something had struck it with great force. Frightened, I called the doctor, whom I thought was still in front of me, but there was no answer. I looked around the corner where he had gone, and there was no one in sight. The light of the moon shone full upon the face of the Sphinx, but there was not even a bird to be seen.

"Then looking down I saw what appeared to be the body of the doctor lying upon the sands at the foot of the Sphinx, and I made my way back to him as rapidly as possible. But the path is narrow and the curves are treacherous, so it was fully 10 minutes before I reached the ground. By that time the doctor was not only dead, but his body was almost as black as it was when they brought him to the hotel."

Here the Arab paused, and a visible shudder passed over his body, while fear gave his face a tint that was almost ashen.

"You're certain that it wasn't possible for anyone to have been concealed around the corner of the path where the doctor disappeared?" inquired the manager of the hotel.

"Quite impossible, sir. As you know, the path is not more than two feet wide, and there are no crevices in which a man could hide."

"Or a snake?" Dr. Masaryk asked, keeping his eyes fixed upon those of the man before him.

"If the learned doctor knows of any snakes whose bite turns human flesh black in less than a quarter of an hour he knows more than we who have lived here for hundreds of generations," came the reply.

"If Dr. Hauptman didn't come to his death through a human agency and there is no poisonous reptile or insect that could have been responsible for the wound from which he died, how do you explain this occurrence?" demanded the European roughly.

At the question, which he had evidently been expecting, the Arab's face went a shade whiter, and he lifted his arms with that peculiar gesture of obeisance to the unknown which is the Eastern equivalent of the Occidental's shrugging of the shoulders, and answered: "Who knows? Perhaps it was fate—perhaps it was black magic—perhaps it was the hand of Isis."

"Isis?" and Dr. Masaryk picked up the word and hurled it back as though it had been a tangible weapon. "How do you connect Isis with an affair of this kind? Why not Osiris, or one of the other more powerful gods of ancient Egypt?"

Again his only answer was the expressive lifting of the palms.

"Merely because the name of the Goddess of Agriculture was the first to occur to me."

"And not because you knew that Dr. Hauptman had in his possession a tiny statuette of this goddess?"

"I knew nothing of the doctor's affairs save what he told me, and he told me nothing of the kind you speak of."

Seeing that he could obtain nothing more from the dragoman, who appeared to parry his questions with an ease inherited from a lifelong residence in a country where dissimulation is second nature, Dr. Masaryk turned his attention elsewhere, and, by adroit questioning of the hotel employes, endeavored to determine whether any suspicious characters had been observed in the neighborhood during the day. None had been reported, however, and it was with a feeling that he was being baffled by something that was almost within his grasp that the European went back to his room and endeavored to solve the mystery through the smoke of one of his favorite cigars.

"Here is a crime," he told himself, "where the motive is perfectly obvious. News of Dr. Hauptman's purchase of the necklace and the statuette—or possibly only the former, for the bronze figure had little intrinsic value—must have gotten around among the natives of the vicinity. Unfortunately, Dr. Hauptman didn't even tell me where he had bought the relics, or from whom. It is more than possible that they came into his possession through the agency of the very dragoman that I have been questioning. But it is certain that I will never discover this through anything he will tell me. The solution of the mystery must come from some other source.

"Knowing what I do about the Arab temperament, I don't believe that even the famous third-degree treatment of the American police would avail in this instance. Hauptman's servant would merely assume his air of stolid indifference, and nothing that anyone could do would force a word from him if he didn't care to speak it. The local authorities may be able to make use of some effective means for getting at the truth, but I doubt that even they could solve the whole mystery—for apart from the question of the agent responsible for Dr. Hauptman's death, there is also the

One Missouri Farmer Beats Two Able Lawyers at Their Own Game

"Common sense was my only tutor," says F. H. McKenzie, who went from his farm to the Courthouse in Kansas City and served as "his own lawyer" in a three-day case wherein he was sued for $45,000 — He got a swift verdict in his favor and incidentally vindicated the memory of his dead son :-: :-: :-:

"I object!" shouted Farmer McKenzie. "I do not want a verdict given in sympathy. This case must be decided only upon its merits."

"EVERY man his own doctor," suggests M. Coue. "Every man his own lawyer," says F. H. McKenzie, a retired farmer of Weston, Mo., near Kansas City. This hard-headed, elderly Scotch-American agriculturist, however, is making no studied effort to Coueize the general public along the line of anti-lawyerism. He is merely an outstanding individual layman who has no use for lawyers, professionally speaking, and the other day he proved just that when for the third time in his life of 65 years to date he appeared in a courtroom.

By appearing thus as his own lawyer, Farmer McKenzie saved himself $45,000 and also vindicated the memory of his dead son. Moreover, he saved himself a fat legal fee. It was the first time he had entered court in that capacity. The other two times when he had court experience were as a juryman and as a witness. He didn't know very much about court procedure, but he knew enough about common sense to defeat the earnest professional efforts of two able lawyers of Kansas City.

"The law," said Blackstone, the illustrious English commentator, whose works furnish basis for education of all students in law wherever English is spoken, "is common sense."

It is not known whether Farmer McKenzie was aware of that famous foundational principle uttered by Sir William Blackstone about 150 years ago and still struggling up now and then out of the bog of legalistic shysterism and redtapeism, whose miasma beclouds the issue quite frequently in our courts of law and equity. McKenzie of Weston doesn't like to discuss matters of law. He is too busy enjoying life on his big farm after his many years of labor, plus the practice of Scotch thrift, rewarded by prosperity. He was too thrifty to let the lawyers get the better of him in an argument before a learned Judge of the Jackson County Circuit Court in Kansas City.

"The law is common sense."

Judge and jury accepted this simple definition at its full face value after they heard Farmer McKenzie question his witnesses and cross-question the witnesses for the other side, and after they had listened to his argument, the first speech he ever made in all his life.

When, about 70 years ago, the great Hungarian patriot, Louis Kossuth, visited St. Louis and made an eloquent plea in behalf of his Magyar fatherland, trodden down by the Austrian despot, he said: "The justness of my cause is my eloquence." Kossuth was a splendid orator. Farmer McKenzie is no orator at all. It was the justness of his cause that made his speech so eloquent that Judge Charles R. Pence and the jury capitulated, the Judge so charging the jury that that body remained out only long enough to sign a unanimous verdict in favor of Defendant McKenzie.

Throughout the trial of the case, which lasted for three days, McKenzie employed no legal terms and consulted no law books.

"Common sense was my only tutor," he said afterward, modestly disclaiming possession of any unusual skill.

And so, at last, the great secret is out. Courageously has stepped forth the Missouri farmer, ruthlessly tearing the veil of mystery from the stern and sometimes terrifying features of the law. To the consternation of the legal profession he has proved that we can live not only without "poetry, music and art," as Poet Owen Meredith averred, but also perhaps that civilized man can live without lawyers.

The case won by McKenzie as his own lawyer was a suit for damages in the sum of $45,000. Mrs. Mary Stahl of Kansas City, 58 years old, was the plaintiff. In September, 1921, Mrs. Stahl was struck and injured by an automobile driven by Nelson C. McKenzie, 21, son of the defendant. Nelson's brother, A. M. McKenzie, 17, was a passenger in the car. Mrs. Stahl, as the evidence showed, had crossed the street in front of the McKenzie car at a busy downtown corner. The contention of the defense was that she had stepped back in front of the car to avoid some debris that obstructed her path, when she was struck by the fender.

The winter following the accident tragedy entered the McKenzie household twice. Both Nelson McKenzie and his brother died from influenza. Originally the two sons and the father were named as co-defendants in the damage suit. After the death of the sons the petition was redrawn and the father remained as sole defendant.

When the case first was called up on the docket, Judge Pence was somewhat surprised to see an elderly man of nonprofessional aspect arise in court and request a continuance on account of illness in his family. The elderly man was Defendant McKenzie.

"Who is your counsel?" inquired the Court.

"I am, Your Honor," replied Farmer McKenzie.

The continuance was granted. When the case went to trial in January the Court and the bar were keenly interested in the outcome, inasmuch as it had become known that Farmer McKenzie was to match his wits against Attorneys C. A. Randolph and J. M. Fisher, the latter representing the firm of which R. R. Brewster, recent Republican nominee for the United States senatorship, is leading member. Both of these lawyers have had long and important practice in the courts of Kansas City. They are known to the local bar as men learned in the law and as keen antagonists before Judge and jury. Many other members of the bar were present to witness the proceedings. The general prediction was that Farmer McKenzie had made a vital mistake in determining to conduct his own case.

The retired farmer had employed counsel at first, but about four months before the case came to trial he and his lawyer had a disagreement. The attorney then announced that he would withdraw.

"Very well, sir," said the defendant, "I'll be my own lawyer."

Shortly before the case was called, one of the plaintiff's attorneys suggested to McKenzie a compromise settlement out of court. McKenzie refused to compromise. That would mean an admission of his personal liability to a certain extent and it would mean the further admission upon his part that his son, now dead and gone, had driven an automobile carelessly through a crowded street.

"All right," the lawyer is reported to have replied; "go ahead, and we'll give you hell."

"Go to it," invited the defendant.

So the trial started, with a fight-to-finish spirit on both sides.

McKenzie had four witnesses. He examined them. He cross-examined the plaintiff's witnesses. He made objections when common sense gave him cues. He argued in defense of his own questions when opposing counsel took exceptions. Once Judge Pence warned McKenzie against framing for his witnesses what the profession calls "leading questions," such questions being taboo according to the code of practice.

"I rather think," said the triumphant defendant afterward, "that that was about the biggest compliment I received on my legal ability."

At the close of the testimony, the farmer presented his plea to the jury. Attorney Randolph, for the plaintiff, had preceded him, and had alluded to the natural sympathy the jury might be expected to have for a father who recently had lost both of his bright young sons. Farmer McKenzie was on his feet instantly.

"I object!" he shouted. "I want to tell this Court and this jury that the matter of sympathy, either for myself or for this woman who was hurt in the accident, be left out of the situation altogether. I do not want a verdict given in sympathy. This case must be decided only upon its merits."

Between the brilliant orations of the two opposing attorneys, McKenzie had 30 minutes in which to present his argument to the jury.

Three points were emphasized by the defendant: First, the automobile had been bought by the son who drove it, and he had paid for it with his own [illegible]; second, at the time of the accident his son was acting as an agent for F. H. McKenzie, sole defendant in the suit; third, the accident could not have been avoided.

When the jury, after the three days of give and [illegible] between the farmer and the lawyers, reported its verdict for the defendant, some of the onlooking lawyers circulated the report that the fighting farmer had legal tutors on the outside. Then it was that Farmer McKenzie made the remark to the effect that common sense was his only tutor.

"Of course," he added, "I talked over the case with the lawyer I consulted, who withdrew four months ago. Outside of that I had but one bit of legal [illegible] and that was in a purely technical matter."

Then he stated that the night before the case went to the jury he called on Raymond W. Hall, a young lawyer in Kansas City, recently graduated from the University of Missouri. Hall's father, Judge C. H. Hall, lives between Weston and Platte City and is a neighbor of McKenzie.

"I admitted to young Mr. Hall," said the defendant, "that I had struck my first legal snag. I didn't know just exactly how to prepare my list of instructions which I was going to request the Judge to present to the jury. Mr. Hall helped me to put the instructions in proper legal phraseology."

Beyond that, McKenzie was guided altogether by his own layman's viewpoint.

"After all, however," he remarked after the verdict was read, "the law, like everything else, has to come to horse sense."

This was exemplified in one point he made before the jury. Mrs. Stahl was trying to prove that she was struck in the side by the fender of McKenzie's car. The blow, she contended, caused paralysis. McKenzie introduced evidence to show that the fender of the make of car his son drove can strike an adult person in the side, but must hit well below the hip.

"It didn't require a legal education for me to think of that," he remarked.

Farmer McKenzie declares he found legal procedure so simple that he believes the laity would lose much of its awe of the law and of courts if it would follow his example.

"But," he warns, "the big thing is understanding. To be your own lawyer is to be sure you're right, wholly right, in your case; then go ahead. The law is founded on right and justice. I had always known that, but I never was sure of it before. Now I know it is true. So, if you're right and your cause is just, you can be sure of going into court without hesitation and getting justice. But if you're not quite sure you're right—well, then, I don't know.

"The biggest aid a layman can take with him into a courtroom is self-confidence. People are too prone to think the courts are hedged about with mystery and that law is a sealed enigma, open only to attorneys with diplomas from law schools.

"Just believe in yourself, go ahead and hew to the line, and ignore the side issues. Then, if you're right, all the lawyers in the world can't beat you."

As set forth already, Farmer McKenzie of Weston has been in courtrooms only thrice in his life, and the last time he saved himself $45,000 and a counsel fee by adhering to his theory, which possibly may account for his enthusiasm. The Post-Dispatch Sunday magazine writer who interviewed the successful defendant has been in courtrooms a very great many times, but is not inclined to Coueize the McKenzie procedure as invariably safe and sane for the laity.

The International Album Of Lausanne

Baron Haishi of Japan.

Premier Mussolini of Italy.

Former Premier Venizelos of Greece.

Premier Poincare of France.

AT THE late and truly lamented parley of the Powers at Lausanne, where nothing looking toward the rehabilitation of Europe was settled, behind the scenes sat one Derso. You did not find his name in the voluminous press reports of the conference. As a political factor he did not count. Yet Derso, the celebrated Hungarian cartoonist, made a record of that meeting of politicians which, while possibly, history may find more important than the chronicle of what the men around the big table did—or didn't.

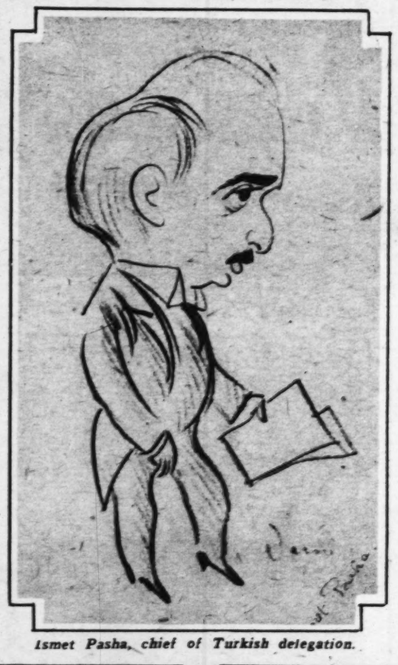
Derso drew caricatures of the European celebrities who sat and talked, and talked and sat, and then got up and went home disgusted. His drawing may be termed the international album of Lausanne. Though these cartoons will not bring peace any nearer to the world, nor restore the German mark to normalcy, nor put the United States into the League of Nations, they do serve a useful end, namely, that of instilling the saving grace of humor into a most serious proposition.

Take a look, for instance, at our large-bellied Turkish friend, Djelaleddin Arif Bey. But for his protuberant architecture at the bow he might be mistaken for a certain well-known St. Louisan, one who himself has served as a diplomat in Europe.

Then there is the other Turk, Ismet Pasha, chief of his country's delegation. Ismet looks no more like a Turk here than a Plymouth Rock hen looks like a home turkey gobbler. But put his fez on and note the difference.

By the black shirt of the Fascisti you will recognize at once Benito Mussolini, Italy's new Premier. As a matter of fact, Mussolini dresses to the top notch of formality when he sits in at conferences of the Powers. But as leader of the black-shirt boys, who put him, figuratively, on the throne of Italy, he is entitled to appear here in Fascisti garb.

The gentleman in the plug hat, the six-gun and the belt of cartridges is not Jesse James disguised as a mere European diplomatic bandit. No—he's none other than Tchitcherin, the bolshevist from Moscow, representing the Government which, some say, is trying to hold up civilization on the highway.



Ismet Pasha, chief of Turkish delegation.

The first name of Eleutherios Venizelos is almost as hard to spell, pronounce and remember as the surname of the Russian representative. Let's just call him E. V., then, and offer the observation that Tchitcherin will have to be a bolder and brainier bandit than he now appears if he succeeds in holding up this Greek ex-Premier, who by many is held to be the brainiest statesman in Europe. You wouldn't suspect that, from the Derso drawing.

The Marchese Garroni, as seen here, resembles another noted St. Louisan, though the latter has nothing of the Italian in his ancestry, so far as his friends are aware.

The caricature of Baron Haishi of Japan is really a pretty fair likeness of that interesting celebrity, according to those who have seen him in action.

M. Radovsky, who was President of the Ukraine until the Moscow bolshevist operators began to gather together again all the Russias of the late Czar, and who may emerge from the muck as President of the Ukraine, recalls the late President McKinley, save that he lacks eyebrows. You may remember that McKinley's eyes were bearded like the pard.

Derso also caricatured M. Bompard and M. Barrere as a duo looking fierce enough to fight a duel, but they are crowded off this page partly because of space lack and partly because they wear whiskers closely resembling those of Secretary of State Hughes in his later aspects, and somebody might yell "Beaver!" at them and spoil the fun.

The Hungarian cartoonist also depicted Premier Stamboulinsky of Bulgaria, a full-faced gentleman who looks considerably like the late William Marion Reedy of illustrious and pleasant memory.

Lost His Job As Steel Salesman ound

"NOMADS BY THE BROOK"

Frederick Rushing Roe of St. Louis regarded painting only as a hobby until business depression left him with time on his hands—Since last September nearly 30 of his pictures have found ready sale and the demand continues—Prefers a palette knife to a brush when putting color into his vivid woodland scenes

FREDERICK RUSHING ROE.

In 1921, the name was that of a young steel salesman traveling out of St. Louis; in 1923, it is that of a painter in oils whose swift success is denoted by the sale of 26 of his paintings in Chicago since last Sept. 10 and the scurrying of New York dealers to St. Louis to contract his further production.

In 1921 Roe had a major in business and a time-restricted hobby for dabbing with colors. Business depression deprived him of his major. He lost his job, but he found himself. Like an unleashed schoolboy, he plunged into his hobby, lavishing upon it all the pent-up ardor of lost years.

Two years of wading in his new freedom finds Roe with a command of color and a rioting imagination that not only is softening the blighting eye which metropolitan critics commonly turn upon upstarts from "out there," but is transfixing the fancy of those who buy pictures—a combination as happy as it is rare.

Roe has not been unknown in St. Louis. For several years his thumb-box "things" have beamed like jewels from nooks in more than one Artists' Guild exhibition. Frequently there was curiosity that he never exhibited any larger canvases. The little works seemed more like notes to be enlarged and developed to the full of the value they suggested. The fact was that during these years business still was Roe's major and the necessary time was not his.

Many of the things now coming from his palette knife—he rarely works with the brush—are in reality the enlargement of his earlier work and in the process apparently have lost none of their intense quality or color.

Roe paints landscapes and in most of them places a gypsy camp. Perhaps the gypsies are his talisman. At least, the mysticism of the wanderers from Romany seems to blow out from his forest recesses and stimulate like Spanish wine sequestered and slumbering imaginings.

Frederick Rushing Roe in his studio

When Roe was a steel salesman, he carried a small sketch box with him. At night, when the card game was on in the hotel "office," Roe was in his room in the country hotel, studying the cracks in the walls and weaving them into cloud effects or the majestic reachings of great trees. Stains upon the wall paper suggested other "plots." Every response of his imagination he set down upon his little boards, 8x10 inches, which have become notes for the serious work on which he has embarked.

Or, in sections of scenic beauty, Roe wandered from the hotel and waded in the forests. Usually he left his sketch box behind. He only wanted to saturate himself with nature—with the airs, the hills, the light, the sky and always the trees and the vistas they revealed to the seeking eye.

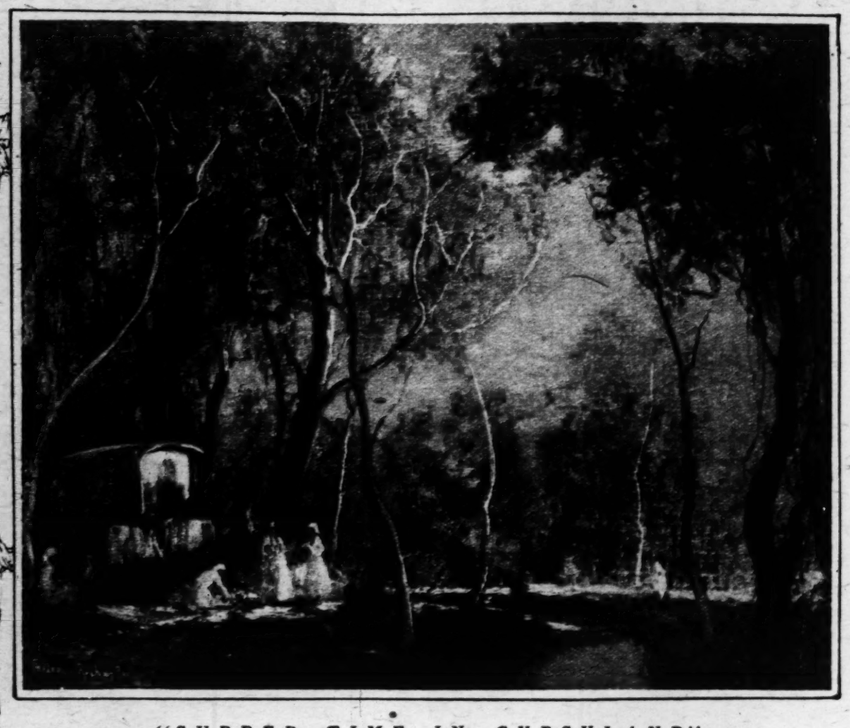
"AT THE SHRINE OF TERPSICHORE"



"SUPPER TIME IN GYPSYLAND"

Recently a collection of Roe's pictures has gone on exhibition in the Noonan-Kocian galleries here. They are quite faithful examples of his work and its range. Roe deals lavishly with color and always that mysticism which seizes popular fancy uncannily.

In his composition there always appears a dome-like arch. He invariably presents also those vistas that Roe, the nature-lover, sought wherever, in his period of preparation, his salesman wanderings led him. A characteristic presentation—towering trees, sheltering in the foreground gypsies. A wagon or two. A stream. Then the eye wanders back into the grove. Other trees in excellent perspective, opening just sufficiently to take the eye back to the farthest recess and a spot of hillside, aglow with the ravishing color of midday, or evening and, perhaps, even the new-breaking morning. His pictures have depth.

Usually, however, Roe makes evening visiting hour for the gypsies. The setting sun penetrates just sufficiently to tip in light the red headcloths of the women and wander onto their brilliant dresses. The trees rise somberly, enshrouding themselves with the first blankets of night.

Roe appears to have found excellent command of the low colors, yet just beside the nightfall scene is of a glorious midday, the sun enameling every leaf color to brilliance as high in color as the adjacent work is low. Those who most praise Roe's accomplishment in his sudden transformation from steel salesman to artist, point out that the intensity of his color is one of his chief charms. When he squirts out high color, his palette does not grow chalky. When the dark tubes begin mixing, there is nothing of muddiness. His colors are consistently clean and pure, their range seemingly limitless.

Roe does not paint nature, but rather her moods. The reaction to a Roe landscape is not that of of a scene, but rather a sensation. It is the mysticism with which he imbues his forest. His spring trees on river banks are supple with sap and yet, when the light shifts upon the canvas, it is not the trees at all which stand forth but the sunset light behind them.

Or, a brown autumn scene gives off no sense of the clump of trees which forms its composition, but rather of the smokes and the hazes of Indian summer—again the mysticism of nature and her moods.

Recently New York has rippled with excitement over the conversion of one of its street corner policemen to a painter in oils. Some of his productions have reached St. Louis. The themes adopted by the policeman-artist and the St. Louis salesman-artist are quite similar. Comparison, however, of handling is interesting. In general, it may be said that the policeman-artist has proved a good copyist. His work shows undeniable predomination by the influence of successful artists who have gone before.

On the other hand, Roe is distinctively Roe, with much thought, individualistic thought, packed within the confines of his landscapes. Roe expresses himself, the policeman-artist a manual accomplishment.

Roe is 35 years old. He had a brief few months of painting instruction in art school here. He joined the Brush and Pencil Club, a sort of co-operative organization for more or less mutual instruction and exchange of ideas. All else of Roe's art is that of a steel salesman with a hobby—a hobby that replaced a business. He is modest under his new success and—still industrious. He is pleased that his work seems to have "caught on." He is eager for new fields. He still seeks the woods. He still leaves his sketchbook behind, seeking always to stimulate imagination.

His presentation of the gypsies is not portrayal of their life. As yet, the camps remain just a recollection of boyhood and a touch to the Roe mysticism. However, he is approaching the gypsies studiously. It may be that he soon will seek to cast onto the canvas a more intimate understanding of those romantic wanderers.

At least the steel market is forgotten.

Restaurant Frocks

Their charm is that you may don one early, go calling and to tea, and still be properly attired for evening.

Red-violet braid forms a striking contrast with purple faille crepe.

Narrow ermine trims this frock of sheer chiffon.

Horizontally striped black crepe and silver-embroidered black chiffon combine in a frock that is slim and smart.

By MME. FRANCES

NEXT to the everyday frock of serge, there's probably nothing so useful and nothing which gives so much satisfactory wear as the becoming restaurant or afternoon frock.

I use the two descriptive adjectives because the same frock serves two purposes, depending upon the need at hand. The stunning afternoon dress becomes the restaurant frock when it's worn to the restaurant to dine and dance.

Your need, too, depends upon the place where you live. In a large city, strictly formal evening clothes are most often the order of the evening. Many of the restaurants and smart dancing places prefer to have their clients dressed in evening clothes, and the full evening dress regalia is the thing that's "worn."

In smaller places strictly formal evening attire is often saved for the private parties and large dances.

One seldom thinks of wearing anything but the restaurant frock to the informal dinner and to the eating place where one drops in to enjoy the food that's accompanied by music and dancing.

So, wherever you live, you will be interested in the type of frock that's shown on the page above. If needs be you can dress early in the afternoon, go calling and to tea and still be properly attired for evening gayety.

For instance, there's the stunning frock on the large figure. Its slim silhouette is decidedly dashing and its materials carry out that impression. The skirt is of black novelty crepe showing horizontal stripes and its blouse portion is of sheer black chiffon embroidered in silver thread. Silver lace and orange piping edge the neck and sleeves and the narrow tie girdle.

To complete this costume she wears a chic wrapped turban. These were much worn during the winter months and will be good for spring. They're convenient, smart and becoming, for every woman can have her milliner make a turban that fits her face perfectly.

Next to this is a restaurant frock of black chiffon edged in ermine. Narrow fur edging, by the way, is equally as smart for spring trimming as it is for winter. I'm showing the back view of this one, as the front is perfectly plain, with a soft girdle of black chiffon at the waistline. The back, as you can see, drops two lengths of material from its lowered neckline. This gives a graceful finish and adds length to the figure. Tiny ermine tails are posed at the back of the neck and find an answering note in a matching bunch placed at the girdle. This frock is also admirably suited to wear for the informal dinner party.

Brown, by the way, is growing more and more popular. Variations of this shade are noticed in all the smart restaurants, and they range in tone from a rich bronze to cafe au lait and leaf brown. There was a time when brown was considered altogether a daytime color, principally because there was no brown that was attractive by artificial light. Now, however, the story is a different one and a most smart evening parties you will see at least one gown in a rich golden brown shade.

A smart expression of the vogue for brown is found in this model which combines satin and lace.

Rich brown satin makes the next frock. It is rather simple, with circular insets at the sides, bronze ornaments at the girdle and brown lace sleeves. The brown hat is of the scoop variety and has three bronze feathers slanting rakishly off one side. These small hats with their narrow, downward-slanting brims, are very smart. When there is no feather the hat is often worn with a tiny veil which drops down an inch or more all about the brim and makes an alluring shade for the eyes. Slim crystal hatpins are often worn with such hats. They are both placed on one side of the brim, with one above and a little longer than the other.

The fourth dress is of purple faille crepe trimmed in braid of red violet. You can see that the frocks for early spring are not going to be uninteresting because of a lack of color. From rich brown to deep purple, bright blue and shades of red, they offer color to the eye and variety to the landscape. The hat which goes with this colorful frock is of purple, with flowers of a red-violet hue posed above and below the brim.

While hats are worn more often than not, you may see by one of the figures that the hat is not obligatory. This makes for pleasing variety, for individuality of coiffure is the rage of the moment. In the smart places you become interested watching for variety in hair arrangements, and you are rewarded for your watchfulness, as no two coiffures are alike. An interesting one leaves the hair smooth and shining, pulling it straight back to a huge knot, or "waterfall."

The coiffure shown here, too, is a popular one. It draws the hair straight back from the face, makes a soft knot low at the neck and finishes it with an ornamental comb. The comb may be amber, tortoise shell or anything that goes well with the hair.

NOTES OF THE FASHIONS

Sport clothes and materials show an amazing variety of checks and plaids, more than for several seasons past, according to New York reports. The one thing to remember is not to overdo these designs. If there is a plain coat, let the skirt be plain, and vice versa. The human eye can scarcely take in more than one of this season's plaid garments at a time.

Hosiery of silk and wool is the chic wear with low shoes. It is even more the fashion than hosiery of silk alone. No stocking is complete without a fastener, clock, say the Fifth avenue shops.

The Japanese Woman's Battle-Cry of Freedom

WHEN Madame Miura appeared in St. Louis recently and sang the title role in "Madame Butterfly" with the San Carlo Grand Opera Company, she was no stranger to a local audience. She had appeared here before in the same role. Probably not one person in any of her audiences, however, was aware that the singer is a radical representative of the new woman of Japan, one who voices the feminine protest against the ancient regime of the overlordism of the male in the Flowery Kingdom. Madame Miura recently appeared in public in her native land as leader in this revolt. In her role as a rebel against traditional Oriental subjection of the wife to the husband, she speaks forth with no uncertain tones in the appended "open letter" to her husband.

When Madame Miura published in a Tokyo woman's magazine an open letter to her husband, she sounded the marching-song of the Oriental wife's rebellion from subjection to the male—"Madame Butterfly" in real life amazes the world by acting in a role altogether opposite to the one in which she sang in St. Louis

By ADACHI KINNOSUKE.

EVEN in America, the paradise of the new woman, an open letter from a wife to her husband would be a novelty. When such a letter comes from a famous representative of the gentle womanhood of Japan, it is a shock.

Madame Miura, admired in this country and in Europe as an opera singer of splendid gifts, has written to her husband through the pages of a woman's magazine of Tokyo. She sets forth with startling frankness why she considers her married life a failure.

This letter, written for the world to read, is more than a letter. It is the Oriental woman's declaration of independence. It is her battle cry of freedom. It means the crumbling of the sturdiest barrier which the enlightened modern woman has faced; for Japan is surely the origin of the idea that woman's place is in the home.

For centuries the women of Japan have accepted without a murmur a masculine domination more complete than that the women of any race have endured. Japanese society, since the dim beginning of history, has been based on the theory that the wife must minister to her husband's desires, that she must arrange his home to his taste, must rear his children, and, in a very literal sense, must honor, obey and be respectful.

Madame Miura's letter astonishes even those who have been closest to the woman's movement throughout the world. It sums up the evolution of the Japanese woman. It tells the story with dramatic vividness. It is like a flash of blinding light on Japanese womanhood of today. It means that the new woman of Japan has come into being so swiftly that the world has been unaware of her arrival. Gone forever is the humble, self-denying, wistful-eyed lady who had been content to sit patiently behind her lattice and await the pleasure of her lord and master. In her stead we find a modern woman, triumphant and defiant, who looks with proud eyes to her sisters across the sea.

Madame Miura's own life might stand as the epitome of the Oriental woman's eager, fumbling, unhappy struggle for freedom. She spent, as she says, "half a lifetime of tears" before she gained recognition in her art. Her first husband brought her only misery; and, to the consternation of her family and her public, she ran away from him. She fled to Singapore, to the man she loved—Dr. Miura. That was nine years ago. Now Dr. Miura has been left in Tokyo, while the singer, brilliantly successful at last, but fired with ambition and belief in herself and wedded to her career, faces the world again.

This is the translation of Madame Miura's letter to her husband:

"Miura Masataro-sama: At the request of the Fujin Sekai (Woman's World) I wish to tell you what is in my heart completely and without reserve—everything that I have been thinking all the time. The world outside has been watching our household with eyes of curiosity. They are right: ours is indeed an unnatural, a crippled family. As an artist, I can to some extent maintain my confidence. As a married woman, I have not the slightest ability whatever. I am a spectacular failure. That much is plain even to me, foolish as I certainly am.

"Whenever I watch you feeding marmots and rabbits in the course of your medical studying and investigation, feeding them various foods and testing them with various medicines, shutting yourself up all alone in that lonely study and working patiently away, I often think how much more fitting and happier for me if I should, once for all, throw over my art and help you look after your rabbits and marmots, and prepare for you your favorite dishes like a gentle wife and be beside you all the time.

Madame Miura, whose open letter to her husband is not of the "butterfly" order at all.

"I have also felt as though someone were pulling back my soul from behind, whenever I left you alone in your dusky study and donned my bravest and best to go forth upon a gorgeous stage to sing and dance in the company of people robed like flowers. But, even at a time like that, never once have I felt the least regret. I have been unhappy about it for your sake, but for myself there can never be real joy apart from my art. This you have yourself come to realize. Always you have sent me forth tenderly and welcomed me home proudly. Sometimes you took me by the hand and rejoiced with me, saying: 'It was very well done.' At other times you sympathized with me, saying: 'That did not come off quite as well as we thought it would.'

"Miura Masataro-sama, I am ever thanking God from the depth of my heart for having given me a husband as good and as rich in understanding as you. I am an utterly hopeless person away from music. When I come to the time when I cannot sing, that will be the end of my life. At times, I so completely lose myself dreaming over the melodies I love that I forget utterly that I have you as my husband. Such am I. Time and again I have not been able to look after you. On the contrary, you yourself have taken the trouble of looking after my own personal affairs.

"Miura Masataro-sama, when I think of it, I am convinced that I was fated to stand upon the stage from the time of my birth. "Miura Masataro-sama, when I was 3 years of age, I began to take lessons under a dancing master. Because I was fond of it myself, I practiced, giving my very life to it. As a result, it seemed that I made an unexpectedly rapid progress. And the master used to send me onto the stage at all opportunities, in spite of my age. After entering the musical school, opportunities naturally came to me to appear on the stage with the students who were training there. I was always happy while I was singing. Cut off from it, my life was never complete. Since I have come to understand things, I have always known that I could not live a single day apart from music. For that reason I have firmly determined never to become separated from music. God has sympathized with this heart of mine, evidently, for He has always led me along the path of art. The MAINSPRING

~by~ Hugh MacNair Kahler

A KIND of courage came to Stephen Hobart as he reached the edge of the woods and caught his first sight of the house at the foot of the hill. He felt, distinctly, a change in himself, as if the nearness of Nathan Hobart's house had re-created him.

He stood behind the high snake fence, deliberately enjoying the consciousness of this new spirit in himself. It would be dark in another two hours. In two more, Nathan Hobart would have gone to bed. In another, at the most, it would be easy and safe to climb the apple tree beside the kitchen door, drop to the low roof of the ell and so reach the window of his own room—the window with the broken catch, which had let him come and go so often in the old days when he had walked in fear of Nathan's anger.

Five hours to wait! He remembered suddenly that he had not eaten since morning. Supper would be ready pretty soon, down there. He thought of Nathan eating alone, and Stephen's hatred flamed again, as hunger fed it. He could help himself to food, too, when he had taken the money. He could risk a few minutes in the big pantry before he left. But five hours——

The need of food dominated even his new-wakened hate. He glanced about him and saw a hickory tree, the leaves already turned. He filled his hat with nuts and came back to the fence corner to crack them between hardheads.

His thoughts came back to the heart of his errand, the money he would find in Nathan Hobart's "secretary." Nathan would have collected some of his loans, at least, by now, and there would be a sum worth stealing in the locked drawer of the desk in the bedroom.

It would be easy to manage it, too, unless Nathan had got him a new dog. Shep had been three years old when he left—three years ago. He could quiet Shep easily enough. Collies didn't forget. And once inside the house it would all be simple. Nathan Hobart slept with his door unlocked. A little chloroform on gauze—a bit of a struggle, perhaps, before it worked—and then plenty of time to break open the desk and help himself.

He had a right to whatever he might get, tonight. He'd had a right to it when he asked for it, three years back. Twenty-one, free to go if he chose, but compelled to go barehanded, if he went, after 12 years of labor on Nathan Hobart's farm. Well, tonight would settle that debt, anyway.

A step sounded behind him; the slight noise magnified to a thunder in his ears as he sprang up and whirled, his fists clenched. His arms lowered as he met the level glance and recognized the face of Retta. Duncan's Retta had grown taller, in the three years, but that was all the change in her, he thought—the same thin-lipped, sullen mouth, the same hard, straight eyes that had always seemed to be watching him as a cat watches a dog—hostility and distrust and a shade of scorn in them.

"Hello, Stevie!" Her voice still held the harsh quality he remembered.

Retta Duncan would know that he had come back to the Glen, and when the news of the robbery spread, she would know whose work it was. So much the better! By the time she talked, he would be out of reach, lost in the city, where nobody would ever find him. He chuckled.

"Scared me, Retta, sneaking up that way."

She nodded. "Saw you jump. Cracking nuts, were you? They're no good yet—too early"——

"Not much. But they're better than nothing. Got kind of hungry walking over from the junction."

"Bad as that?" She spoke almost eagerly.

"Just about. Guess it from my looks, wouldn't you?"

She studied him silently.

"Why'd you come back? Think he'll help you?"

"Not if he knows it." He grinned. "But maybe he'll help without finding it out till he can't help himself."

She watched him in silence. Then she nodded and said:

"I thought that might be the way of it when I saw you hiding in a fence corner like that. You're going to rob him, when it's dark enough. You must need money pretty bad," she said, slowly.

He shook his head, realizing suddenly that the money was the lesser motive.

"Say, Retta, you make sure he knows I did it, will you?"

She shook her head decisively. "I won't give you away, Stevie"——

"But I want you to! I'm only doing it so as to hit back at him. There's easier ways of getting money—and safer. I'm doing this to get square with him. I want you to tell"——

"But—but they'd catch you—put you in prison!" He could see her eyes widen. He laughed.

"I don't care if they do—much. Every day I spent in the pen I'd think of how he'd hate it. A Hobart in prison! Why, he'd"——

Her face darkened. He guessed that she was thinking of Nathan Hobart's stiff contempt, never concealed or withheld from the shiftless neighbors whose unkempt farm marched with his own. She hated the old man, too—with cause.

"You better come down and have supper with us," she suggested. "If nobody else sees you, he might not believe it was you. He might say I made it up."

There was force in this, he saw. And he was hungry—so hungry that the thought of food shook him.

"All right. Much obliged."

"I got to find the cow, first. She broke through the fence, back yonder. There she is now—you head her back, and I'll get her through the break."

He stumbled through the rustling undergrowth toward a lean, rangy cow of mixed breed. He drove the animal back skillfully enough. The girl had thrown down a panel of the fence by the time he reached her, and the cow walked through the gap. He replaced the rails behind her and then followed the beast down the slant along a narrow path.

She stood facing him in the thin, diffuse light. "I—I just wanted to be sure you meant it," she said, at last. "I didn't believe you'd dare."

"I'll milk for you," he volunteered as Retta closed the stanchion on the cow's lean neck and took up a pail. "Guess I haven't forgot how, yet."

"All right. I'll be up at the house." She turned abruptly. He set himself to the old detested task, pleased that the trick of it came back to him, his mood soothed by the spurting music of the jets, so that he sang softly to their tempo, his head against the beast's flank, the grind of her jaws like a low-pitched accompaniment to the tune.

He carried the milk to the kitchen door.

The idea came to him that his having broken bread under this sagging roof would annoy his uncle almost as much as the graver deed he contemplated. A Hobart, coming back to the Glen to associate with the Duncans; a Hobart indebted to them for petty charity! If only Nathan would drive past while he was here!

"You'd get more, up at the other house," Retta said. "I'll cook some eggs, only"—— He guessed the unspoken words easily enough. She kept the eggs for trading, at the store. They were too precious to be eaten.

"This'll suit me fine," he said, good-naturedly.

He heard steps in the woodshed and grew suddenly self-conscious. Old Duncan seemed glad to see him.

"Well, Steve—what you doin' in these parts? Home for a spell?"

"Just going through," said Stephen, uneasily. "Retta said I could get some supper"——

"That's right, I guess." The old man stood his gun in a corner and hung a battered hat above it. "Thought I'd mebbe get a rabbit, but they're skurse, this year. Game's about gone, round here."

"Gettin' so the only way a man c'n git meat is to raise it," Duncan grumbled at supper. "Wish't I'd had the spunk to git out and go West. Too late, now."

"You could raise all you want without much trouble," Stephen said. "You got pasture enough for a few steers, and you could fat up four-five hogs, I guess"——

The old man scowled. "That's what Retta says," he complained. "But I ain't a butcher. If I raise a critter, I get so's I hate to kill it. Game's different. Some fun gettin' your meat in the woods, with a gun."

Old Duncan smoked placidly, while Retta cleared the table. His eyes inspected Stephen with a frank question, his lips faintly quizzical.

"Been up to see Nathan yet?"

The name woke Stephen's half-drowsing hatred.

"No. Guess I'll go up pretty soon."

"Better not leave him know you had supper here. He'd take it kinda hard, I guess."

Stephen helped Retta with the dishes, rejecting her protest.

When they had finished, the old man had begun to nod in his chair. Stephen turned to the girl.

"Guess I'll get along now. Much obliged for supper."

"Wait—I'll walk a ways with you." She took a shawl from a peg and slipped past him before he found speech. He stumbled after her.

"I sort of wanted to go along," she said, a touch of apology in her whisper. "It—it'd be exciting—and maybe I could help."

"No." He vetoed the suggestion positively. "I'm not going to get anybody else mixed up in this. It's my job."

"Let me walk a ways, anyway. I won't hinder—and it's—it's better than staying back there and wondering. He might wake up—might shoot"——

"He won't. I know how to fix that. You better go back."

He stopped, as if to forbid her coming. She stood facing him in the thin, diffuse light.

"I—I just wanted to be sure you meant it," she said at last. "I didn't believe you'd dare"——

The tone carried him back abruptly to a day at school, when he had evaded a fight with Thad Mc-

Tague, while the others jeered. He could remember Retta Duncan's face, as she looked on.

"You'll find out, soon enough. Think I'm afraid?"

"Maybe not—if he's asleep. You'd be afraid of him, though, if he came along the road right now. Yes. You'd hide." She laughed. "Why, he'd pay twice as much as you're likely to steal, to get shut of you, and you're going to sell out cheap—just to keep from letting him see you! After tonight he'll have the whip over you for always."

"I'm not afraid of him," he declared. "If—if there was any better way of doing it"——

She interrupted: "Why don't you make him buy you out of the Glen, then? I been thinking—suppose you stayed with us, right where he'd see you every time he drove home? Wouldn't he hate that worse than losing a little money?"

The prospect fascinated him; he could strike harder than he had dreamed——

"Dad's getting too old to run the place alone," he heard her saying. "You could help enough to pay for your keep. We don't get to handle much money, or I'd offer you wages"——

A laugh broke from him. "Wages! Why, I owe you money, Retta. You've showed me how I can hit back at him so hard it'll just about kill him! He'll"——

"He'll get down on his knees to beg you to get out," she finished. "Come on, Stevie—let's go back."

* * * * * * * * *

Stephen woke with a start. He heard the blow of an ax, the sound of splitting wood, and the noise sped him into his torn clothes.

He saw Retta emerging from the lean-to, her milk pail in the bend of her elbow. He ran down the stairs and out after her.

"I'll milk, Retta. Why didn't you call me?"

She surrendered the pail.

"All right. I'll get breakfast. Dad's asleep—I let him wake up when he gets ready. He's pretty old"——

He scowled as he milked the sorry cow. Retta must have a rotten life of it, with only the old man to help with the work.

As Stephen carried the milk through the woodshed, he noticed that it was almost empty. And it would be winter, in another month or two.

At breakfast—bread and milk and coffee—he mentioned it. The girl shrugged.

"Dad generally 'tends to it. Guess he'll get around to cutting a little before snow-fly."

"What's the matter with me doing it now?" He grinned. "Got a team?"

"Only old Bess, now. But there's a democrat that's light enough for her to haul, I guess."

Stephen found the mare in fair condition, and hitched her to the wreck of the light wagon. There was no ax fit for cutting, and he called Retta from the kitchen to help him sharpen the best one on the scored grindstone in the shed.

He rummaged in a litter of broken implements and found the long, rusted blade of a cross-cut saw, both handles missing. He saw that it would be a morning's work to make it fit for use and decided to depend on the ax for today. The old man rode up the lane toward the wood lot with him, holding his rifle between his knees.

"Might git a rabbit or suthin'," he explained. "Kinda like a taste o' meat, f'r a change," and when Stephen stopped beside a wind-fallen hickory, he moved away with a kind of haste.

Stephen's mood darkened as he worked. He'd quit, he decided, when he'd hauled down the load. There wasn't any sense in this.

He led the mare downhill. A fool's trick—to hit at Nathan Hobart in this fashion. Working for the Duncan's—without even a decent ax to work with!

He heard the sound of wheels and hoofs as he crossed the highway. It was Nathan Hobart's buckboard. Stephen waited, his ears keen to judge the distance by the sound. He wheeled sharply and stood facing his enemy, his teeth bared in a hateful grin.

Nathan Hobart was always erect, but he straightened now, as a man will under the shock of surprise. Stephen saw his hand draw back gently on the reins, pulling the gray to a stand.

"When did you come back, Stephen?" The voice was quiet, under relentless control, but Stephen felt the effort of will behind this calm, and relished it.

"Last night," he answered, carelessly.

"You did not come home. Why not? Were you afraid?"

The other laughed harshly. "Afraid? What of? You?"

"Why not? You went away without telling me—in the night, like a thief. That was because you were afraid. You come back, but not to my door. Why not?"

Stephen Hobart doubled his hands. "I'll come there when there's no other place," he said.

"You don't want help, then? You want nothing of me"——

"Wait till I ask you!"

"Then why have you come back to the Glen? That is Duncan's horse; is there nothing better for you, than working for a man who can pay you nothing beyond your keep?"

"That's my business. If I'm satisfied, what's it to you?"

"Stephen, it is also my business. You carry my name; you grew up under my roof. It does not suit me that you should walk in rags and be beholden to the Duncans for your bread. You came here to shame me into paying you to go. Well, I will pay. What is your price?"

Stephen Hobart broke into noisy laughter.

"You haven't got enough to pay my price," he said, thickly. "Save your breath. I'm here to stay."

He met the level eyes boldly. Nathan Hobart's hand relaxed a little on the reins, and the gray darted forward. Stephen slapped the mare on her flank and laughed as the wagon moved on, creaking under its little load. It was good to feel that he was a man.

Retta stood at the door, as he drove up.

"He wanted to buy me off," he called to her. "You were right—it's poison to him."

"You told him you wouldn't go?"

"I told him I was here to stay! And that goes!" He unlatched the tailboard and began to toss the wood into the shed, still laughing. "It'll be fun to watch him try to move me on!"

He scrambled back to the seat. "Might as well draw down another load or two, while I'm at it," he said. "I'll tinker up that saw and sweat out something better before snow flies." He waved his hand gaily and drove away, whistling.

* * * * * * * * *

Stephen felt his cheeks burn as he drove along the main street of the village, the hitching racks before the stores already crowded by the teams of earlier comers. The old democrat creaked and wobbled; Bess drew it at a dragging walk.

He hitched the mare to the fence behind the hardware store and lifted down Retta's heavy basket of eggs while she scrambled over the wheel.

"I won't take long, Stevie." She took the basket from him. Stephen leaned against the wheel, drawing at his empty pipe.

He looked up at the sound of his name. Thad McTague grinned at him, wagging his head. Thad had always bullied him.

"Back again, eh?" Thad halted. "Couldn't stand it to stay away from her, could you?"

Stephen glanced to the side, calculating his chances of getting away without trouble. And he saw Nathan Hobart's buckboard stop in the road opposite him, saw his uncle watching the scene with impassive face. Something seemed suddenly to wake in him. He heard Thad's lowered voice venturing a foul epithet, and he sprang, thrilling to the clean smack of his knuckles on the soft red flesh of the jaw.

As he took the countering blow, he remembered that Nathan Hobart had forbidden him to fight. He laughed happily at the thought, striking again and again at the blurred face, following as Thad backed away, till the rear wall of the store stopped him. A short hooking blow sent his old enemy's head against the bricks; Thad bent double, lifting a hand in token of surrender.

"I got enough," he said, thickly.

"There's more where it came from, any time you want it," said Stephen.

He stepped back and came face to face with Nathan. The look in the grim face brought another chuckle of contentment to his lips.

"Stephen, this passes bounds. Brawling, on market day, like a drunken hand! You came here to shame me; well, you have done it. You came for money; well, I'll pay it, if you'll go."

He heard Thad's lowered voice venturing a foul epithet, and he sprang, thrilling to the clean smack of his knuckles on the soft red flesh of the jaw.

Stephen shook his head. "I like it here," he said. "Suits me fine. Guess I'll stay on all winter."

He could see the effort with which Nathan ruled his anger.

"Then stay under my roof; my door is always open to you."

"No. I like it better at Duncan's." He saw Retta coming toward him, her basket filled with paper bags. He stepped quickly toward her and took it from her, with something like Nathan Hobart's own formal courtesy. He helped her into the wagon carefully, his back toward Nathan. "All through?"

She nodded. He saw that her face was queerly white, her eyes wide. He backed the wagon about, compelling his uncle to step away from the wavering wheel. He turned back into the main street, driving with his head up, deliberately surveying the people who stared at him from the walks.

He told Retta what had happened, briefly.

"You beat Thad McTague?" She moved quickly on the seat, twisting to face him. He nodded, grinning.

"Easy. And Uncle Nathan watching me do it!

THE MAINSPRING

Guess he hated it, all right. Wanted to buy me off again, and when I wouldn't go, asked me to come back and live with him. Got under his thick skin this time, Retta."

"You aren't going back, then?"

"Not me! I wouldn't quit for everything Nathan Hobart's got." He shook his head. "Say, Retta, guess we'll have to change that deal of ours, though, so's I can get tobacco money out of it."

She fumbled in the basket and proffered a muslin sack of cheap tobacco, without speech. He took it eagerly and filled his pipe. "Good for you! You think of everything, don't you?"

She shrugged. "I had three dozen extra, this week. The warm spell started the hens laying again, I guess. But they'll quit, when it turns cold. If you're going to stay through the winter, we'll have to figure out some way to get a little money for groceries and tobacco. I just about managed last year, when there was only dad and me."

Peterson, driving a little touring car, overtook them before they reached his farm, and Stephen stopped him. He was a slow, thrifty man of 60.

"I never was much of a hand to rent tools," he said. He met Stephen's eye. "Hear you licked Thad McTague this mornin'. Did you?"

Stephen grinned at the memory. "He said so."

"H-m! Always figgered Thad was a fightin' man. Guess you can take the saw, if you'll use her right."

"Ought to clean up five hundred, anyway," Stephen said, as he drove on.

"We could get another horse, maybe, and fix up the old wagon so we could do our own hauling," she suggested. "And we'd have the team for the plowing, come spring, too."

"That's right." He meditated. "Too bad, the way that bottom land's gone back to scrub. Good money in the farm, if it was run right."

"Dad never would farm," she said. "I guess he wasn't cut out for it. But he wouldn't sell, either. Nathan Hobart's tried to buy the place a dozen times."

"Well, if he wants to buy it now he'll have to bid high for it!" Stephen chuckled. "Retta, we're going to give him a happy winter, watching us!"

* * * * * * * * *

Retta Duncan lifted questioning brows as Stephen came to the screened doorway. He was mildly angry; and yet, below his irritation, he observed a change in her. She was softer, somehow—more like other women than the girl who had found him hiding in the fence corner.

"What's the matter?" Her voice was abrupt. "Did dad run off again?"

He grinned. "Sneaked the first time I turned my back, the old rascal! And that hay's got to be under cover by tonight. Guess you're elected, Retta."

"All right." She unfastened the blue apron. "I'll have to get on some old clothes first. We'll have bread and milk for supper—that's all."

He nodded carelessly. With Retta to handle the team, he could get the hay drawn, and the rain which he expected by night would be money in his pocket. He thought of the potatoes in the 30-acre field along the creek. He'd been right about that soil; farm it right, and it would pay better than even Nathan Hobart's land.

He grinned as the name came into his mind, remembering the way Nathan looked straight before him when he passed, the gray at his top pace. Nathan must hate the sight of the new roof and the fresh paint and the mown turf of the dooryard, the visible proofs that Stephen was prospering. Next fall, if the crops brought decent prices, there'd be enough to rebuild the old barn and buy a decent buggy—maybe a flivver, with luck. That was Retta's dream—to drive past the speeding gray, some day, in a car. Nathan hated gasoline.

"All right." She stood beside him, roughly dressed, a wide-brimmed chip hat shading her face. He glanced at her curiously. The change was in the girl herself. Even in old things, she was different.

She climbed lightly into the racked wagon, before he could lend a hand. In the field he vaulted to the ground and pitched up the haycocks while she built the load; it was fun, somehow, to lift them with that old trick of leverage which bent the fork handle without straining arms or back. He worked fast, observing that she kept pace with him, that the load mounted straight and secure above the racks. He scrambled up beside her when it was finished, panting and wet.

"I'm sorry about dad," she said. "I hoped he'd help, this time"——

"It doesn't matter—we put this load on twice as fast as he and I'd have done it." He chewed a spike of timothy. "Funny how he hates work. He'll take no end of trouble to catch a few suckers, or shoot a red squirrel, but he won't even milk if he can slide out of it."

"He can't help it. He"—she hesitated—"he hasn't got anything inside him that drives him, like us. I guess people have to have mainsprings, the same as clocks. Dad hasn't got any."

"Maybe you're right. Not much doubt about what drives me, eh? If it wasn't for Uncle Nathan, I don't know if I'd do any more than your father."

He guided the team cleverly into the gangway between the mows, crouching to avoid the roof. Using the fork as vaulting pole, Retta sprang lightly to the hay and stood ready as he dug his fork into the layer which bound the load together.

"It must be just poison to him—seeing the way you're getting ahead," she said, between forkfuls. "I'll never forget the way he looked, that day we bid in the team, right over his head."

"Uh-huh!" He lifted a great mat toward her feet. "This'd grade No. 1, I guess, if we baled it. About as good hay as I ever made."

"We won't need all of it," she suggested. "We could sell a few tons, couldn't we?"

He shook his head. "Selling hay's bad farming. Pay better to feed it—winter a few head of beef, maybe. Sell hay, sell soil. Uncle Nathan's right about that."

"He knows how to farm," she conceded. "I'll allow him that."

"Oh, he's got his good points," he agreed, vaguely displeased at her tone. "Funny thing, Retta—I can see his side of things, now. Never used to. But he wasn't so far wrong as I figured, when we split up. He said then I'd ought to stay on the land—said I'd never get ahead anywheres else. I kinda thought it was just an excuse, to keep from giving me wages for the time I'd worked for him. He's hard, all right, and a mule's easy led compared to him; but"——

"Let's hustle," she interrupted, briskly. "Clouding over out there."

They raced with the gathering shower till the last load was under cover. Old Duncan, grinning guiltily, displayed a pan of cleaned fish.

"Go fine for supper," he urged.

Hobart laughed as he took the shining milk pails from the shelf by the kitchen door. No use spoiling the old boy's fun with a call-down. He milked swiftly, humming under his breath.

The rain came as they finished supper, a savage, drenching downpour, roaring on the roof and the leaves. Stephen helped Retta lower the windows, thinking of the way the potatoes would spurt when the sun came back.

Wheels sounded in the swimming lane, and the barn floor boomed with the noise of hoofs. Somebody taking shelter from the storm, of course. He lighted a lantern and stood in the doorway. A man crossed the open space at a run, crouched and huddled. Stephen did not recognize Nathan Hobart till the older man straightened under the shelter of the porch.

They faced each other warily, for a moment. It struck Stephen Hobart that Nathan was getting old. He tried to summon sullen memories, but some perverse trick of thought persisted in recalling the time they had driven over to Leighton fair, and had been forced to cover by just such a storm as this. Nathan had always taken him along, on such excursions, instead of leaving him behind, as some of the neighbors would have done. Give him credit for that, anyway.

"Glad you drove in," he heard himself saying. "No kind of a night to be driving that road."

Nathan Hobart nodded. "The storm has done me a service, Stephen, in bringing me here, against my wish. I have owed you amends for months, but it has been hard to humble myself and make them."

"Amends?" Stephen shook his head. "What for?"

"For being overready to think evil of you, and overslow to admit that I was wrong. I thought that you had come back to the Glen to shame me"——

"Well, so I did," Stephen broke in quickly, puzzled at the sudden eagerness to shield the old man from himself. "I knew you'd hate it—me, living here, like this. That's true enough."

"But you have not shamed me—you have given me better cause for pride in you than if you had never left my house. In one year you have"——

He stopped. Stephen, following his glance, turned and saw Retta standing in the doorway.

"Oh, it's you, Mr. Hobart? Will you come in—or isn't our house good enough?"

Her tone shocked Stephen into protest. "Aw, Retta—what's the sense of"——

"Oh, I knew it would turn out like this! I knew it!" She kept her voice low, but it shook with a passion he had never heard in it till now. "He'd have let you starve, when you came here with your rags, but he's willing to take you back, now that you've made good. We were fit company for you, the way you looked when I found you up there in the wood lot; but we aren't fit, now that you can hold up your head with anybody!" She laughed softly. He could see her shoulders quiver.

"Why, Retta—you—I"—

"Oh, go back with him! Maybe he'll leave you something in his will! Anyway, you'll be a Hobart again, you'll"——

"But I'm not going—nobody's said anything about it. Think I'd quit, in the middle of the season, with all those crops"——

She made a fierce, brushing gesture. "Crops! What do I care about a few potatoes? You want to go—that's all that matters. You're beginning to stand up for him—like you did this afternoon! You might as well go back—there's no sense in staying, now."

Stephen turned to his uncle, aware suddenly of the need to justify Retta, to make Nathan Hobart understand what lay beneath that flash of ferocity.

"It's all right, Uncle Nathan—she's got reason to feel the way she does. I"——

"I'll be going." It pleased and puzzled him that Nathan should speak in that level tone, as if Retta had said nothing that could hurt or startle him. "The rain is easing off. Good night."

Stephen walked out to the barn floor with the lantern. Nathan untied the halter strap and climbed over the wheel before Stephen found speech.

"You mustn't mind what she said, Uncle Nathan—she thought I'd quit"——

"And you will not quit?"

The question came sharply. He laughed. Queer! Just when——

"Hardly. Good night."

Stephen watched the hooded buggy blend into the darkness before he came back to the porch. He did not see that Retta was still standing there until he lifted the lantern to blow out the flame. The light seemed to bring her face suddenly out of the shadows, as if she had moved soundlessly toward him. He met her eyes, searching his, with the same look he had seen in them years before, when he faced Thad McTague's bullying in the weedy schoolyard.

He stood still, watching her and wondering. Why didn't he want to quit? Why was it that he felt keener than ever to go on? The mainspring that had driven him was gone. What was there left to keep him working, to make him different from old Duncan, drowsing in his rocker by the kitchen lamp?

He felt a laugh rise in his throat as a gust whiffed out the light, and the first onrush of the power he recognized at last, drove him forward.

study was our chief aim. I thought of studying music only when random opportunities might present themselves. But, on the sly, my lust for art raised its head. It brought us to the condition we find today. Under the circumstances, my desire for study became more and more insistent and I began to forget all else and devote myself to art exclusively and feverishly.

"At times I stand in a room of a poor boarding house, in a strange land, without an acquaintance. Then, there was a time also when standing beside you, or mayhap in the presence of a reigning sovereign, I sang under a shower of applause, as though the happiness of this world were a thing all my own. And I think always that it is a matter of true joy that I could taste with you both the happiness and the sorrow and talk them over.

"Miura Masataro-sama, I have heard the people of the world say, 'You must be lonesome indeed, living as you do far from each other.' Indeed, I am not at all certain whether we have any right to call ourselves man and wife, if a married couple should be always face to face, and never be separated when they go out and when they come in.

"But we march each our separate way, you and I. On the surface we lead a separate life. With all that, my heart is firmly united with your own; we trust each other. There is no sense of uneasiness on the part of either of us—not in the least. This I think you fully understand. I think also that even while in all outward seeming I appear cool toward you, you yourself must recognize that I am fulfilling my part as your wife in another and more noble sense. I am quite content as long as you do that.

"I pray you anew that you remain the good and gentle husband to me to the end of time—to me who was born with this ever-young spirit of mine and a love for life's beautiful things."

THE STATUE OF ISIS

mystery of the instrument used. Poison, certainly, but what kind of poison? No one that I am familiar with would have the peculiar effect of that which was used in this case."

The more that Dr. Masaryk thought of the matter, the more certain he became that the solution of the whole problem lay practically within his grasp—that the Arab servant could tell the whole truth if he could be induced to do so. But the question was how to accomplish this without undue loss of time and without permitting police interference to bungle matters and to cause delays of such length that it would be necessary to remain indefinitely in Egypt, while his plans called for almost immediate return to Europe.

Finally, with clenched teeth and set lips that boded ill to the man who opposed him, Dr. Masaryk sent once more for the hotel manager and inquired whether the Arab servant had been kept under strict surveillance during the hour or more that had elapsed since he had been questioned. Receiving an affirmative reply, with the additional information that the dragoman had been bound hand and foot and told that he would be turned over to the police in the morning, Dr. Masaryk requested that the servant be brought to him, and added that he intended to go over the ground where Dr. Hauptman's death occurred, under the guidance of the dead man's servant.

"You're not going alone?" was the startled inquiry.

"Why not? I can assure you that there is little danger, for this time the order of procedure will be reversed. The Arab will walk in front of me, and my hand will never leave the handle of this," and Dr. Masaryk produced a blued-steel automatic which glistened menacingly in the moonlight which filtered through the open window.

"But you forget the black magic which the man maintains was responsible for Dr. Hauptman's death," continued the manager, still protesting.

Dr. Masaryk smiled.

"Evidently," he returned, "you have lived so long in this land of strange customs and uncanny occurrences that you have forgotten most of your European training. Black magic? Can it be responsible for the very evident wound which led to the death of my friend? Can it strike a man down in the prime of life and then turn his body as black as coal with the passage of only a few minutes? No, my friend—there was something black connected with this affair, but it was the black hand of an Arab rather than the curse of a long-forgotten King. Magic is a good word to conjure with when one is addressing children or those of childish intellects. But it cannot produce definite and very finite results."

Still arguing that two of his guests should not run similar risks on the same night and under precisely the same circumstances, the hotel manager gave orders that the dragoman was to be released and given into the custody of Dr. Masaryk, who directed that his bonds were to be cut and that he was to go over precisely the same path which Dr. Hauptman had followed earlier in the evening.

The full moon was still fairly high, and the clear white rays illumined the ground almost as plainly as if it had been day. Not a sound broke the almost tangible silence which seems to sweep in from the desert in great waves, just as if a huge sea of quiet were engulfing everything that dared disturb the stillness of the night.

As silently as though he were a ghost, the Arab moved along the pathway leading to the foot of the Sphinx, and then, after a quick glance over his shoulder to see that Dr. Masaryk was following, commenced the ascent toward the top of the greatest riddle in the world. During the entire journey the doctor had noted the tell-tale footprints in the sand—one set made by the booted man, the other by the barefoot guide. Halfway to the top of the Sphinx, however, the two sets separated. The booted one continued, the barefoot halted.

"Here it was," said the guide, "that I stopped for a moment, the doctor, he went on—around that corner. And then—you know what happened then."

"Yes," snapped Dr. Masaryk, his eyes cold and hard, his hand grasping the butt of the automatic which he had taken from his pocket, "I know what happened then, but it was not as you told it. You parted from the doctor here. That much is true, as is your statement that he went ahead of you around the corner of the ledge that juts out only a few yards away. But you took a short cut, one with which Dr. Hauptman was not familiar."

"The print of your toes is still evident in the soft sand there at the base of that rock," he declared. "As soon as the doctor turned the corner you leapt upon him. Somehow you managed to inflict the wound which caused his instant death—striking downward at his left side as his arm was raised above his head. Only a postmorten can determine what weapon you used, unless"——

And the European broke off suddenly. The rays of the setting moon, striking on something beside the path, were reflected with the brilliance of burnished metal. Stooping and taking care still to keep the Arab covered, Dr. Masaryk picked up—the statuette of Isis! But the ornament which had surmounted the head was missing, and in its place a tiny hole led down into the body of the figure.

"So that's how it happened, eh?" Dr. Masaryk continued. "I must confess that the wound puzzled me, but it is clear enough now. During the struggle for this bit of bronze you seized the image on top, and the tiny dagger, steeped in some subtle poison known only to the man who fashioned this top, came away in your hands. The rest was easy. One sudden downward stroke and, probably to your amazement, the man you had sought to rob fell dead at your feet, his body rolling over the embankment down to the ground beneath, where you said you discovered it.

"Come on! I'll leave the recovery of the necklace to the police. You couldn't have had time to hide it very carefully."

* * * * * *

"And before morning," said Bill Quinn, as he completed his outline of one of the strangest true accounts of detective prowess I had ever listened to, "the necklace was discovered in a hiding place near the base of the Sphinx, and British justice lost no time in meting out the proper punishment to the murderer of Dr. Hauptman, while the man who was to be President of Czecho-Slovakia continued his journey homeward."

"Criminal clews are certainly not confined to any one type of article, are they?" I remarked, hoping to induce Quinn to continue with his reminiscences connected with various relics in his den. But the retired detective failed to take the bait.

"They are not," was his reply. "You're apt to find them anywhere—except possibly in the place where you think they ought to be. At least, that was Murphy's experience with respect to that 'C. O. D.' slip up there."

"Murphy?" I asked. "Which Murphy?"

"I doubt if you ever heard of him," Quinn went on. "But he's responsible for preventing more department store robberies than any man in the country. William A. Murphy his name is, and he's the head of the Stores' Protective Association of New York City. No use trying to get me to spin that yarn tonight, though. It's getting late, and I've promised to take Mary to the second show at the movies. Drop in sometime soon and I'll tell you about it," and with that the old man rapped his pipe on the side of the fireplace as a polite hint that it was time for me to be getting along.

Walter Camp's

New Way

to Keep Fit

Walter Camp, Yale's celebrated football coach, has been teaching men and women everywhere how to keep fit—"on edge"—full of bounding health and youthful vitality—and how to enjoy doing it. Walter Camp says that a civilized indoor man is a "captive animal," just as much as a tiger in a cage. But the tiger instinctively knows how to take the kind of exercise he needs to keep fit—he stretches, turns and twists his "trunk muscles"—the very same muscles that tend to become weak and flabby in indoor men and women. With Mr. Camp's permission the "Daily Dozen" exercises have now been set to spirited music on phonograph records. They supply exactly the right movements to put these vitally important "trunk muscles" into the pink of condition, and keep them there. These twelve remarkable exercises, done to music, with a voice on the record calling out the commands, are all you need to keep your whole body in splendid condition—and they take only 10 minutes a day.

Five Days' Free Trial

You cannot fully appreciate the real joy of doing the "Daily Dozen" to music until you try it. The Romance of the Kidnaped Plumber - - shall be glad to see what I can do afterwards.' My firm manner had its effect. With obvious reluctance, the fellow served me some biscuits and some not bad champagne in the dining room.

"The girl had meantime disappeared upstairs.

" 'If you're ready now,' said the Bishop, 'come on down.'

"We went down to the cellar. It was a huge, gloomy place, with a cement floor, lighted by a dim electric bulb. I could see in the corner the outline of a large furnace (in those days the poorer classes had still no central heat) and near it a tall boiler. In front of this a man was kneeling, evidently trying to unscrew a nut, but twisting it the wrong way. He was an elderly man, with gray mustaches, and was dressed, in open defiance of the law, in military costume or uniform.

" 'I'm dashed if I can make the rotten thing go round,' he said.

" 'It's all right, General,' said the Bishop. 'I have brought a plumber.'

"For the next few minutes my professional interest absorbed all my faculties.

"But here I encountered the greatest professional dilemma in which I have ever been placed. There was nothing wrong with the boiler at all. It connected, as I ascertained at once by a thermo-dynamic valvular test, with the furnace (in fact, I could see it did), and the furnace quite evidently had been allowed to go out.

"What was I to do? It was my plain professional duty to take a large hammer and knock holes in the boiler with it, smash up the furnace pipes, start a leak of gas and then call in three or more of my colleagues.

"But somehow I couldn't find it in my heart to do it. The thought of the girl's appealing face arose before me.

" 'How long has this trouble been going on?' I asked, sternly.

" 'Quite a time,' answered the Bishop. 'It began, did it not, General, the same day that the confounded furnace went out? The General here and Admiral Hay and I have been working at it for three days.'

" 'Well gentlemen,' I said, 'don't you see that the whole trouble is because you let the furnace out. The boiler itself is all right, but, you see, gents, it feeds off the furnace.'

"The upshot was that in 20 minutes we had the whole thing put to rights.

" 'But now tell me,' said the Bishop, 'suppose one wanted to let the furnace out—suppose, I mean to say, that it was summer time and suppose one rather felt that one didn't care about a furnace and yet one wanted one's boiler going for one's hot water, and that sort of thing, what would one do?'

" 'In that case,' I said, 'you couldn't run your heating off your furnace; you'd have to connect to your tubing with a gas generator.'

" 'Ah, there you get me rather beyond my depth,' said the Bishop.

"The General shook his head. 'Bishop,' he said, 'just step upstairs a minute; I have an idea.'

"They went up together, leaving me below. To my surprise and consternation, as they reached the top of the cellar stairs, I saw the General swing the door shut and heard a key turn in the lock. I rushed to the top of the stairs and tried in vain to open the door. I was trapped. In a moment I realized my folly in trusting myself in the hands of these people.

"I could hear their voices in the hall, apparently in eager discussion.

"But the fellow is priceless,' the General was saying. 'We could take him round to all the different houses and make him fix them all. Hang it, Bishop, I haven't had a decent tap running for two years, and Admiral Hay's pantry has been flooded since last March.'

" 'But one couldn't compel him?'

" 'Certainly. Why not? I'd compel him bally quick with this.'

"I couldn't see what the General referred to, but had no doubt that it was the huge wrench that he still carried in his hand.

" 'We could gag the fellow,' he went on, 'take him from house to house and make him put everything right.'

" 'Ah, but afterwards?' said the Bishop.

" 'Afterwards,' answered the General, 'knock him on the head and bury him under the cement in the cellar. Or for that matter I imagine one could easily use the furnace itself to dispose of him.'

" 'But do you think it right?' objected the Bishop. 'You will say, of course, that it is only killing a plumber; but yet one asks one's self whether it wouldn't be just a leetle bit unjustifiable.'

" 'Nonsense,' said the General. 'Come along and get Hay. He'll make short work of him.'

"I heard their retreating footsteps, and then all was still.

"The horror which filled my mind as I sat in the half-darkness waiting for their return I cannot describe. My fate appeared sealed and I gave myself up for lost, when presently I heard a light step in the hall and the key turned in the lock.

"The girl stood in front of me. She was trembling with emotion.

" 'Quick, quick, Mr. Thornton!' she cried. 'I heard all they said. Oh, I think it's dreadful of them, simply dreadful. Mr. Thornton, I'm really ashamed that father should act that way.'

"I came out into the hall still half dazed.

" 'They've gone over to Admiral Hay's house, there among the trees. That's their lantern. Please, please, don't lose a minute. Do you mind not having a cab? I think really you'd prefer not to wait. And look, won't you please take this—she handed me a little packet as she spoke—'this is a piece of pie; you always eat that, don't you, and there's a bit of cheese with it, but please run.'

"In another minute I had bounded from the door into the darkness. A wild run through the darkened streets, and in 10 minutes I was safe back again in my own consulting room."

With a courtly bow he left us.

"And do you know the sequel to Thornton's story?" asked Fortescue, with a smile.

We looked expectantly at him.

"Why, he married the girl," explained Fortescue. "You see, he had to go back to her house for his wrench. One always does. He had her educated at a cooking school, and had her given lessons on the parlor organ. She's Mrs. Thornton now."

HOW TO WIN $1,000

Without Spending an Extra Penny

Everyone may take part in this puzzle game, and you may decide for yourself whether you wish to send in a trial order for our famous Soluble B-H Coffee. This is an optional offer. But if you "qualify" for Class "A" by ordering $3 worth of our coffee and your puzzle answer is the first or second nearest correct you will be awarded a prize of $1,000; if you've "qualified" for Class "B" by ordering $2 worth of our coffee you would receive a prize of $300; if you have not "qualified" you would receive a prize of $30. You use coffee every day of the year in your home, so you can "qualify" for the bigger prizes with a regular household purchase.

Don't Wish. ACT! Then You'll Succeed

Success is the reward paid those who try—it is the law of all civilized nations. Try now in this interesting game of profit. Cut this ad out at once and begin making up your list of "S"-words just as soon as you can. Getting started is the important thing. Once you start and you begin to think of all the pleasures $1,000 could bring you, you'll surely put your heart into the preparation of a puzzle answer that will insure your success.

Address answers to—
COFFEE PRODUCTS COMPANY
Dept. 129 MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

OBSERVE THESE SIMPLE RULES

1. Anyone living outside of Minneapolis, except employees of this company, may take part in this puzzle game.
2. Whichever solution contains the largest and nearest correct list of names of visible objects in the picture beginning with "S" will win first prize; second largest, second prize, and so on down the list of fifty prizes. In case of tie, prize tied for will be awarded each tying contestant. One point will be given for each correct word and one deducted for each incorrect word or omission of a correct word.
3. The correct list by which all answers will be judged will be made up of the correct words in all the answers received, and not from a "master" or artist's list. The correct list will be published at the close of the contest, together with list winning first prize and names and addresses of prize winners, and mailed to all who have "qualified."
4. Only English words will be allowed. An object may be named only once, but parts of objects may also be named. Either the singular or plural of a word may be used, but not both. Words of same spelling but different meaning or synonymous words will count only once. Compound, hyphenated and obsolete words are not permissible. Webster's New International Dictionary will be the authority.
5. Number your words in the order that you find them—1, 2, 3, 4, etc. Write on one side of paper only, and place your full name and address at top of each sheet.
6. All answers must be mailed and postmarked not later than Feb. 17, 1923. Contestants may "qualify" up to midnight March 5, 1923.
7. Three prominent Minneapolis people will act as judges in selecting the winners, and all who take part in this puzzle game agree to accept their decisions as final and conclusive.

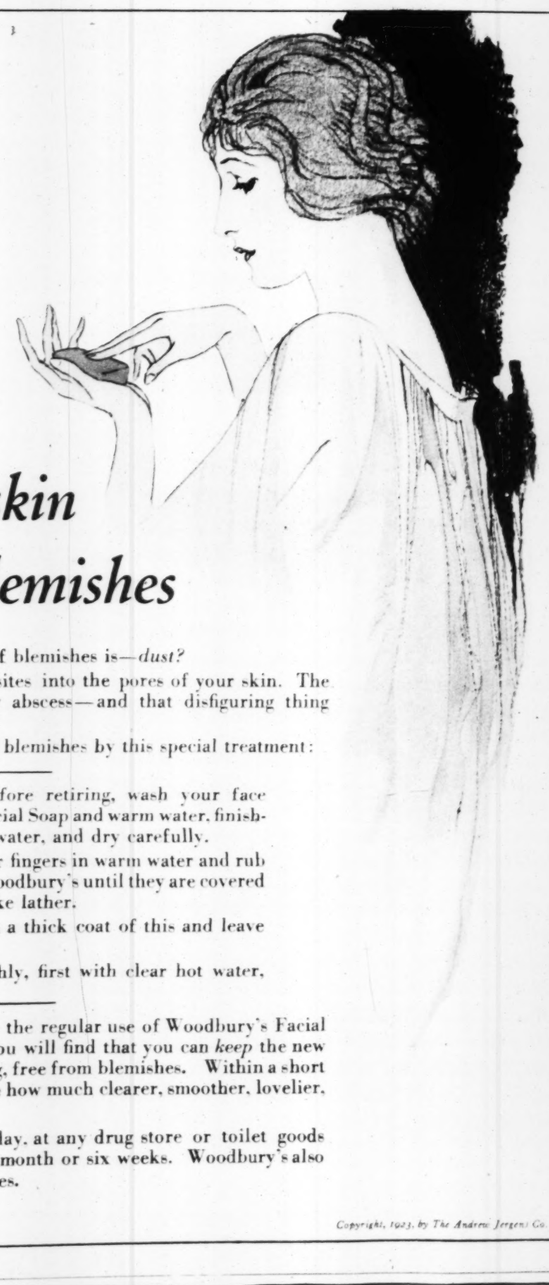
"Do you know that the cause of blemishes is—dust?"



To free your skin from blemishes

DO you know that the cause of blemishes is—dust?

Dust carries bacteria and parasites into the pores of your skin. The result is an infection—a tiny abscess—and that disfiguring thing known as a skin blemish.

You can free your skin from blemishes by this special treatment:

EACH night, just before retiring, wash your face with Woodbury's Facial Soap and warm water, finishing with a dash of cold water, and dry carefully.

Now dip the tips of your fingers in warm water and rub them on the cake of Woodbury's until they are covered with a heavy cream-like lather.

Cover each blemish with a thick coat of this and leave it on for ten minutes.

Rinse your face thoroughly, first with clear hot water, then with cold.

Supplement this treatment with the regular use of Woodbury's Facial Soap in your daily toilet, and you will find that you can keep the new skin, which is constantly forming, free from blemishes. Within a short time you will be surprised to see how much clearer, smoother, lovelier, your complexion has become.

Get a cake of Woodbury's today, at any drug store or toilet goods counter. A 25-cent cake lasts a month or six weeks. Woodbury's also comes in convenient 3-cake boxes.

Morning Circulation

A 10-minute talk on Physiology which may make you ten years younger

It is a practically universal law of Nature that any muscle or organ which is not exercised regularly, sooner or later gives trouble. Yet we neglect the very ones on which health and life depend!

NINETEEN years ago Metchnikoff, famous scientist at the Pasteur Institute in Paris, startled the medical world with his announcement that in the human colon lay the secret of life and health.

The colon, or large intestine, is a hollow tube about four feet long, equipped with rings of muscles like a set of clamps. By contracting one after the other, these muscles force the contents of the tube along.

The colon is never empty. Into it drains the waste which the body must get rid of—dead cells, poisonous acids, waste from food which the body cannot use.

His famous paper 20 years ago startled the medical world

How the body removes this waste

The muscles of the colon must keep all this waste moving—otherwise it decays and generates deadly poisons which soak through into the blood and flood your whole system.

Premature age, loss of vigor and vitality, skin and stomach troubles are the result. And as the body grows weaker, the way is left open for serious and even fatal disease.

That is why constipation is so dangerous. That is why the first thing your doctor wants to know — no matter what you consult him for—is: are these muscles acting regularly—freeing you of the poisons that gather in your system?

What this does to the muscles of your arm, Fleischmann's Yeast does to the muscles of your intestine—gives them normal, healthy exercise

Why is constipation so prevalent today?

The reason is simple. We inherited our bodies from ancestors who ate an abundance of the raw foods of the forest. Such foods created a bulk which gave the muscles of the intestine plenty of work to do, exercising them regularly and constantly. Today our civilization demands more delicate foods — marvellous in variety and in taste — but leaving the muscles of the intestine with too little work to do. This makes them weak and flabby — just like the muscles of your arm without exercise.

Drugs only increase the trouble

Seventy-five million dollars is spent every year in America alone for cathartics and purgatives. Yet such drugs not only cannot cure constipation—they actually increase it. They make the muscles act, it is true, but they do it by nervous irritation. That is not exercise. Each time it happens, it leaves the muscles weaker than before.

The only way to relieve constipation permanently is by giving these muscles natural, healthy exercise.

You can take your choice: either treacherous drugs which only make matters worse, or natural exercise of the intestinal muscles as nature intended! Either a losing battle with poisons that sap your vitality and cloud your brain—or the joy of vigorous lasting health!

The simple food that is restoring health to thousands

Everywhere physicians and hospitals are prescribing Fleischmann's Yeast today—not as a medicine, but as a fresh corrective food which gives the intestinal muscles regular, natural exercise.

Every cake of Fleischmann's Yeast consists of millions of tiny living plants, which mix with the waste products in the colon, softening them, and increasing the bulk of the waste. This greater bulk gently encourages the muscles to act, and at the same time strengthens them by offering just the resistance they need.

Day by day Fleischmann's Yeast builds up the flabby muscles of the intestine – exactly as regular exercise builds up the muscles of your arm

Gently, regularly, they respond—easily and naturally the waste is moved along and out of your system!

Your own physician will heartily endorse this principle of regularly exercising the intestinal muscles as the only way to relieve constipation and all its evils.

Fleischmann's Yeast is in no sense a purgative and does not produce immediate violent action.

You couldn't run a race unless your leg muscles had been regularly exercised—neither can you keep healthy without regularly exercising the intestinal muscles

It must be eaten regularly to secure lasting results.

Our delicate modern foods leave the intestinal muscles with too little work to do

Eat at least 2 or 3 cakes a day—plain, or dissolved in water, milk, or fruit juices—preferably half an hour before a meal, or the last thing at night. If you eat it plain, follow with a glass of water. Get several cakes at a time—they will keep in a cool, dry place for several days. Be sure you get Fleischmann's Yeast. All grocers have it.

Appetite and energy restored—Yeast is the richest known source of Vitamin-B, on which health and vigor so largely depend—it is inexpensive and easily available. Men and women troubled with loss of appetite and energy, or faulty digestion, have found that these troubles disappear when they eat Fleischmann's Yeast regularly.

By helping to "tone up" the whole system, and at the same time keeping it free from poisons, Fleischmann's Yeast enables you to eat more, and to get more benefit from the food you eat.

Skin and complexion cleared—Skin troubles are often danger flags of lowered vitality—generally associated with constipation. Fleischmann's Yeast is now established as a food which corrects the basic cause of many disorders of the skin.

That ruddy glow of health, that freedom from such unhealthy skin conditions comes only from perfect health within. Fleischmann's Yeast rids you of these disorders by increasing the number of white corpuscles in the blood and keeping stomach and intestines in a natural, healthy state.
